THEATRES

Liberty Theatre.

Albert Rogell, director of "The Fighting Sap," starring Fred Thomson, coming to the Liberty theatre today and tomorrow, has more outdoor Westerns to his credit than any other director. Not only does he know the habits, the customs and the ways of the plains, but can ride, shoot or rope with any of the cowboys in the outfit. Under the guiding hand of Fred Burns, former world's champion roper, he learned to twist the rope. Under Yakima Jim he learned to handle the pistol and to ride with Horse Creek Johnston. All three of these men appear in "The Fighting Sap."

ANTLER THEATRE

William Farnum with scores of famous screen characterizations behind him, steps forth again in "The Gunfighter," his newest William Fox production, in a character which bids fair to overshadow those of the past.

The story is intense, Lynn Reynolds, one of the most skilled melodramatists, being responsible for its silver-sheet vivification.

WILL START OIL DRILL TWO WEEKS

Work on the oil prospect at Leeper's Dome, west of Oakland, is progressing nicely, according to Superintendent W. L. Malierne, who was in town for a few minutes this afternoon. The boiler and engine are being set up, the machinery generally gotten in readiness, and within about two weeks the drill will be started. Since W. L. Cobb has taken a working interest in the enterprise, the company has agreed to not ask anybody for financial assistance until the drill is at work. President Stearns, of the Oakland Oil Co., believes that this is the better way, and it is also in harmony with his declaration the night of this meeting at Oakland three weeks ago, when he said that no one would be permitted to invest heavily in the prospect, but that the development work must be done by money received from small sales of stock.

Malierne expects to push the work of drilling with all possible dispatch. He has installed a steam engine and boiler of sufficient power to handle the heavy drilling machinery, and alleges that no unnecessary delays will be permitted to handicap the work.

Mr. Malierne was accompanied to Roseburg today by Mr. Donnell, the tool dresser at the plant.

MURDERER OF 22 CAPTURED AFTER GREWSOME CAREER.

All of Europe is startled by the terrible confession of Fritz Haarman, of Hanover, Germany, arch-murderer, who has admitted that he had Beer Granz, a youthful accomplice, lure 22 men and boys into his home in Langestrass, where Haarman killed them, cut up their bodies and burned them in a small stove. Before killing them Haarman tied them to the bed shows in his room and then bit them to death in a degenerate frenzy. Though he admits 22 murders, the police, for whom he had been a "stool pigeon," now credit him with 59 murders. Several suicides of prominent men who were said to have been involved in Haarman's saturnalian orgies have already taken place. The slayer seems eager to keep in the public eye, and glories in his crimes. In the closet here shown he kept the bodies of his victims while awaiting a chance to dispose of them.
