WOMAN JUMPS OFF VANCOUVER BRIDGE

VANCOUVER, Wash., July 21.—Mrs. Julia Brankamp, 60, Portland, attempted suicide last night by jumping 60 feet from the Interstate bridge. She was rescued after floating nearly a mile. At the county jail it was found she had dislocated her shoulder. She was removed to a hospital. Expressing a desire to walk across the bridge, she left the automobile in which she was riding with her son-in-law, M. H. Peterson. She leaped from the operating room on the draw. After having been in the water 27 minutes she was taken into a boat by S. E. Padde and a companion.

Albany's fire losses in the last week have totaled about $25,000.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

DISCUSSES CONVENTION

Oakland, July 21, 1924.

Editor News-Review:

Kindly allow me the space to discuss the democratic convention.

The people had expressed their choice for president in William Gibbs McAdoo by vote which was ignored by the convention and John W. Davis was nominated. Although Davis was as well known as McAdoo he was never thought of as a choice outside of a very small circle of one or two states. Unlike Calvin Coolidge who was the qualified choice of the republican party, Davis accepted the nomination knowing that McAdoo was the qualified choice of the democratic party.

As a democrat I feel that my party has been taken advantage of and abused to the limit by a class of people who have no good will or loyalty for the party, and are using it to further their selfish desire, and by intrigue and double crossing have lowered the estimate of the great party that has been the dependence and pride of our 50,000,000 loyal people of our nation. And now comes the question, why and how was it done?

It was done by Wall street and in order for the reader to fully understand my article I will explain what Wall street is. It is the organized banking element of our nation that desires to control our money.

Money is their issue, and they propose to be the absolute dictators of the monetary system. They care very little for railroad or tariff legislation as the harder times are the greater interest they can extract from business. They welcome religious disputes and K. K. K. agitation merely to agitate the people into a frenzy, and lead them to forget the money issue so as to leave them masters of the situation.

Wall street dominated the convention through Alfred Smith. Smith never expected to be nominated or elected. They wanted Coolidge for president and the only way he could be elected was to defeat McAdoo. The beautiful oration of Franklin D. Roosevelt was made for Coolidge. The game was to nominate a candidate a candidate who would divide the party and let Coolidge in. I do not question the fitness or ability of John W. Davis. He is a good man, fully qualified in every way, but he is not the choice of the democratic party, and therefore cannot be elected. The same tactics have been carried through the state's in primary nominating elections. Nearly every democratic banker is in primary nominating elections. They will stand at his back, and they have double crossed the party and thrown their organized power to nominate the weakest candidate—the candidate that could not draw the farmer and independent vote—in order that the republican will be elected.

How was it done? No voter will admit that he was influenced by the banker, but you will admit that you were not very well read on the election issue and were undecided and you met a friend who knew all about it, and posted you on all of the best candidates, and you were so glad to be informed that you told your other friends how best to vote. You must admit that you have a great respect for your banker's judgment. Next your confidence goes to your priest and beggarman, thief.

THREE HOMES BURN; TOWN THREATENED

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

EUGENE, Ore., July 21.—Fire which destroyed two homes in Waltherville, 15 miles from Eugene on the McKenzie highway, late yesterday threatened for a time to destroy the entire village, according to word reaching here today. Practically every home in the town was on fire from flying sparks, according to reports, and only prompt work of volunteer fire fighters kept the flames from further damage.

The homes of John Vaughn and Matt Munnings were destroyed, and a third residence was partially burned.

LOVE-OR FAME?

by VIOLET DARE

Author of "The Half-Time Wife"

(C. E. Spence, Market Agent)

Tons of Bing and other varieties of cherries have dried down on the trees in the Willamette valley because the growers found it unprofitable to pick them, while the retail price in the cities was eight and ten cents per pound.

Ring cherries in the Salem district netted the growers two to two and one-half cents per pound while in Chicago, Milwaukee and other mid-west cities these same cherries retailed at from 40 to 50 cents per pound. A Villamette grower expressed a shipment to Milwaukee and the express charges were $4.95 cents per hundred, or practically five cents per pound. There you have the system. Ten times the cost of production between the producer and the middle-west consumer, and the middle interests who take this great profit toll never invested a cent in the industry.

Like many other farm products, cherries come all at once; the producers dump because they have to and the market is glutted. This frames a situation whereby the middle interests make big profits, while growers get hardly enough to warrant damage to trees by picking.

If there was a thoroughly organized and tight co-operative shipping association, the growers could take the place of those fruit dealers and speculators and make the profits that are now made off of them. They could have arranged for markets long before the crop was picked, could have distributed them to the various parts of the country where most demanded, in orderly distribution; prevented the excessive supply in home markets and received fair profit prices.

The cherry situation but illustrates the farm situation generally. The farmers produce that others may make profits from their products. On an average two dollars are added to every dollar the farmer gets when the products are finally retailed. There is ample room in this price spread for living profits to growers and lower prices to consumers. With both classes organized this change can be made.

Grain dealers are offering one dollar per bushel for No. 1 wheat in eastern Oregon, but farmers are not signing contracts to any great extent at this price, they believing that the market price will be higher than this figure. With the Northwest Wheat Growers' Association suspending operations, farmers are hunting their own markets this season. The Association controlled too small a part of the wheat to be a dominate marketing factor and now it will let the growers find their own markets for a season, or until such time as enough will cooperate to make the association a real price-determining organization.

An international co-operative institute is under way by all of the farm organizations and co-operative organizations, and the plans are to hold it about a year hence. A call has been issued by the permanent committee for a general meeting to be held in Cleveland, August 11-15, this year, for the preliminary work of canvassing the entire cooperative field, its successes and problems, and working out a comprehensive program. More and more farm leaders realize that they must be their own saviors; that their business as the other big industries of the nation do if agriculture is to survive.

Last year the U. S. imported $429,265,000 from Canada and that country reciprocated by buying back $586,532,000 from us, each country believing it was getting more for its money by the transaction.

Canada has a population of 9,000,000 and 119,000 traveling salesmen. At an average of $12 per day, wages and expenses for each salesman, it costs the country $1,908,000 per day to sell its goods. This proportion is said to be far larger in this country. This is one of the big overhead expenses that is passed onto the consumer and taken from the producer. If half of the salesmen of the country was eliminated, very few would ever miss them.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED.

DOROTHY LANE goes to New York to visit a friend and try to break into the movies. She soon gets started, and through the friendship of

LAWRENCE FRENCH, a young publicity man, gets an engagement with

JOHN REWARD, "the great lover of the screen," who falls in love with her and asks her to marry him. However, she cares more for French, but is not sure that he cares for her. She has an unfortunate experience with

EIKHORN, one of the big producers, and decides to go back home and give up her career, when French gets her a part in a picture being made in the country by

CARL BANNING. French follows her to the country and proposes to her. Banning persuades them not to be married at once, and French goes back to New York. The star of the production, CRYSTAL MAY, does all that she can to make things unpleasant for Dorothy. Crystal refuses to do a dangerous leap, and Banning gives that scene to Dorothy. Dorothy realizes that it will mean a great deal to her career if she does it, and goes through with it, though she is much frightened. Later she learns that Crystal has insisted on having that scene cut out.

LII—A TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT.

CRYSTAL MAY seemed to be in high spirits, and all through supper she'd look over from the little table where she and her mother ate and make fun of me.

"You ought to remember the old saying, 'Look before you leap,' before you try it again, Dorothy," she sneered at me as she left the room at last.

That was just the last straw. But before I could think of anything to say back to her Janet Powers retorted: "Yes—and you ought to think before you tell who's backing you, Crystal. Sweet little innocents with curls ought to be discreet."

That set off a perfect storm. Crystal stalked out of the room in a blaze of wrath, and her mother stamped up and down the veranda till Janet and I came out, and then jumped on Janet, calling her all sorts of names. She was a perfect old fury. People said she'd been down till there was hardly anything left of it, and as I sat on the side lines day after day, all made up with the sun making the grease paint on my face melt and run, I told myself that I'd been a perfect idiot not to go back to New York and let the old picture go hang.

I'd had a telegram from Larry in answer to mine. It just said: "Sorry—we'll make up for it later—we'll try to see you before I go; too busy to write."

But I hadn't much hope that he'd come. And as the days dragged by, hotter and hotter, and Crystal and her mother got more and more disagreeable to me, I hardly seemed to live.

Every one said that the stage star with whom Larry was going to the Coast was perfectly wonderful. Men were always falling in love with her, but she was such a charming person, sort of like Ethel Barrymore, that even the women could understand it. And the novelist who was going along was a wonderful person, very witty and awfully interesting. It was convinced that Larry would have such a marvelous time with them that he wouldn't want to come back and settle down with any one as humdrum as I was.
