CAMPAINING FOR DOUBTFUL STATES.

It has been considered in former years as an important principle in politics, that candidates for president and vice-president should come if possible from one of the big doubtful states. As most of the states were pretty sure for many years to vote the same way year after year, not many of the states were then considered doubtful. It was regarded as a good political card to play for these large states whose verdict was uncertain. As a result New York, Ohio, and Indiana, which were uncertain in their alignment, have had more than their normal share of candidates. Today here is not the same dependability in politics, and the list of doubtful states has become very extended. If a party tries to appeal to just one or two states by picking presidential and vice-presidential candidates from those commonwealths, it may neglect large sections whose action is equally uncertain. John W. Davis, named by the democrats for president, might be considered as a New York man now, as he is connected with a New York law firm. Yet one thinks of him as a West Virginia man, the state where his home was up to the time he went into the public service. West Virginia has never been one of the big doubtful states for which the politicians played. So Massachusetts is usually republican, and that party dropped the tradition of nominating favorite sons of doubtful states when it named a Massachusetts man. Gen. Dawes and Gov. Bryan come from states usually republican, so again the custom is dropped. It well that the two parties are picking men on the idea that they will make a general appeal to the whole country, rather than that they will be influential in swaying certain big doubtful states where they live. New York, Ohio, and Indiana may get fewer candidates, but their people and those of Oregon want the ablest men elected regardless of where they live.

Twenty years ago the American people spent a considerable portion of their time during the hot weather in sitting on their porches. The women folks did a large part of the mending and sewing there, as well as making it the center for calls and conversation. The men too, enjoyed their evening hour in their piazza chair. The young people gathered to sing, and much jolly life centered on the front porch. Many people who used to be satisfied with the ease of a rocking chair, are not pleased now unless they are burning gasoline and eating up the miles at the rate of 30 or more miles per hour. There are benefits in this stimulating motion. But the old time neighborhood gatherings on the front porch were refreshing after their simple way, and should not be wholly given up. The human body was not built solely for motion. It also needs its periods of calm.

It is easy for people to walk with an alert and springy step when the tang of winter is in the air, but not so much when the heats of summer come on. Many people who in other seasons have a good erect carriage, will slump down and bend over in summer, as the result of fatigue and weariness due to heat. Physiologists will say that the results of stooping posture are bad. Admonitions to people to stand up straight are needed, and yet exceedingly difficult to remember constantly and obey. Probably more is accomplished when people take for a few minutes each day a well considered course of exercise, by which the back is straightened and the muscles reinforced. This should help them stand up straight unconsciously, without thinking about it.

FUTURE PROGRAM

The Roseburg Chamber of Commerce in the first six months of its reorganization has accomplished some real things, things that are of benefit to the city and county. Secretary Holbein this morning gave the following information that should make the members of the organization feel more than willing to continue to support it in a handsome manner the Chamber of Commerce. Some of the outstanding things mentioned were the following.

Cooperated with the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce in furnishing the home products dinner to a large number of railroad and publicity men at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, on the evening of March 12th, Umpqua Valley broccoli being furnished for the bill of fare.

The Chamber published a folder advertising the broccoli industry that had wide circulation and brought favorable notice to Roseburg and Douglas county.

Assisted the Roseburg Rod and Gun Club in getting out 10,000 folders advertising the hunting and fishing in Douglas County, and cooperated with the club in staging their splendid exhibit at the Oregon Outdoor Life Exposition at Portland in February.

Secured a moving picture film of the broccoli industry in the Umpqua Valley. Copies of this film will be furnished different agencies that will show it on the screen in various sections of the county.

Conducted a campaign of selling Roseburg to Roseburg people, through "Do You Know That" publicity.

Secured from the Secretary of State a registration bureau for non-resident tourists, whereby the Chamber is getting in touch with a large number of people from other states that are becoming interested in this part of Oregon. Thus far nearly 1000 of these tourists have registered at the Chamber office and have been furnished with literature of this part of the country and road maps for their guidance in making side trips that will keep them in this region several days longer.

Organized a Chamber of Commerce at Drain.

With the assistance of the Boy Scouts a survey of the city was taken, and a classified list of the business and professional men secured.

A committee from the Chamber of Commerce completed the stock sale for the enlargement of the Umpqua Valley Cannery Company's plant.

The Chamber took charge of Booth Bridge dedication that brought thousands of people from all over the state to this city and vicinity.

Cooperated with the stock men of this county in demanding a strict quarantine against the foot and mouth disease in California.

Cooperated with the Umpqua Chiefs in raising the funds necessary to put over the successful Strawberry Carnival in May.

Assisted in organizing the Elkton Chamber of Commerce.

Assisted in organizing the Glendale Chamber of Commerce.

Assisted in re-organizing the Myrtle Creek Commercial Club.

Organized the Douglas County Chamber of Commerce.

Took charge of the campaign for financing of the North Umpqua highway project through the County Court of Douglas County.

There are many other smaller accomplishments that were handled in the usual routine way, and which do not seem of importance enough separately to mention, while in the aggregate they would make a fine showing. Perhaps one of the most important things that the Chamber has done during the past six months has been the sufficient thing that ought to be done. There are still a number of Roseburg men that do not belong to the organization that ought to identify themselves with it so that more accomplishments could be made possible. The Chamber has spent over $100 in postage alone to send out letters and literature in answer to the many inquiries that have come into the office, and this expenditure has resulted in the bringing to this city at least twenty-seven new settlers from other states, while at least twenty families from other parts of Oregon have moved into the county during the past few months. At the present time publicity is being arranged for through the Chamber's efforts, and within a few weeks it is expected that a new booklet will go to press that will be the last word in data about the county. Every industry in the county will be covered in this new publicity, and a large number of excellent engravings

JACK DEMPSEY HURT IN AUTO SMASH-UP

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Jack Dempsey's famous right arm, the one that has contributed so heavily to his world heavyweight pugilistic crown, is out of commission following an automobile accident last night, according to attending physicians.

The fighters list of injuries received in the automobile smash-up near San Juan capistrano, south of here, include: dislocated right elbow; strained ligaments in neck; abrasions on right knee; cut on scalp.

Dempsey will be confined to his room for several days, the physicians said. The champion admits that he escaped by a "miracle" when his heavy sedan, carrying himself and two or three friends, was side-swiped by a speeding motorist who left going after he had tilted the Dempsey car from the highway into the ditch.

"It was winners luck, that's all," Dempsey remarked.

The party in the wrecked automobile including a man and woman who gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Lee, were taken to the Santa Anna hospital and later came on to Los Angeles.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, was bruised and shaken up in an automobile accident early today at Santa Ana, near here, according to reports at that city. The accident occurred while Dempsey was enroute to a moving picture location with Miss Florence Lee, film actress, who also was slightly injured. Three others in the party were uninjured.

MEN ARRESTED; BOOZE STOLEN

V. V. Heibig and J. R. Blaylock, charged with possession of intoxicating liquor, were arrested Sunday morning by Night Officer Raymond Rausch and are being held under $100 bail to appear for trial on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, after entering a plea of not guilty to the charge. The liquor, which the officer says he took off the two defendants, was stolen from the city hall shortly after the arrest occurred.

The night officer halted the two men as they were driving on Jackson street early Sunday morning. He states that he took two pint bottles from the men, and then went with them to the city hall where he put the bottles in the recorder's office. They arranged for bail in the sum of $100 each and were allowed their liberty. Not desiring to carry the $200 in his pocket the officer went to the Umpqua Hotel to put the money in the safe there, and while he was away, some person succeeded in entering the recorder's office, and removed the two bottles, so that

The evidence is now being held in the city hall. The men appeared in court and entered a plea of not guilty and will stand trial.
