HOME PRODUCTS SHOW ARRANGED

Plans are going forward to hold the Home Products Show in this city on September 11, 12 and 13 at the armory. Secretary Holbein has prepared the chart of the arrangement of the booths, and already has sold several of them to business concerns in this city. Letters have been written to other towns in the county having manufacturing concerns, and it is hoped that the entire county will participate in the event.

The chamber of commerce has been promised the Douglas County exhibit to the State Fair as one of the added attractions, and this in itself should draw a large crowd each day, as this is the first time that our people have had an opportunity to see the exhibit from this county except they attended the State Fair.

A thorough canvass of these business concerns in this city that prepare goods for the market will be made within the next few days, and it is hoped that by the first of next week all booths will be taken.

There are at least forty concerns in the county that should be interested in this show. With the large number of tourists now going through the city, and the small danger of the number being less in September, this will be a great opportunity to show the strangers just what Douglas county is doing in the way of growing farm and orchard products and manufacturing and preparing other things for the market.

It is proposed to have programs each afternoon of interest to the ranchers and farmers, and in the evenings to have lighter programs that will be both interesting and pleasing.

LIKE A BOY 18 YEARS OLD STRENGTH AND ENERGY QUICKLY RESTORED BY KOREX, SAYS ENGINEER.

"You have no idea of the condition I was in when I first started taking Korex compound," says R. E. Lewis, 65 year old automotive engineer of Paso Florida. "I could only walk a few steps at a time. I was so weak and staggering that my eyesight so bad I could hardly tell a negro from a white man. Five days after taking Korex, I was like a boy 18 years old and was improving all the time. My normal activity has been restored," he says.

Those who feel themselves going into a rapid decline, who are growing old too quickly and are suffering from weakness after the flu, aching muscles, stiff joints, lumbago, dizziness and poor circulation, may be interested in knowing that the American distributors of Korex compound, have arranged for Korex compound to be sold in Roseburg, Oregon, at Lloyd Crocker's Pioneer Drug Store, 241 North Jackson street. Thousands of the world over are now using the compound. It contains no deleterious, habit-forming drugs.

DEMAND FOR INSTRUMENT TESTS OVERTAKES BUREAU WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(A. P.)—Demands of private manufacturers of scientific and engineering instruments for the government's official stamp of approval have resulted in an appeal for additional financial support by the bureau of standards, which has just completed the fiscal year with approximately 140,000 tests, more than a hundred fold increase compared with the accomplishment the first year of its existence 22 years ago.

Upon the findings of the bureau depend millions of dollars of expenditures in the world of physical science and engineering. While most of the testing is done for the government, examinations also are made for commercial firms and individuals, more than 10,000 such tests, for which a charge is made, having been issued since 1902.

The government work is given preference, however, and in some cases all testing except that for the government has had to be refused because the demand ex-

The Luxury of Love by VIOLET DARE

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED MARY HAYWARD, a famous beauty, arrives at the country home of CAMILLA WAITE with two men, BRUCE GILLIAN and STEWART O'BRIEN. Camilla warns Mary that she is in love with Bruce and that there is to be no ponding on her matrimonial prospects. Camilla realizes that Bruce is much interested in Mary, and plots with O'Brien to prevent his proposing to her. Camilla keeps Bruce from Mary's side at the dance that evening, but late that night Bruce goes into the garden for a breath of air, and unexpectedly meets him. He tells her he loves her, asks her to elope with him at once. But O'Brien intervenes. The next afternoon Camilla announces her engagement to Bruce.

XII—A NEW GUITAR THE most conceited man in the world could not have suspected Mary of being heartbroken that evening, and Bruce Gillian was far from being conceited. He watched her with pained bewilderment in his eyes all during dinner, and Camilla, noting that fact, mentally advanced the date for her wedding by a week. Just as well not to tempt fate! And it might be as well, too, to hint to Mary that it would not come amiss if she accepted the Atwoods' invitation to stay with them, beginning the following day; no need to have her right there to the house!

Mary had never been more fascinating, nor seemed more effortless about it. The second course found O'Brien happily her slave; the cool air of the breeze marked the complete capitulation of the visiting card.

"Well, I'm glad that a lot of men are coming in this evening," announced Vera Atwood, as they went out to the terrace when Camilla asked if everyone wouldn't rather have coffee and liquor on the terrace. "With so few men as competition, I'm really afraid that Jim may think the stray smiles he gets from Mary mean something."

Camilla lifted troubled eyes to Gillian. "It sometimes comes to me that I don't see the end of the early hop picking," she murmured. "Of course, she's always done it; she just can't resist admiration. And she doesn't understand that any girl can have a crowd of men around her, if she cares to—well, if she doesn't mind being teased."

"If you weren't an Englishman I wouldn't believe you," Mary told him; he rich, deep laughter ran through her words, and to a stranger it sounded genuine. "But I'd never dare suspect you of just amusing yourself."

"Then—then you'll take me seriously?" "I'll take your remarks seriously," she purred, slipped away up the path. "Your remarks, but not you—not just yet, my dear!"
