If you are a member of the M. E. Church, South, come to our Home Coming service at eleven o'clock next Sunday morning. Bring your lunch and after the service gather with the others around the table in a great family reunion. We want every member present, and no one else can take your place. Come!

home in North Carolina and with an older brother came west by train to San Francisco, continuing their journey to Portland by water.

Having lost their ticket on the way, Mr. Spaulch and his brother paid a freight conductor $2.50 to take them to Junction City, where they arrived penniless.

Here they found work and Mr. Spaulch attended his first school, where he managed to secure three months of schooling.

After spending three years in Junction City, he came to Douglas county and settled in Locking Glass where on Dec. 23rd, 1877, he was united in marriage with Sarah J. Morgan.

Having engaged in agriculture as an industry, Mr. Spaulch proved to be a progressive farmer. He put in the first drain tile in Locking Glass and also owned the first wind mill, steam thrasher, gasoline engine and automobile in the community.

He was of a public spirit, having served as road supervisor and also as school director.

He was one of the most faithful members of the Baptist church with which he united in Feb., 1879 and which he attended regularly for 45 years. He was always a zealous worker, having served as superintendent of the Looking Glass Sunday school for five years.

He was also a member of the Woodmen of the World lodge for a good many years.

Seven years ago Mr. Spaulch gave up active work and, with his family moved to this city where he has since resided.

He was a man of highest character, and the mutual love and esteem with which he was regarded by his neighbors and friends was expressed by the many beautiful floral offerings.

He was a kind and loving husband and father and besides his sorrowing wife he leaves five children and six grandchildren to mourn him.

One little girl, Ina May, passed on in childhood.

The surviving children are Chas. H. Spaulch, Bend, Ore.; Mrs. F. L. Beard and Roy E. Spaulch, Eugene, Ore.; Wilbur and Alba Spaulch, of this city.

BRITISH GOLFER HAS LONG DRIVE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 17.—Southern golfers, who followed Cyril J. Tolley, British star, in two matches here, declare they have seen the longest driving in the history of golf in Atlanta.

Playing with an Atlanta golfer against Bobby Jones and another local star, Tolley appeared in two exhibition matches for charity and the first match ended all square when Jones made a sensational chip shot dead to the pin on the 18th green.

During the second match Tolley drove his shot 285 yards from the third tee. Later he leaned on one from the fifth tee for 300 yards and followed with a uranic that was so long and straight that he was on the green in two, putting for an eagle that finally gave him a birdie.

Seasoned experts of the court, unhesitatingly gave him a record on the 325 yard tenth tee left him the easiest of pitches to the green and there were others warming up, however, for the real driving the next day.

In the first foursome on the sixth hole a matter of two ditches entered into calculations. Tolley's drive here carried fully 300 yards and rolled back from the hillside to leave him an open and short pitch to the green. With the line ten feet to the left, the ball would have rolled on up the fairway, experts present declared.

From a lily tee for the seventh, the slinger shot for a green out of sight, his driver responding with a sufficient force to drive the ball over a patch of trees to a corner of the green, fully two millards with great height necessary to insure position short of a total loss. The tee shot, on the 440 yard, eleventh was found to be 80 yards short of the green. On this hole, Bobby Jones hit one of his best balls of the afternoon from the tee and he was 40 yards behind. On number 12, with a light breeze in his face, Tolley drove the ball 290 yards. The record shot of the afternoon was the last long wallop on the sixteenth, 350 yards, where the drive was ten yards from the green.

SPECIMENS FROM PETRIFIED FOREST

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Specimens from the petrified forest national monument will be given colleges and museums, desiring them, the national park service announced today, upon payment of the expense of boxing and shipping. Visitors to the monument, numbering 40,000 to 50,000 a year, are not permitted to take away souvenirs of the solidified forest, but it is explained, the interior department has authority to make the rainbow-hued fragments available to colleges and museums.

AL SMITH MAKES ATTACK ON G. O. P.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 ELMIRA, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Governor Alfred E. Smith in a speech last night on prohibition enforcement, assailed the policy of silence of the national administration.

This afternoon he will speak at Ithaca. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, his republican opponent speaks here tonight.

Charging the republicans with hypocrisy in their handling of the prohibition in both state and nation, the governor said he had no apologies to make for signing the bill repealing the Julian-Gaeger enforcement law. "No repeal statute could have come to me," he said, "unless it had been passed by a republican assembly."

"The republican leaders in that assembly," he continued, "were able to throttle and stifle and kill every piece of progressive legislation that was sent them. They were able to deprive women and children in the factories of the eight hour day and the benefits they would derive from a minimum wage commission. But they had to carry water on both shoulders on this question and they passed the repealer."

Governor Smith assailed the national administration for its "paleo policy" on foreign relations, the tariff, the oil scandal and the veterans bureau.

The Husband Tamer

by VIOLET DARE
 AUTHOR OF "The Half-Timber Wife," "The Luxury of Love" etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

PATRICIA CLEVE is the young wife of ANDREW CLEVE, a rising young lawyer who makes the entertainment of his clients so important a part of his wife's life that she has no time for anything else. She rebels when GREGORY HEWITT, an important financier, and his wife spend the night at the Cleves', and Mrs. Hewitt, misunderstanding Patricia's courtesy to Gregory, accuses her of flirting, and insists on leaving the house. Andrew is furious, and Patricia, telling him that he has made her nothing but a tamer of other women's husbands for his benefit, decides to leave him for a time, and to visit her sister, and hoping that he will come to his senses and allow her to have a home and children, instead of being nothing but an official hostess. She takes the train for Chicago and on the train encounters HEWITT. Patricia arrives at the home of her sister.

CAROL WILLOUGHBY, and Carol's husband, Keith, rather slight Patricia until she incautiously repeats some of Hewitt's plans for building a railroad in which Keith is interested.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XIX—DONE IN DESPERATION

PATRICIA could not sleep that night. What a fool she had been! Why, oh, why, had she yielded to temptation and flattered her own vanity by telling of Gregory Hewitt's plans about that railroad?

He had confided in her. Of course, he hadn't said that he was doing so, hadn't warned her not to tell—he had taken it for granted that she wouldn't do that, that she had some sense enough and loyalty enough not to. And she had blabbed it, like any silly idiot!

"Are you sure about Hewitt's intention to build that railroad?" Keith had demanded of her the moment that the dinner guests left. Patricia had nodded nervously. She could not glory in her triumph over Isabel Drake. Isabel had been furious when the men promptly turned from her to Patricia; she had resented the fact that they seemed to feel that Patricia could talk to them about their own affairs, and so meant more than she did.

Isabel had urged that they play bridge after dinner, but the response had been so half-hearted that she had abandoned that plan, and finally gone off to the club in disgust, leaving Keith and Isabel to entertain the news, and Carol to entertain the other guests with the radio. Patricia had realized then that Isabel was likely to resent what had happened, and cherish her resentment, but she did not care. If only she could take back what she had said about Hewitt.

"There's just one thing to do," she told herself, at last. "I'll go to see him tomorrow and explain how the whole thing happened. Business is so funny—my telling Keith that that railroad was to be built may make an awful difference. Oh, dear! What Andrew would say to me!"

It had been home sick for Andrew, not to be annoying, of course, but to have to spend so much time entertaining his business associates. But it had been interesting, too, to have him talk them over with her, explain what they meant to him, accept her as a companion. He and she hadn't had a long like Carol's and Keith's, hadn't had a darling baby boy, but they had other things.

She wanted to telephone Gregory Hewitt without Carol's knowing of it, but difficulty confronted her there. There wasn't a telephone in trouble about such details, but Carol laughed her head off. "Keith simply has to have a well-regulated home," she explained to Patricia. "He goes wild if one single thing isn't just right."

"But, Carol, can't you get more time for yourself? You ought to be playing golf—you're getting fat, you know."

"Yes, but Keith doesn't mind that, he says it's beginning to me," replied Carol complacently.

Patricia reflected that Keith seemed to like Isabel Drake to be slender, but said nothing aloud. To herself she remarked, "You're getting to be an awful celt, Patricia!"

"But if you could play golf with him, wouldn't he like that?" she asked presently. "I should think you'd be pleased for both of you."

"Oh, yes, I suppose so," replied Carol rather vaguely. "But, of course, my game's gone off, I haven't played for so long. Any, anyway, Keith prefers to play with the other men."

Patricia decided not to make any more suggestions. Evidently Carol was satisfied with her life. "Hope she doesn't wake up suddenly some day and discover that Isabel's out her out," she reflected as they crossed the club's wide veranda that overlooked the gently rolling golf links.

Isabel was three equidistant in white sport clothes, exhibiting her slender form for the slightest holes Carol had played early that morning with Keith. "It was gorgeous," she declared. "Not another soul out. I made that villainous eighth hole in three—had a bet that I'd take less than Keith did, and won!"

"Lucky at golf, unlucky at love," paraphrased one of the women severely. Isabel smiled through her cigarette smoke.

"In the exception that proves the rule," she replied. "Anyone want to drive into town with me?"

"Oh, may I?" asked Patricia eagerly. She could go to see Gregory Hewitt without phoning there, and she could leave a message if he wasn't there. It would be less public than telephoning.

the house so placed that one could have any degree of privacy when using it, except the one in Keith's study, and that seemed to be quite impossible.

Carol went into the study early in the morning to dust it, and when Patricia followed her in she was plainly nervous.

"You see, dear, I'm the only person who sees cimes in here, except Keith," Carol explained, rather proudly. "He just leaves even his private papers around, knowing that they're quite safe."

"I see—of course—" Patricia murmured out again. Well, she'd phone from the club.

They went over to the clubhouse later, after Carol had assured herself that the baby was well started on his day's peaceful routine and that the servants knew what they were to do. It seemed to Patricia that Carol took a useless amount of

BANK OF ITALY
RUN BY EMPLOYEES

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—A plan whereby the 2200 employees of the Bank of Italy, a $50,000,000 organization are to take over control of the institution was approved yesterday by the board of directors it was announced by A. P. Giannini, president of the bank.

As a preliminary move Mr. Giannini is to retire today from the presidency of the bank and James A. Baclagrupi, the present senior vice-president, is to succeed him as head of the organization.

The Bank of Italy is among the seven largest banking corporations in the United States. It has approximately 600,000 depositors and 600 branches throughout California and is closely affiliated with 26 of the leading financial institutions of the far east and Europe. Giannini, who founded the bank 20 years ago, and who first proposed the plan of giving the bank to the employees, will continue to act as chairman of the bank's executive committee and financial committee.

The plan calls for the obtaining of a controlling block of stock by active employees, a change in the list of officers and the directorate at least every five years to allow promotion to those officers from the bank's employees and the full protection of the rights and present potential earnings of the 14,000 stockholders.

DAVIS RESTATES KLAN ATTITUDE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—John W. Davis, carried the democratic presidential campaign further into Chicago today and asserted after a series of lectures scheduled for tonight in the Bohemian, Polish and Jewish quarters of the city to turn south again, headed this time for St. Louis, Illinois and Missouri.

The candidate devoted his time during most of the day to conferences. Many of those who visited Mr. Davis congratulated him on his address last night in which he restated his attitude on the Ku Klux Klan.

It was explained that Mr. Davis welcomed the opportunity given him by a heckler in the audience to reassert his position on the Klan, although he had not intended to make his appearance on the occasion for a restatement on that matter. The stenographic report of Mr. Davis' remarks on the Klan was given general distribution today in response to numerous requests for it. It said in part:

"In my judgment no greater misfortune could overtake the American people than a division along the lines of race and religious beliefs, and that whether it be called the Klan or any other name, any organization that challenged the doctrine of religious toleration did violence to American ideals and could not be approved by those who believed, like myself, in those principles.

"But the gentleman (referring to the questioner in the audience) must permit me to add something more—that after that speech (Seagirt, N. J.) I ventured to express the hope that the nominee of the republican party would join me in a similar expression. And I suggest that the gentleman's question is addressed to the wrong quarter."

R. A. Stowell is prepared to make country trips and to do light transfer work. Phone 262 for prompt service.
