Plans for the participation of the Douglas County Odd Fellows Association in the forward movement which is being conducted by the grand lodge officers of this state was launched last night, when Philatonic Lodge No. 8, was officially visited by L. E. Carter, grand master of Portland; V. T. Jackson, grand warden of Roseburg; E. E. Sharon, grand secretary of Portland; and L. D. Porter, grand marshal of Corvallis. The meeting last night was attended by representatives from the outlying lodges of the county, including Elkton and Glendale.

Grand Master Carter explained the plans for the forward movement in detail and at his request a committee was formed from the representatives of the different lodges present, which committee will formulate plans for the participation of the Douglas county association in the movement.

It is planned for the different lodges belonging to the Douglas county association to continue to initiate such candidates as they may be able to secure between now and January 1, 1925, but will defer conferring of the degrees until a date near the first of January when they will be brought to Roseburg, where the first degree will be exemplified at a big ceremonial by an all-star team. This affair will be attended by Grand Master Carter and other grand lodge officers.

NEW STUDEBAKER MODEL ANNOUNCED

SOUTH BEND, Sept. 11.—Those on the inside, who have seen the carefully guarded, new Studebaker cars, are predicting nothing short of a sensation for American motorists when they are publicly announced this coming Sunday, Sept. 14.

Chief among these is said to be an entirely new type of body, of pressed steel, which is both an open car and a closed car. The entire top of the car is shaped in steel and covered with water-proof moleskin fabric. The device for converting the car into a closed car is said to be entirely new and almost instantaneous in operation. The new type car will not be higher in price than the average car, according to advance predictions. This is the first complete change in models that Studebaker has announced in six years. People may reasonably expect dramatic changes and not be disappointed, say those who have seen the new models.

Studebaker engineers combed the motor centers of Europe last year for new ideas, not only in style and appearance but in mechanical design. As a result the new lines and appearance suggest foreign distinction. Although the new Studebaker cars are unlike any present American or foreign cars in appearance, they are said to be exceptionally beautiful.

According to inside sources, extra wide and deeply crowned fenders have been designed especially for the new type of large balloon tires.

Further predictions are: That there will be an entirely new four passenger model on one of the three chassis—an especially beautiful car with new ideas in comfort and coziness.

There is an entirely new six which comes from the new factories at South Bend, according to reliable information. It is said to be larger than the former Light Six and to include many new features which give it remarkable power and performance. Although a medium sized car, it has been so designed that the driver's compartment has as much room as that of the largest car, reports have it.

The big Studebaker factories in Detroit and South Bend have been in production full force for the last thirty days, and the new cars have been shipped to every part of the United States for the first public announcement and display to be made next Sunday.

This is really the first output of the new-completed new plants in South Bend, one of which is a closed body plant, said to represent an investment of ten million dollars. It is claimed that economies possible in the new plants by modern methods and modern machinery, substantially reduce the prices of all Studebaker cars, quality considered.

All of the new closed bodies are now manufactured complete by

MRS. YOUNG ENTHUSIASTIC

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never feel better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 16 Amherst St., Charleston, S. C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nationwide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it.

Because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is reason why it should help you.

Studebaker. In material, workmanship and finish they are said to be as fine as any closed bodies ever produced in this country. Prices of the closed cars will range from about $1395 to $2590, according to the chassis model on which they are mounted. It is forecast.

There has been tremendous interest in the forthcoming Studebaker announcement for many weeks among people who are interested in automobiles. Undoubtedly next Sunday will find hundreds present at local Studebaker salesrooms on hand to see the sensational new Studebakers unveiled.

The Luxury of Love

by VIOLET DARE

AUTHOR OF "The Half-Time Wife," "Love or Fame?" ETC.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED.

MARY HAYWARD, a famous beauty, has married SIR NIGEL CAVENDISH, as the result of a misunderstanding with the man she loves.

BRUCE GILLIAN, Gillian goes to Alaska, and Mary, joining her husband for their honeymoon in Italy, asks him to release her. He promises to do so if she will remain nominally his wife for six months. At the end of that time, when they are in Canada with WILMA HAYWARD, an old friend of Cavendish's, and her husband, she tells Mary that she is free to leave, and that he will go to Mexico and get a divorce.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XXXVIII—A CRUEL TRICK.

MARY'S journey to Seattle was a delightful leisurely one, by boat from Vancouver, which she loved, to Victoria, where she had a few hours' stop to ride on a sight-seeing trolley, from which she could look down over high walls into the beautiful gardens adjoining private residences; then on again to Seattle, to city, with its steep, picturesque hills and its beautiful views; she had never been in that corner of the west before, and it was as stimulating as her hopes for the future. She registered at the hotel whose name she had given Bruce in her wire, and was just turning from the desk to follow the man who carried her luggage when a man stepped up and introduced himself as a representative of an Eastern weekly paper that devoted its attention to news of society folk all over the country. In his hand he held a paper, and as she seated herself in a corner of the lobby he showed her a news item.

"According to this, your husband is divorcing you, Lady Cavendish," he began. "Is that true? This report intimates that another man is cohered in the case, a man who you say about that? Is it true that you have not been happy with your husband?"

"Oh, please!" Mary lifted her hand as if to shield herself from his impudence. She had met newspaper men before, and had been accustomed only to courtesy from them; she was defenseless against this onslaught of impudence, and hardly knew what to say.

But he gave her no peace. He ignored her protestations that she had nothing to say. The information had come from the Raymond's ranch, where her husband was still staying. It said that he would return to the East at once to begin divorce proceedings. Mary forgot herself for a moment then, exclaiming: "Oh no; he is going to Mexico!"

"When is he going to divorce you?" Now, Lady Cavendish, don't you think you'd better tell me the truth about this? What is it, just a little quarrel, or is there something in this rumor that you and he never have got along very well, and—"

"Oh, you are insufferable!" cried Mary, her eyes blazing. "What I do is my own affair, not yours! I shall say nothing more! She brushed past him and hurried to the nearest elevator, trembling with anger.

It seemed incredible that Nigel had sent out any information regarding her leaving. He was gentleman enough not to do that. It must have been Wilma Raymond, who had always hated her. Wilma loved to twist other people's lives into tangles, and then stand back, malicious and amused, as she watched anything out of life by scheming and planning! I could have been taught to earn my living, instead of marrying money; I could have been taught to be true to love, even when it seemed as if I'd lost the man I loved by doing it. Who should I be held to the past that I hate, when I'm willing to give up everything that I gained by it for the sake of the future?"

But there was no one to answer her questions.

She had dinner sent to her room and ordered the evening papers brought with it. She had hardly dared hope that they would ignore the item about Nigel and herself; she could only hope that they would be kind.

The better papers were. The yellow ones pointed with joy on the "Shattered Romance of Beauty and English Lord," as the headlines in one of them called it.

Her life was reviewed—her debut, her engagement to Neale Phillips, the millionaire, his murder and the shadow that suspicion had cast on her, which was cleared away only when Camilla Waiter dispelled it. Then her romantic marriage to Nigel Cavendish, the honeymoon abroad, and now its sequel. "Beautiful Mary Hayward wrecks another life!" announced one sensational daily.

Mary threw herself on the bed and sobbed. Never before had she completely given up. But now it seemed as if she had. For how could she claim Bruce's love, when she must go to him branded with the marks of such disgrace?
