NUTRITION SCHOOLS ARE TO BE HELD

Dietics, Cooking and Preserving, and Kindred Subjects to Be Taught by Expert From College.

A series of nutrition schools will be commenced in four communities in the county this week. The nutrition work which was carried on last spring proved to be very interesting to all of the women in the communities where the schools were scheduled.

These meetings are, as a rule held in homes, beginning about 10:30 in the morning and lasting until 2:30 in the afternoon. There is no expense in connection with the instruction given, except for the material which is actually used.

Meetings are scheduled for the following places: Tuesday, October 14th, at Camas Valley, at the home of Mrs. Scranton; Wednesday, October 15th, at Looking Glass, with Mrs. Wm. Voorhies; Thursday, October 16th, in the South Deer Creek community at the home of Mrs. E. McCormack; and, Friday, October 17th, in the Edenbower community at the home of Mrs. Jacob Jones.

For the first meeting each woman will bring one dish of food such as salad, baked beans, sandwiches, fruit or milk and these are put together and lunch is eaten in cafeteria fashion. Each woman bringing her own plate, fork, knife, spoon and cup, which are washed at home after the meeting.

The nutrition work is given on the Foods for Health basis, feeding the family for the greatest possible health, efficiency and happiness. There will be food demonstrations in the mornings at all but the first meeting and other kinds of practical demonstrations. Miss Lucy A. Case, assistant in nutrition, from the Oregon Agricultural College, will have charge of these schools, and comes to us highly recommended. Miss Case will give talks in the afternoons on subjects which will include, what we eat and what happens to it, the feeding of children of various ages, cooking to preserve food value, how to eat and grow thin, how to eat and grow fat, sick-room trays and conveniences and many other subjects of vital importance to the home.

All of the women in the communities where the schools are being conducted and the surrounding communities are invited to attend these meetings and take active part in them.

WRESTLING MATCH ON FOR TONIGHT

Associated Press (United Wire). LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—The glorious victory of Walter Johnson in the world's series, faded into the background today as Los Angeles sport fans prepared to see Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, defend his title against Joe "Toots" Mondt of Colorado in a finish match.

Mondt is the favorite to win because of his match with Lewis here a month ago, when he held the champion to a two hour draw. They will enter the ring tonight with weights about even at 275 pounds.

Splash-Proof Walls

A tiled bathroom is unnecessary when you can so easily make the walls splash-proof and washable with Satin Egg Shell Finish. Washable walls are just as essential in the kitchen, while in the other rooms of your home light-colored woodwork that can be kept bright and clean is always desirable.

Walls and woodwork covered with Bass-Hueter Satin Egg Shell Finish are absolutely washable. Fingerprints and grease spots can be removed with a damp cloth and frequent washings will not injure the satin-like surface. A wide range of tints makes possible attractive color combinations. This finish is easy to apply, and dries quickly so that your rooms can be in constant use.

LOOKOUT FOR A COLD WINTER SAY MARINERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—(United Press)—Nautical men in North American waters are predicting a severe winter—one of the worst in years—and each day letters to the Coast Guard headquarters here reflect this sentiment in demands that the service be prepared.

The guard, aroused by this flood of predictions from the "old salts" has checked up with its many sub-stations and has found that the forecasts of its own personnel agree with those of the civilian mariners. A hard winter for the Coast Guard means a lot. There will be storms that buffet and separate the brave little sea-going fishing fleets. The guard must stand by prepared for any emergency. There will be huge icebergs floating down into the path of trans-oceanic travel which must be watched, charted and often broken up. The stormy winter air will bring radio calls of distress—broken propellers and rudders, lost small boats, disabled power equipment and the like.

The Coast Guard is preparing. Ships which all year have been chafing rain runners are being overhauled and made ready for the annual call for regular winter shipping protection. Usually in November an executive order designates certain Coast Guard vessels which must patrol the coast during December, January and February, when the winter storms are at their height. A survey of the regular Coast Guard vessels shows that but few—the Modoc and the Tampa, both provided in the emergency of the World War—are really fitted for the demands of roughest ocean patrol. They are now on duty off the New England banks watching for icebergs. Aside from the Modoc and the Tampa there are not more than seven other ships inadequately fitted for the service which demands constant duty on the coast from Maine to the Rio Grande. And these, navigators say, are far from first-class vessels. But what they lack in equipment, shipping men say, they make up in personnel. They are maned by fearless men, ready to brave any peril and encounter any hardship to aid those in distress. Letters from executives of the many settlements that dot the Maine coast line recall another rather unromantic job which the coast guard has shouldered in the past. Severe winter catches these hundreds of harbors to freeze over, cutting off small boat traffic and leaving the village without fuel and provisions, as most of them have no overland transportation. The Coast Guard is looked upon to remedy this situation and generally does. Cutters are sent into the harbors to break the ice.
