LA FOLLETTE IS MAKING TALKS

Declares He Will Have a "House Cleaning" if Elected.

MAKES FEW PROMISES

Says He Will Ask For Repeal of Soldiers' Bonus Bill and Work for a Substitute Law.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, left here early today to carry his campaign for the presidency into the anthracite region of Pennsylvania. He will speak tonight in Scranton and then will go to Newark, N. J., before turning west for a swing that is expected to take him to the Pacific coast.

It elected, the senator declared, in his address here, last night, he will devote the first eighteen months of his term to "house cleaning" and the remainder to "constructive" efforts. "I propose," he said, "not only to renovate the executive departments but also to wipe off the statute books the reactionary laws which are used as the instruments of exploitation and oppression. Far-reaching beneficial results can be secured without the support of a partisan majority in congress."

The independent candidate promised to call a special session of congress next March in the event he is then in the White House, to enact emergency farm legislation and the Howell-Barkley bill would set up a new method of adjusting disputes between railroad employers and workers, to revise or repeal the transportation act of 1920 and of the Fordney-McCumber tariff law and to repeal the soldiers' bonus law enacted at the last session of congress, substituting legislation "to provide genuine adjusted compensation," for world war veterans. He said he also would seek to bring about a revision of postal salaries and pensions of civil and spanish war veterans, to conform to the increased cost of living.

"All the items in this immediate legislative program," Senator La Follette declared, "already commanded overwhelming support in congress and are not dependent upon partisan majorities. They would already have been passed except for opposition

Alleged Rum Runner Faces Death for Piracy

Max Jerome Phaff, a German-American alleged bootlegger, is under arrest at Havre, France, on a charge of piracy, the penalty for which is death. The French declare he is the "master mind" in the gang of pirates who boarded the French steamer Mubhouse off the coast of Long Island and stole her entire $200,000 whiskey cargo. Phaff asserts he was in Canada at the time and knew nothing of the piracy.

of the Harding-Coolidge administration or obstruction by the reactionary leaders of the two old parties in congress.

While action was being obtained on pressing legislation during the "house cleaning" period, Mr. La Follette said he would call upon the appropriate legislative departments to "prepare a detailed constructive program." Providing for "reconstruction" of the federal reserve and farm loan systems, a permanent transportation policy, a national super-power system, development of cooperative marketing and control of trusts and combinations.

Transportation recommendations, Mr. La Follette said, should include, "a comprehensive study and analysis of methods of providing for public ownership of railroads, with adequate safeguards against bureaucratic control and political manipulations.

Reports covering each subject the speaker continued, "should be ready for submission prior to the congressional elections of 1926, thus giving the voters of the nation the opportunity to decide what legislation should be enacted.

Commenting on his advocacy of constitutional amendments providing for direct election of president, election of federal judges, restriction of the powers of the courts and federal initiative and referendum, the Wisconsin senator said he had no desire "to evade this issue, but that this question of "constitutional amendments resolved itself into a great joke on my conservative opponents who have recently been excessively agitated about certain of the proposals."

"All amendments to the constitution must originate in congress," he pointed out, "under the constitution the president does not propose them. If I should by any chance remain in the senate, I shall devote myself to the introduction and passage of these amendments, but if I should be elected president, as I now expect to be, I shall be debarred from introducing them.

"It follows, therefore, that the only way our opponents can prevent me from urging these amendments to the constitution about which they express, for campaign purposes, such grave concern, is to elect me president."

Outlining the foreign policy he would pursue if elected, Senator La Follette advocated referendum on the declaration of war in case of actual invasion, the ending of "our imperialistic attitude towards central and south America," by withdrawing marines from such territory, Philippine independence terminating "on the partnership between our state department and the imperialistic interests." Use of "every peaceful influence to bring about a revision of the treaty of Versailles not in

G. O. P. FLAYED BY JOHN DAVIS

Says Republicans Fail in Fulfillment of Promises to the Nation.

TARIFF IS ATTACKED

Says Fordney - McCumber Tariff Rates Were Written by Men Who Hoped to Profit.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Driving further north and west into New York state from Albany to Utica for a noon-day address, and thence to Syracuse for an evening meeting, John W. Davis continued today his attacks against the republican party and its record during the Harding and Coolidge administrations and his appeal for support of the voters for the democratic national candidate state tickets in the November elections. At the same time, Mr. Davis, speaking as the democratic presidential nominee, reiterated his opposition to the administration's foreign policy, charged that the navy has deteriorated in efficiency below the 5-5-3 ration fixed by the Washington armament conference and reviewed other subjects touched upon in his address here last night. In his reference to the foreign policy questions, Mr. Davis said last night he could see only two courses open to this country, one was to arm the nation to the point where it need not fear aggression even from the united strength of other powers and the second was to meet all other powers in conference and build up understandings which would make future aggression impossible. He pointed out the refusal of the Washington government to attend the Geneva conference called by the League of Nations to consider questions of abolishing war of arbitration of reduction in armaments and the codification of international law.

"There is neither safety nor honor in a mere policy of drift," Mr. Davis said, "such a policy leads inevitably to a situation that not only deprives us of the power to make a pour minds but also the chance to make our will effective when our minds are made up. The country has a right to know whether we have a foreign policy and if so, what that policy is."

In reiteration of his charges of corruption in public office during the last three and a half years, Mr. Davis declared that the republican party cannot cover its failure to perform its past promises by making new promises for the future.

"The worst crop failure this country ever saw," he said, "is the failure in the crop of republican performance compared with the terms of hatred and punishment, but in accordance with the more generous terms of the armistice," and the exertion of the influence of the United States, "to outlaw war, to abolish conscription, to drastically reduce air, land, naval armament, and to guarantee referendums on peace and war."

Reverting to the world war the senator said: "The great war which began ten years ago is now generally admitted to have been an imperialistic war, born of the greed of financiers, exploiters of foreign lands, imperialists who conquered defenseless people in order to protect their tawdry loans and destructive concessions. They made war on foreign people as they profited and made war on the liberties of the people at home. They used diplomacy, the foreign offices, battleships and the country's youth to promote and to protect their imperialistic possessions, and in time brought the whole world to the cataclysm which caused ten million of its youth to be slain on the field of battle and 20,000,000 more to be invalidated by wounds and disease.

Dapper Youth Identified as Bobe Robber

JOHN FEINSTEIN

John Feinstein, a dapper youth, was picked from a crowd of sixteen men by Marie Costers, maid to Miss Edith Bobe, wealthy New York modiste, as one of the four men who tied and gagged her, looted Miss Bobe's apartment and then held up and robbed Miss Bobe and her escort, Robert L. Hague, Standard Oil Company official, of $100,000 worth of gems.

sowing of republican promises." Another question to be settled at the elections, Mr. Davis said that of rule of privilege as against the rule of equality.

"Of all the victories which privilege ever won in congress," he said in this connection, none was so sweeping as the present iniquitous Fordney-McCumber tariff. Its rates were written by the very men who hoped to profit from them.

"With much tribulation and agony of spirit, an investigation has been completed for the rates of duty on sugar. The Fordney-McCumber bill fixed the highest rates in 34 years. The result was a tax upon American people of $225,000,000 a year. $100,000,000 of which went into the hands of the sugar interests. What it meant to them is illustrated by the fact that the great western sugar company earned for the year ending February 29, 1924, according to its own figures, a net profit of $12,000,000 on a capital investment of $30,000,000. In November, 1922, the tariff commission began its investigation of this schedule. On the 31st of last July it laid its report on the president's table, recommending a reduction. Sixty days have gone by without action.

"There is no one who does not favor reduction in the burdens of taxation. Every energy should be bent to economy in government and the lessening of demand it makes on the time, the labor and the savings of the men and women of the country."

Mr. Davis favored lower income taxes and reduction of "their taxes" as rapidly as possible.

THEATRES

ANTLERS THEATRE

Norma Talmadge, in her latest First National picture, "Secrets," now showing at the Antlers Theatre, play four different roles in four different periods and in gowns of four different fashion cycles.

It is a picture of modern romance with glimpses into three other periods of American home life. Starting out in 1923, the picture later shows Norma first as a young wife of the early days in Wyoming and the far west.

Then the action switches to the year 1879. Norma has become the mother of a growing family. The passing years of the photograph's story next show her in the gowns of the late 80's of the last century. Her hair has grayed and the children have grown but it is the same Norma of the early sequences of the story. Last of all Norma is shown again in modern

One is hardly able to believe that the Norma seen in the early sequences as a young wife and as a mother is the same person who is shown later with gray hair and in the black silk dress so much favored by our grandmothers.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

The special engagement of D. W. Griffith's wonder spectacle, "Way Down East," at the Majestic tonight.

This is the outstanding achievement of the theatrical year and to miss it is to pass by the event of the current season.

"Way Down East," is a new art form combining drama, motion picture and music into a combination of stirring appeal, passing through the four seasons in New England and bringing back those quaint and delightful folks who made stage history when Lottie Blair Parker and Joseph H. Gruber introduced this familiar drama to stageland. D. W. Griffith picks up the well known tale where the original dramatists were content to climax it and carries the action forward so intensely that it culminates in the most thrilling scene ever revealed in a theatre in the world. For sheer beauty of landscape and for its realism of atmospheric surroundings "Way Down East," in Griffith's hands becomes a classic, and its engagement is sure to arouse the same wonderful interest that has attached to it in every quarter where it is now being presented with a measure of success that is not short of astounding.

ANCESTOR WORSHIP

THE Chinese pray to their ancestors. But they do more than that. They allow themselves to be guided by family tradition in their every thought and action. The principal difficulty facing the introduction of modern improvements into China is the universal objection: "This is not as our fathers did."

Imagine saying that we did not want electricity because our forefathers were satisfied with candles.

Though we never went as far as the Chinese, our conservatism in the past often went to considerable lengths. Think of the telephone, of the motor car. How much encouragement did they get at first?

Advertising more than anything else has made of us a nation willing to judge something new on its merits, rather than on narrow, ancient traditions.

Advertising today is as necessary as electricity, sanitation and rapid transit. It is more than the system by which we are kept informed of every new improvement that is to our advantage. It is the catalog wherein, every day, all manner of articles are listed for us with their individual advantages.

Read the advertisements. Be guided by them. They will help you in making your selections. They will save you money.
