LOVE-OR FAME?

by VIOLET DARE
Author of "The Half-Time Wife"

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED.

DOROTHY LANE goes to New York to visit PERKINS GRANT and try to break into movies. She meets LAWRENCE FRENCH, a young publicity agent, and through him gets an engagement with JOHN SEWARD, "the great lover of the screen." Seward falls in love with her and asks her to marry him, but she refuses. She quarrels with Lawrence, whom she loves, and accepts the attentions of EIKHORN, a big producer, until they become obnoxious. A reporter comes to see her late one night after she has abruptly left Eikhorn, to tell her that Eikhorn has been boasting of having been her escort, and that John Seward has been wined him in public. He asks why Seward should defend her, and she, touched by Seward's chivalry, replies that she is engaged to him. Frightened by the tangle she has got into, Dorothy decides to give up her career and go home, but early in the morning as she is on her way to the station she meets French, who persuades her to stay, and tells her that he has got an engagement for her with a friend of his who is making a picture in the country, and that she can leave town at once and he will straighten things out for her. She leaves at once, and that night reaches her destination and meets

He was right, of course, and I was so much in love with him that I'd have done anything in the world that he wanted me to. So I promised that I'd give up acting in the movies as soon as we were married, which was to be right away.

But there was another objection to our plans, one that we hadn't expected and couldn't brush aside, that we ran into as soon as we got back to the inn.

"I couldn't sit by and see my wife in the arms of another man."

berries that we ate that day on the side porch of that old inn, with the falls roaring in front of us.

XLII—A CHALLENGE TO FATE.

I KNEW now that I'd always been in love with Lawrence from the first time that I saw him there in the studio. He told me, as we sat there looking at the falls, that he'd been in love with me from the first, too.

that you know something of the motion-picture world you can understand that, can't you? But then, when I realized how much you meant to me, I was scared to death for fear that you would go back home, and I began doing everything I could to get you to stay.

"I'm going back to my first advice now, though," he went on. "I'm going to tell you again to go back home. Only this time it's our home that I want you to go to."

"Why, Larry, do you mean that you want me to leave pictures?" I asked, sitting up straight to stare at him.

"I sure do. Just as fast as you can."

At first that seemed incredible. And even though I had thought, just a few moments before, that I was tired of trying to get along in the movies, and that I'd rather get out of it than do almost anything else, I realized then that it would be terribly hard for me to give up my work.

We talked about it a long time. "I couldn't sit by and see my wife in the arms of another man, even though I do know that it's all just part of the day's work," Larry said. "And to have you argue in the studios, and out till all hours of the night, or away on location—it can't be done, sweetheart. I can support you, and you'll be pretty busy just looking after our home."

Mr. Banning just stared at us for a moment, and then shook his head. "You don't rope me in on that oeremony," he said. "And if my word counts for anything, you'll postpone it for a while. Just stop and think a minute. Miss Lane's got to go on and work in this picture for me, hasn't she? I've depended on her, and it would hardly be right for her to back out, would it?"

"No," he admitted Larry, holding my hand tighter than ever. "It wouldn't."

"Well, that would mean not only that you two couldn't go off on a honeymoon, but it would mean, too, that you'd have to be separated right away. You can't just chuck your job, can you, French? You'll have to get back to New York at once, and you'd be perfectly wretched because you weren't here."

Miss Lane would be just as miserable, and couldn't possibly do her best work for me.

"So why not be sensible? Wait until she's through here; it'll only be six weeks or perhaps two months. You can plan to take your vacation then, and can be looking around for an apartment in New York in the meantime."

He was right, of course, and yet somehow I wished that Larry and I could just have gone ahead and done as we'd planned, without any other person to interfere. Later on how much I wished that we had done just that! I don't believe that it ever pays to postpone your happiness.

Larry and I set up late that night, talking things over. He was to go back to town on a morning train; he'd have to go to Tibaca and change here for New York, so he was to drive back with Mr. Banning, who rest of the company would be on the next day. Mr. Banning had said that we would get to town at once.

BAND PLANS FOR GOOD PROGRAM

An extra heavy program of band music has been arranged for the regular weekly concert of the Douglas County band tomorrow night. The band will feature a number of the standard classical selections and a program well worth hearing will be presented. Because of the chautauqua no program will be given a week from Thursday, but the following Thursday, on the 24th, the band will feature selections from "Robin Hood." The opera will be here on the last day of the chautauqua and the people of Roseburg will have an opportunity to hear the entire opera. On Thursday the favorite selections will be presented by the band.

The program for tomorrow night follows: "March, 'Brooks Triumphant.'" Seltz. Overture "Hungarian Lutspiel," Kela-Bella. Fox Trot, "Home in Pasadena." Chilean Dance "Mannana." Milsud. Waltz, "A Kiss in the Dark," Victor Herbert. Characteristic "In Ole Arkansas," Zimmerman. Fox Trot, "Sittin' in a Corner." Overture, "Stradella." Flowtow. March, "Plaza," Seltzer. "Star Spangled Banner."

AUTO KILLS SMALL GIRL NEAR SALEM

SALEM, Ore., July 9.—Gussie Irene Nelson, 12, was struck and instantly killed by an automobile driven by Miss Nona Hoyt, of Hillsboro, on the Pacific highway at Barlow, 28 miles north of here this morning, according to word brought here shortly after noon by state traffic officer Griffith.

Officer Griffith reported that the little girl was walking south on the left hand side of the pavement and that the onrushing car struck her in the back and carried her 120 feet before being brought to a stop.

The force of the collision caved in the radiator of the machine. Griffith said that he tested the brakes of the machine and found them in perfect order.

OBSTINATE CASE RELIEVED QUICKLY

SAYS KOREX DID MORE THAN EVERYTHING ELSE TRIED IN 5 YEARS.

"For five years I suffered from gland troubles," says Mr. J. Johnson of Dundee, Mississippi, "and could not get much relief, although I underwent three X-ray examinations. Then I tried korex compound and it did me more good than all the treatments I had tried in the 5 years. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Although I am now 50 years old, I feel I am only 25."
