LOVE-OR FAME?

by
VIOLET DARE
Author of "The Half-Time Wife"

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED.

DOROTHY LANE goes to New York to visit a friend and try to break into the movies. She soon gets started, and through the friendship of

LAWRENCE FRENCH, a young publicity man, gets an engagement with JOHN SEWARD, "the great lover of the screen," who falls in love with her and asks her to marry him. However, she carries more for French, but is not sure that he cares for her. She has an unfortunate experience with

EIKHORN, one of the big producers, and decides to go back home and give up her career, when French gets her a part in a picture being made in the country by CARL BANNING. French follows her to the country and proposes to her. Banning persuades them not to be married at once, and French goes back to New York.

XLIV—SIDE LIGHTS ON A STAR.

My part was just a small one: I was Crystal's sister, in the story, and really was just a foil for her. We had a good many scenes together, but of course she had most of the action.

I soon found, though, that she'd a great deal more to her than she could show. John Seward had told me once that there were a good many actors who would do it, and I'd been much amused at the idea. I'd never met any one before who did it, though.

She'd stand so that I had to turn away from the camera to face her, if she could. She always had the exact center of the stage. And she'd manage to focus attention on herself no matter who was supposed to be the important person in the scene. As for close-ups—well, she and her mother got to be a standing joke.

"Don't you think there ought to be a close-up of Baby in that dress, Mr. Banning?" her mother would say. "Oh, Mr. Banning, let's make a close-up of me now, sitting on this old tree." Crystal would beg, clenching the director by the lapels of his coat and smiling up at him.

She had a lot of little tricks that were used to fascinate men, but she used them only for Mr. Banning and for the leading man, Gilbert Gray. She was really quite crazy about him, but her mother would shoo him away from her whenever she saw them together; she was awfully afraid that Crystal would elope with some one who didn't amount to much, and nobody but a big star or a millionaire would have satisfied her as a son-in-law.

We all knew that, of course, so we took a malicious delight in throwing them together. Even Mr. Banning would do it—which led to my having my big chance in pictures—and to my just about losing my life by taking it.

It was on a gorgeous day, very clear and warm, and with no wind at all—a perfect day for picture making. And we were to shoot some very important scenes.

Mrs. May quivered things at the very start, however. We were working at the top of the falls, in a beautiful little, grassy place, with some big rocks around that gave a most picturesque effect. There were two beautiful trees, too, that framed a wonderful view of the valley below the falls, and Mr. Banning wanted to get a love scene there between Crystal and Gilbert Gray, with the valley showing in the distance. The day was so clear that Gilbert, the camera man, was sure he could get it.

But Mrs. May was determined that the valley should be used only as a background for Crystal.

"It would make such a marvelous

Nobody but a millionaire would have satisfied her as a son-in-law.

poster, Mr. Banning," she insisted. "Just have her standing there, looking off to one side with that beautiful yearning expression of hers"—she used to label her daughter's expressions as if they'd been different-colored frocks—"and you'll have a picture that will get you publicity anywhere."

"Yes, I realize that, but I prefer to use it as a background for the big love scene, Mrs. May," Mr. Banning told her politely, and turned away to consult with the camera man about the angle from which they'd shoot it. Mrs. May followed him, however.

"Two figures won't fit in half as well as just one will, Mr. Banning," she urged. "And Crystal in her little white dress would be perfect there."

"If we need only one figure I'll use Gilbert there, Mrs. May," Banning told her. "Somebody laughed at that, which of course made her perfectly furious, and she went sputtering away to the rocky nook where Crystal was touching up her make-up."

She talked very hard to the girl, and finally, when Crystal got up and came over to where Mr. Banning was, we all knew that she had persuaded her daughter to try her wiles on the director.

"Oh, Mr. Banning," gurgled Crystal, clinging to his arm—he had the continuity in that hand, and any one could have seen that she bothered him—"can't I please have this lovely background all to myself? Honest, Mr. Banning, I've just always dreamed of having my picture taken some day with a wonderful background like that, and big trees over me—it's been my dearest dream, Mr. Banning. And now—"

"Ready for the scene!" Mr. Banning cut in. "Come on, Gilbert. Now, Crystal, step over there and just run through this in a hurry, till I see if you have it right."

—An Unwelcome Opportunity.

LEGION PICNIC ON NEXT SUNDAY

Members of Umpqua Post of the American Legion and of the auxiliary are looking forward to the big Legion picnic to be held on next Sunday at Horton's Grove. This picnic is to be one of the biggest events of its kind ever undertaken by the post and everyone attending is assured of a good time.

Legionnaires and the ladies are asked to be at the armory promptly at 11:30 a. m. on Sunday. Trucks and cars are being procured to transport all to the picnic grounds. Persons going in their own cars and having room for more are asked to be at the armory with their machines at the hour of 11:30.

"Eats" are to be served at 1:30 p. m. The post is furnishing ice cream, baked beans, lemonade and pickles. Sandwiches, cakes and other articles of food desired by the picnickers must be furnished by themselves.

The sports committee promises an afternoon full of entertainment. A horsehoe pitching tourney has been arranged and a baseball game is scheduled, under an indoor baseball so that the ladies may participate. The river at Horton's Grove affords a fine place for bathing. Many other sports and contests will be arranged and the Legion men and the ladies are anticipating a day of great enjoyment.

A BANQUET THAT WAS ALMOST A TRAGEDY

"Three years ago at a banquet I was stricken with acute indigestion. Two doctors worked over me for an hour before I came to. I had had severe colic attacks before, but nothing like that. No doctors or medicine gave me permanent help until a friend, who was at the banquet, advised me to take a course of May's Wonderful Remedy, which I did with wonderful results." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.
