CHAS. WARREN TO ACT IN CAMPAIGN

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Arrival here of Charles B. Warren, retiring ambassador to Mexico and chairman of the platform committee at the republican national convention, has revived speculation as to the part he will take in the republican campaign.

Mr. Warren after a brief stop over at his home in Detroit, came to Washington to surrender formally his commission as ambassador to Mexico, but it was understood that as a White House guest opportunity would be afforded for conferences of a political nature between him and the president. It has been assumed generally among republican leaders here that Mr. Warren would be requested to take a prominent part in the campaign because of his experience as national committeeman in Michigan for a number of years and because of his work as leader of the platform builders at Cleveland.

The Luxury of Love

by VIOLET DARE

AUTHOR OF "The Half-Time Wife", "Love or Fame?" ETC.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED.

MARY HAYWARD, a famous beauty, arrives at the country home of CAMILLA WAITE with two men, BRUCE GILLIAN and STEWART O'BRIEN.

II—"NO POACHING."

"Oh there you are, dear!" Camilla's words evidently were for Mary, but her eyes were fixed on the two men. "So awfully glad you could come, Bruce. You, too, Stewart."

VIOLET DARE

As they were introduced to her, Mary held out her hand laughingly, saying, "They already know me as a most disagreeable person—don't you?" looking up at Bruce Gillian.

He bent low over her hand.

"As an authority on boxing, you mean—I wish you'd tell me how you happened to know so much about the Dempsey-Firpo bout."

"Oh, I saw it with—with a man who knew," she answered, and glanced quickly away. He said nothing, but Stewart O'Brien lifted his eyebrows quizzically. The fame of Mary Hayward had reached him while he was still in Europe; her beauty, her fascination, her pressing need of money, had been topics of conversation in London drawing-rooms ever since her debut. So now here she was. He looked her over appraisingly. Beautiful she certainly was, with her tawny hair, wide gray eyes and slim, exquisitely rounded figure. He liked her clothes, too, and the way she wore them. Yes, decidedly, she was a wife for a rich man. Well, perhaps he'd marry her! And Stewart O'Brien, appropriately nicknamed "Stewed," lounged back in the seat beside Mary, watching her as she stripped the gloves from her long, slender hands.

She glanced up, and met not his eyes, but Gillian's. She caught her breath sharply, but could not look away. Never had a man's soul looked at her from his eyes as did this man's. She knew that marry whom she would, her heart would never let her forget him.

And Gillian, reading the truth in her glance, did not dare believe it. Throughout the rest of the drive he wondered about her. Later, while they were dressing for the tennis match on which O'Brien insisted, the latter tried to enlighten him.

"Queer the lovely Hayward hasn't married at least once, isn't it?" he began. "She's famous as a beauty, you know—or rather, you probably don't know, coming from the dim, far West as you do."

"Oh, girls aren't so eager to marry nowadays," was the answer. Gillian resented O'Brien's evident desire to gossip.

"She is. Brought up by an old aunt, who groomed her for the marriage market, she became engaged shortly after her debut to Neale Phillips, one of the wealthiest men in the country. I've been abroad so long that I've forgotten the details, but there was some sort of scandal, and Phillips was found dead in his rooms one morning; had been shot during the night. A woman had been seen leaving his rooms, and people suspected Mary Hayward, of course, but as it happened, she was staying up here at the time, with Camilla. Had a perfect alibi. The thing died down gradually, but didn't help her any. However, lots of men have been crazy about her—"

"Don't happen to have an ankle brace in your luggage anywhere, do you?" Gillian spoke casually, but there could be no doubt of his meaning. He did not care to listen to O'Brien's rehashed scandal any longer. The latter gave a long, low whistle, laughed softly, and replied: "No, I hardly think so." To himself he said, "So Gillian doesn't want to hear what the tattlers say about Lovely Mary. Wonder if he's fallen for her at first sight."

"Lovely Mary," as she had been nicknamed when she first came out, was at that moment listening to a bit of gossip herself, as she changed from her traveling frock to sports clothes. Camilla, seated on Mary's bed, was retailing it.

"Bruce is a great catch, my dear.

"Bruce is a great catch, my dear."

and I've marked him for mine own, so no poaching!" She spoke lightly, but Mary, watching her friend's reflection in the mirror, knew that there was real feeling behind the words. "I met him at the Newtons' dinner dance two weeks ago—pity you weren't there; it was a charming party—and he's been rushing me madly ever since. I think he's stunning, don't you?"

Mary knew what was expected of her; she was deeply in Camilla's debt, and must play the role assigned her. "Yes, he's one of those homely men who are better looking than the handsomest ones that walk the earth," she answered. "And of course he's wild about you; anybody could see that." To herself she added, "You hypocrite!"

"Well, of course, he does like me, rather," drawled Camilla complacently. "That's why I didn't ask the other guests to come till tomorrow; I thought we'd just have a nice little foursome by ourselves—you and Stewed and Bruce and I; my dear, I'm crazy about the man!" she concluded, in a burst of confidence.

And Lovely Mary, watching her, sighed. That one single glance that passed from Bruce Gillian's blue eyes to hers had told her his heart had not yet been given into Camilla's keeping. And Mary, remembering it, wondered. Could it be that this big, broad-shouldered, handsome-homely man from out of the West came to her with her fate in his hands? Was the luxury of love to be denied her now, when it was offered at last? She shuddered, remembering a night two years ago, when she had come running to Camilla for protection, and been sheltered, guarded against the ugly tongue of scandal. No, if Camilla wanted the man and could get him, she must play fair though it broke her heart.

FATHER SEARCHING FOR RUNAWAY SON

H. B. Parrent, of Powers, Oregon, was in Roseburg yesterday searching for his son Herbert Parrent, aged 11, who ran away from his home at Powers Wednesday. He left Powers with another boy, Den Downing, aged 12, who lived near the Parrent home. It was at first thought that the boys were drowned, and citizens of Powers searched the river near there where the boys were accustomed to swim, but later heard that they had been seen near Camas Valley and had been given a ride in that direction by a passing motorist. It is believed that they may be near Camas Valley or Dillard, as the Parrent family formerly lived at Camas Valley, and the boys had talked of Dillard, and the watermelon patches there. They may also have gone on to Albany.

Herbert Parrent is the larger of the two boys, and is wearing a blue serge cap, light shirt, and overalls. The Downing boy is attired in overalls, shirt, and a tan hat. Both boys are barefotted. Anyone seeing or hearing of these boys are requested to notify Sheriff Starmer at Roseburg, or H. B. Parrent at Powers.

Everybody Worked But Father

"Father's stomach trouble seemed to be getting worse all the time and finally he had to quit work altogether. Two brothers and myself gave up school and went to work to support the family. Father had lost sixty pounds in weight and was yellow as saffron and no medicine helped him. Telling a friend about it six months ago, she advised taking Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I got a bottle and it helped father at once. He was able to go back to work a month later, has regained his weight and strength and eats like a wood chopper." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists.

SUGAR TARIFF IS GIVEN PRESIDENT

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The question of revising the sugar tariff schedules have been put up to President Coolidge after more than a year and a half of investigation by the tariff commission.

The commission's findings completion of which Senator La Follette, independent candidate for president recently charged was being opposed by representatives of "the sugar interests," were submitted yesterday to the president, who alone is empowered under the law to proclaim revision of the rates, up or down to the extent of 50 percent.

The results of the inquiry which has embraced production in Cuba and elsewhere, were not announced.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by MRS. ELLSBURY

(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: Are all the girls nowadays flappers? I am 30 years old, and have lately got enough money that I could get married. So I started to go out more, and meet girls, and the result has so astonished me that I thought I would write and ask you what you thought about it. I have been out of touch with young people so long that I wasn't prepared for what I found. All they seem to think about is a good time, and laughing about something. Isn't there any place where I could find an old-fashioned girl?

MODERN MAN.

MODERN MAN: So Modern Man wants an Old Fashioned Girl does he? I have no patience with anybody who uses the word flapper to condemn the young girls of today. Don't start out by looking for an ideal, if you found her, or thought you did, you would only be disillusioned later when you discovered she was human too. I know many, many girls today that you might call a flapper, but I would call fine, sweet old fashioned girls that any man should be proud to call his wife. What if they do roll their nose, like to go to parties, or dances, and have a good time? All young people are entitled to a good time, and I expect you like a dance now and then yourself. If you will take the trouble to know them and go below the surface you will find the same fine qualities that have made good wives and mothers since the world began. You should be thankful for the "laughing" as you call it. It is a gift that most of us sigh for, it will keep you young, and meet the trials of life with the same gay song. Try again, but change your attitude this time.

OREGON WILL GET FAIR PRIZE MONEY

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—A total of nearly $22,000 in special prizes will be awarded this year at the leading district, state and national exhibitions of Holstein cattle in the United States by the Holstein-Friesian association of America. These prizes are offered in addition to those to be awarded by the fair associations.

The Oregon state fair, Salem, September 22 to 27, will receive $253.30 of this money and the Pacific International Livestock show North Portland, November 1 to 8, $15,000 on the general classification of Holsteins exhibited. Provisions also have been made for awarding cash prizes to boys and girls exhibiting Holstein calf club calves.

INDEPENDENTS TO START SEPTEMBER 1

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The national campaign in support of the independent progressive ticket headed by Senator La Follette as presidential nominee and Senator Wheeler as vice-presidential candidate, organization leaders asserted today will be in full swing by September 1. The setting up of a campaign and electoral machinery for the entirely new enterprise which has received wide attention to date will have progressed by that time, leaders said, to the point where a direct appeal may be made effectively to the voters, led by the candidates themselves.

Members of the national executive committee plan to select a director of publicity shortly.

TO NOTIFY DAVIS ON AUGUST 10TH

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—His calendar clear of engagements, J. W. Davis was able to devote much of his time today to perfection of his address accepting the democratic presidential nomination and to plans for the campaign.

The program called for further discussion with his manager, C. L. Shaver, who is to have complete charge in carrying out campaign details while Mr. Davis is presenting himself and his cause to the country.

One of the principal problems of organization—the selection of a national treasurer and a finance committee—remains to be disposed of, but the nominee and his field general hope to have this and other important items of organization out of the way before the official notification ceremonies at Clarkesburg ten days hence.
