Los Angeles Guests Inspire Round of Entertaining

Mrs. Carrie Christie and daughter, Miss Alberta Christie, who are charming visitors here from Los Angeles, have been the inspiration for a round of formal and informal events since their arrival here. Mrs. Christie and daughter made their home in Roseburg for several years, and Miss Christie attended school here. They are the house guests of Mrs. Christie's sister Dr. Lucetta Smith, and are renewing their acquaintance with many old friends here.

Mrs. Christie, Miss Christie, and Dr. Smith, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Abrahams early in the week, and on Tuesday evening Mrs. C. C. Alley was dinner hostess to Mrs. Christie, Dr. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perry, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stanton.

Other hostesses entertaining informally during the week for the visitors were Miss Alice Mahn, Mrs. Howard Church, and Mrs. Carl Wimbler.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Anderson and daughter, Dorothy, of Los Angeles, Cal., are guests in Roseburg of Mr. Anderson's sister, Mrs. N. G. Michael. Mrs. Michael will accompany them on to Tacoma where they will visit with relatives.

Saturday evening, Mrs. Warner and Mrs. Wallace Brownson invited a number of young people from the south end of the county to the dance hall on the Brownson place honoring the Misses Eckels. A group of Winston young people who motored to Myrtle Creek for the dance included Dorothy, Kenneth and Norma Winston, Thelma and Dale Smith, and Elizabeth Renner.

THEATRES

Liberty Theatre

"A Girl of the Limberlost," the attraction at the Liberty Theatre, is a picture that is an inspiring story of the life worth while. Adapted from the novel by Gene Stratton-Porter, it brings to the screen all the riches and beauty of this widely read outdoor romance.

The scenes of the book made famous by the word painting of the author are now revealed on the screen, interwoven with a romance whose pathos and tender sentiment will make the picture as well remembered as the original book story.

Romance and beauty supplemented by artistic settings, photography that is delightfully beautiful, and players who are admirably chosen for their parts and who do everything that could be desired with the roles assigned to them—all of these things combine to make "A Girl of the Limberlost" a picture that is worth going to see.

"A Girl of the Limberlost" which opens its local engagement at the Liberty theatre, will continue there by Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Antlers Theatre

The famous English novelist tells the public what she had in mind in writing "Three Weeks," which was a sensational success upon its publication and which has now been made into a screen play by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. The film version has been booked at the Antlers theatre for three days, beginning Sunday.

As it is now more than 13 years ago that the book "Three Weeks" was written, we can talk calmly about it, because in the beginning, and indeed for many a long day afterwards, the prejudice it aroused in the minds of the critics and a large section of the public, would not have permitted any discussion. However, I believe now that that splendid sense of American justice will give me a fair hearing, so—you who read—please listen patiently to what I—who wrote the book—have to say about it! Because a work that has sold in its millions, and still has a circulation of about fifty thousand copies a year, must have had some effect upon humanity. It has been translated into most European languages, and from all those foreign countries I have received honor and praise for it. Only in the English-speaking communities has it been misunderstood.

I wrote it for two reasons, the first being to prove the effect of a great love upon a man's character in opening his eyes to the fine in everything; the second, to explain the laws of cause and effect, and to show that each of us pays the price or receives the reward of every action committed, whether it be good or evil.

Paul was just a young Englishman of the upper classes, of ordinary education—and of whom there were thousands before the war in every class. Circumstances, and long years of peace, had not given them the stimulant to awaken their imagination to the meaning of things. They were just dear, honest, good-looking boys, who never had speculated as to why they were on earth, nor what they were meant to accomplish there.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by MRS. ELLSBURY
(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am 23 years old. When I was about 18 I was engaged to a boy that I knew in high school. We were both seniors. It was just a boy and girl affair, and when we graduated he went away to work, and we broke it off. We wrote several times. That has been about four years ago, and he is back in town again now. I haven't seen him yet, but know that he inquired after me from one of my friends. Would it be proper for me to call him up and ask him to call, or invited him to dinner?

KATHLEEN: It would be quite proper for you to ask him to call, or invite him to dinner, but would suggest that you wait until you see him.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I have two girls visiting me, and as they don't know anyone here would it be all right for me to ask two boys that I know to take them to a dance? I have a boy friend who would take me.

MERLE: Yes. Why not have the boys up to dinner first so that they may become acquainted with the girls?

THE MORNING FROCK; DON'T BE SLOPPY GIRLS

By HEDDA HOYT
NEW YORK, N. Y., July 18.—Women of large cities are apt to know very little about morning frocks. Most of them slump in their apartments in last season's dinner gown, covered by a gingham apron.

No woman looks well in the early morning cleaning up the results of last night's bridge party, in a dilapidated frock with decollete lines and minus portions of its headwork.

How much better a sweet little gingham house-dress looks about the home. One can choose many lovely light colors which can't be worn discriminately on the streets.

Pre-shrunk linens, gingham, flowered cretonnes, voiles and cotton crepes are all materials suitable for the housefrock, the newest of which are made on dress lines rather than apron lines. Many women make their house-dresses themselves, using a simple straight-lined pattern which requires but two side-seams. Necklines are cut round and sleeves are short and a sash belt is placed at a low waist-line. Pockets may be added on the sides and white organdy or linen collars tend to take away the apron appearance.

It is nice to have at least four of these dresses, choosing each dress of a different shade. Yellow and white checked gingham is always pretty about the house and gets away from the popular pink or blue color-scheme which most women seem to prefer. Brown and white checked gingham is also neat in appearance and holds its color well in laundering.

The house-dress of today is not supposed to look like a house-dress. It has the fit and lines of the street frock. One can run to the corner grocery without creating any excitement whatsoever in the modern working woman.

The woman who does no heavy work will find voiles in pastel shades lovely for house-wear, as they are cool and launder well. Cotton-crepe is also a good material, as it is easily ironed, or may be worn without ironing.

Little aprons of cretonne may be worn over the house-dress of plain colored material. The rubberized aprons which come in colors are also lovely for housework. One may match the apron with the frock, if one so desires.

Used the Wrong System

Those present at the Chautauqua meeting Wednesday night saw a proposition to guarantee a return engagement go down to defeat, largely because Ellison White have not seen fit to promote the sale of the engagement. North Bend people turned down the Chautauqua for next year, but it was not because it was not wanted, all that lacked to put it over was a little encouragement from the management. Busy people are not inclined to leave their work to boost another's game.—Coco Bay Harbor.

THE MORNING FROCK; DON'T BE SLOPPY GIRLS

worn over the house-frock of plain colored material. The rubberized aprons which come in colors are also lovely for housework. One may match the apron with the frock, if one so desires.

New Sports Coat

At a nearby resort I saw, for the first time, cretonne used as a sports coat. Over a white silk skirt and white silk blouse a colorful cretonne jacket was worn. There were no sleeves in this jacket and it was bound about the edges in plain color. The jacket opened up the front with lapels as a neck finish.

Nothing could be more suitable for a traveling dress than a smart cape-back dress with long sleeves. The cape-dress combination will be found cooler than the suit for summer travel and, at the same time, has the tailored appearance demanded for travel. Small checked materials are admirable for traveling purposes as they do not show the dust as do plain dark colors.

Sweaters are passe, and in their place are sweater blouses, which are made of cotton or silk material and fashioned on the slip-on sweater lines. These are much cooler than wool sweaters, launder well and fit into the niche left vacant by the ousted sweater.

With the summer frock are carried little flowered taffeta handbags with the design of the flowers outlined in steel beads. These are gathered about the top with a narrow grosgrain ribbon.

Several younger girls appeared last week with their wristwatches attached to white grosgrain ribbon instead of the popular gray or black ribbon. For white frocks the white ribbon about the wrist seems quite appropriate.

Large straw hats of inexpensive type may be made very lovely by tacking them with flowered chiffon on the under brim.

Has Some Reputation

LONDON, July 19.—British officials today confirmed the death of Major Robert Imbrie, American vice-consul in charge at Teheran, Persia, who, it was stated, was attacked by a fanatical mob yesterday morning while photographing a public fountain in company with another American named Seymour.

Major Imbrie died during the afternoon while Seymour, whom it was impossible to identify further, was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

Cornfield at Teheran, Persia, said that vice-consul, Robert Imbrie died from shock at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon after having been brutally kicked and beaten by a mob. The vice-consul and Melvin Seymour, also an American, had stopped their carriage to watch a religious demonstration in the city, the message said and were rushed by a mob, who mistook them for members of a sect known as the Bahais, against which the demonstration was directed.

Seymour's condition was said to be so serious as a result of the beating he received that he had been unable to make any statement.

MAN THOUGHT DEAD WILL PROSECUTE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SHARPSBURG, Ga., July 19.—His altercation with Oliver Cameron, 22 years ago, near Birmingham, Alabama, which caused Cameron, in a fit of remorse to attempt to drown himself in Portland, Ore., recently believing that he had killed his neighbor, still is fresh in the mind of W. J. Gay, despite his 81 years of age.

"He shot me three times in the back and then ran away," Gay said at his home today, explaining that the trouble arose over the purchase by Gay of some property from Cameron in Broyles, near Birmingham, in 1902. Cameron shot him, Gay said, without provocation and added he is willing and anxious to prosecute the charge of assault with intent to murder which he filed against Cameron after the affair.
