Chief Defends Courts of Land

granted; that slavery shall not be permitted to exist in any state or territory; that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; if these and many other provisions made by the people be tyrannical, then the supreme court when it makes decisions in accordance with these principles of our fundamental law is tyrannical. Otherwise, it is exercising the power of government for the preservation of liberty.

"Somewhere must be lodged the power to declare the constitution, if it be taken away from the court it must go either to the executive or the legislative branch of the government. No one, so far as I know, has thought that it should go to the executive. All those who advocate changes propose, I believe, that it should be transferred in whole or in part to the congress. I have a very high regard for legislative assemblies. But the legislature is not judicial.

"Along with what are admitted to be the merits of the question, also what is supposed to be the popular demand and the greatest popular advantages weigh very heavily in making legislative decisions.

"It is well known that when the house of representatives sits as a judicial body, to determine contested elections, it has a tendency to decide in a partisan way. It is to be remembered also that under recent political practice there is a strong tendency for legislators to be very much influenced by the legislature. Whether we like this practice or not, there is no use denying that it exists. With a dominant legislature and a subservient judiciary the opportunity would be very inviting to aggrandizement and very dangerous to liberty. That way leads to imperialism.

"Some don't seem to understand fully the purpose of our constitutional restraints. They are not for protecting the majority either in or out of congress. They can protect themselves with their votes. We have adopted a written constitution in order that the minority, even down to the most insignificant individual might have their rights protected. So long as our constitution remains in force, no majority no matter how large, can deprive the individual of the right of life, liberty or property, or prohibit the free exercise of religion or the freedom of speech or of the press. If the authority now vested in the supreme court were transferred to the congress any majority, no matter what their motive, could vote away any of these most precious rights. Majorities are notoriously irresponsible.

"The same reasoning that applies to the individual person applies to the individual state, a very broad twilight state, which is difficult to distinguish where state rights end and federal right begins. Deprived of the privilege of its day in court, each state would be compelled to submit to the exactions of the congress or resort to resistance by force. On the other hand, the legislatures of states sometimes the people, through the initiative and referendum, may pass laws which are very injurious to the minority residents of that state by attempting to take away privileges which they hold under the federal constitution, except for the courts. Such a minority would have no reply for wrong done them. Their ultimate refuge is the supreme court of the United States.

"At a time when all the world is seeking for the adjudication of differences between nations, not by war, but by reason, the suggestion that we should limit the jurisdiction of our democratic courts is reactionary in the highest degree. It would cast aside the progress of generations to begin again the contest for supremacy between the executive and judicial. Whichever side has won in that struggle, the people have always lost.

"Our constitution has raised barriers against too hasty change. I believe that such provision is wise. I doubt if there has been any change that has ever really been desired by the people, which they have not been able to secure. Stability of government is a very important asset. If amendments be made solely by both revolution and reaction, as well as orderly progress, also becomes easy. The nations has lost little but gained much, through the necessity of due deliberation. The pressing need of the present day is not to change our constitutional rights, but to observe our constitutional rights.

"A deliberate and determined effort is being made to break down the guarantees of our fundamental law. It has for its purpose the confiscation of property and the destruction of liberty. In this contest there is but one place for a real American to stand. That is on the side of ordered liberty and constitutional government, this is not the struggle of the rich and powerful. They will be able to survive. It is the struggle of the common run of people, unless we can maintain our institutions of liberty unimpaired. They will see their savings swept away, their homes devastated and their children perish from want and hunger.

"The constitution of the United States has for its almost sole purpose the protection of the freedom of the people. We must combat every attempt to break it down or to make it easy under the pretended guise of legal procedure, to throw open the way to reaction or revolution, to adopt any other course is to put in jeopardy the sacred right to life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness."

Again discussing foreign affairs, Mr. Coolidge concluded: "American citizens, with the full sympathy of our government have been attempting, as is apparent, to help stricken Europe. We have acted in the name of world peace and of humanity. Always the obstacles to be encountered have been distrust, suspicion and hatred. The great effort has been to allay and remove these sentiments. I believe that America can assist the world in this direction by her example. We have never forgotten the service done us by Lafayette, but we have long ago ceased to bear an enmity toward Great Britain by reason of two wars that were fought between us.

"We want Europe to compose its differences and liquidate its hatreds. Would it not be well if we set the example and liquidated some of our own. The war is over. The militarism of central Europe which menaced the security of the world, has been overthrown. In its place have sprung up peaceful republics. Already we have assisted in refinance Austria. We are about to assist in refinance Germany. We believe that such action will be helpful to France, but we can give further and perhaps even more valuable assistance both to ourselves and to Europe by bringing to an end our own hatreds. The best way for us, who wish all our inhabitants to be single-minded in their Americanism is for us to bestow upon each group of our inhabitants that confidence and fellowship which is due to all Americans. If we want to get the hyphen out of our country, we can best begin by taking it out of our own minds. If we want France and the other allies paid, we can best work for the restoration of the German people, now shorn of militarism, to their full place in the family of peaceful mankind.

"I want to see America set the example to the world, both in our democratic and foreign relations of magnanimity.

"We cannot make over the people of Europe. We must help them, as they are, if we are to help them at all. I believe that we should help, not at the sacrifice of our independence, not for the support of imperialism, but to restore to those great peoples a peaceful civilization. In that course lies the best guarantee of freedom. In that course lies the greatest honor which we can bestow upon the memory of Lafayette."

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6.—A hurried consultation of medical specialists was called shortly before noon today in an effort to save the life of Thomas Lee Woolwine, former district attorney and once candidate for governor of the California democratic ticket.

Mrs. Woolwine announced that her husband, who was brought back from Paris on a stretcher this week suffering from pernicious anemia, was in a critical condition.

DEL MONTE, Cal., Sept. 6.—(United Press.)—"The most interesting tournament in the history of the event," was promised here today as the best golfers of the Pacific coast meet off for the opening rounds of the Pacific Golf Association amateur championship ship.

More than a score of men who have played up and tuck golf in Pacific coast states and in the east for years will try to lift the crown from the unfurrowed brow of young Johnnie McHugh of San Francisco.

Francis Brown, Hawaiian champion, record holder of the famous St. Andrews course in Scotland, and one of the world's longest drivers, will be one of the leaders.

Dr. Paul Hunter, who missed the tourney through illness last year, will try to regain the crown he wore for two years. Captain A. Bullock Webster of Sunningdale, England, leading amateur in this year's California open, and runner up in the California northern, has been here for several days getting himself in fine form. Johnnie McHugh himself, who gave up his plan to compete in the national amateur to defend his title here, is not playing such a bad game himself.

Out of the north Dr. O. P. Willing has arrived to add to his already heavy crown of laurels. Dr. Willing, who is the best Portland, Ore., has produced, was the coast representative this year in competition for the Walker cup in England. Then there are Bill Noonan, of Tacoma, who eliminated Clare Griswold in last year's northwest amateur; Ben Stein, Seattle city,

OPPOSE CANDIDATES
BACK OF LAFOLLETTE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PORTLAND, Or., Sept. 6.—Following a heated forenoon session the independent progressive party convention adopted a resolution expressing itself as opposed to three of the nominees for office. They are Congressman W. C. Hawley, republican nominee to succeed himself in the first congressional district; Maurice E. Crumpacker, republican nominee for congress from the third congressional district and Thomas B. Kay, republican nominee for state treasurer. The resolution was presented by the resolution committee soon after the convention convened and recited as grounds for opposing the three republican nominees that they are identified with interests which Robert M. La Follette is fighting and also that they hold "party rights," superior to "human rights."

The convention also endorsed the La Follette electors named in the recent primary, and they will be certified to as nominees of the convention.

This afternoon it is expected the convention will attempt to place a full ticket in the field.

A number of incidents or happenings more or less true to life in this locality have been put into a rhyme by a well known resident of this city. Two have already appeared in News-Review and a third here follows:

SCHOOL TIME

I am sitting by the gate
It is almost half-past eight
And I scarce know whether I am
Sad or gay

For my little one has gone
On the dear old path alone—
He has gone to school this bright
September day.

I have often thought of this
How my little one I'll miss
But I knew that there must surely
Come a time

When he'll have to start alone
On a pathway all his own
And I could not hold his little
Hand in mine.

When he waved a glad good-bye
Then I gave a little sigh
Yet I promptly waved a cheery fare-you-well.

For his heart was full of joy
And I said, "God bless my boy,
He will soon return, his little
news to tell."

Though he may be known to fame,
He will never be the same
As he was the day he left his tender play.

Just the mingling with the crowd
Though no rudeness be allowed
Makes our little ones seem changed
in every way.

Would I have it otherwise?
Nay, though innocence I prize
And my little one must learn all that he can.

For my mother-love is true
It will last the long years through
And he'll be my little boy although a man.
