SUBSTANTIAL GOODS,

A clothing dealer was saving the other day that a man came into his place and showed him an overcost which he bought in another city three years ago, and which had faded considerably, though it had not been worn a great deal. The rest up tomorrow. dealer remarked that that was what the public would get until it insisted on having goods that had absolutely substantial qualities. This dealer said that he had sometimes found fault with agents of wholesale firms because some stuff they put out did not have more permanent colors. But they replied that the American people did not seen to domand that substantial quality. They thought that the peomenoid that the peomenoid that substantial quality. They thought that the peomenoid had not mind changula as a rule had money to spend, and did not mind changula as a rule had money to spend, and did not mind changula as a rule had money to spend, and did not mind changula as a rule had money to spend, and that they were more interested in style and attractive appearance, than they were in getting stuff that would last a long time. It is said that the fading of material can not be laid to American dyes, since our chemists have developed excellent colors, but that the tendency is strong in many shops to rush goods through in a hasty way, without that thorough workmanship that would produce permanent colors and substantial quality in other respects. The public gets the qualities that it wants the most. The Biography of a President

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

His Early Political Life

VALVIN COOLIDGE'S first your Cas a member of the Massachusetts State Legislature was a drab one indeed. He was the least conspicuous member of either house. He made only one speech during that first year and that was very brief and thoroughly Coolidgesque. It had to do purely with a district or local interest. But it is to be noted that young Coolidge started in that year a reputation he has maintained since—that of being a "regular party man." On every issue where a party yote was taken, his vote was to be counted safely on the Republican side.

When he went to Beacon Hill, he took with him a letter of introduc-tion to Speaker John N. Cole from his friend and neighbor, Richard W.

Irwin, which read in part:
"Dear John: This will introduce the new member-elect from my town. Calvin Coolidge, Like the singed cat, he is better than he looks. He wishes to talk with you about committees. Anything you can do will be appreciated." Apparently the speaker wasn't much impressed by the sad-faced new member for he said rather patiently he would see what he could do, though of course it was against precedent to place a new member on the Judiciary Committee.

Coolidge finally was given an important place on the Committee on Mercantile Affairs, and also on that on Constitutional Amendments. When Coolidge went to Boston as

When Coolings went to Losson as a legislator in 1997 he took a room at the Adims House. His "suite" was No. 60. It is on the third floor, fac-ing a narrow courtyard, and is about No. 60. It is on the third floor, rac-ing a narrow courtyard, and is about as cheerful and roomy as a cell. Here the $7500 a year legislator would come every night following the session, and here he would map out the work of the increase.

Thus is was that he canno to the wife would have permitted Amberst to en-large its sewerage facilities. Hearing Two years was es-tof the bill came up before Coolidge who listened to the piles without be traying any emotions whatsoever. He termained ma
