SENATOR CAPPER IS FOR COOLIDGE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 BRITT, Iowa, Oct. 24.—Declaring the record of economy and debt-paying of the Harding-Coolidge administration "is the greatest ever made by any nation since history began," Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, in an address on behalf of the national republican campaign today urged the election of Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes so that this record may be continued.

"Because the people of the country have confidence that the existing prosperous condition will continue under the direction of president Coolidge," Senator Capper said, "and because of the feeling that a change at this time would endanger these conditions, I am sure the republican administration should be and will be given a rousing endorsement in November."

The senator designated as the accomplishment of the administration of the past four years, reduction of governmental expenses, budget balancing, lower taxes and the cutting of the interest bearing public debt. He said the government's operating expenses had been reduced $2,000,000,000, the bonded debt had been cut down by $2,750,000,000 and taxes had been reduced more than 25 percent.

"A great part of the credit for this belongs to President Coolidge, notwithstanding he has been in office officially a little more than one year, because from the moment he assumed the office of president he has not permitted the subject of economy to be forgotten. He has hammered and hammered on it and has inspired the country to demand it," he said.

REFUSE NEGRO A RIGHT TO VOTE

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 24.—Federal grand jury investigation into alleged refusal of certain Oklahoma registrars to permit negro voters to register for the general election will be ordered by Federal District Judge, P. N. Kennamer, he announced from the bench here yesterday, after hearing on a mandamus writ seeking to compel Oklahoma county registrars to register negroes. The court denied the writ on the ground of lack of jurisdiction.

In making the announcement Judge Kennamer declared "there is a conspiracy in the state capital and the state election board to deny the right of voting to certain citizens because of race or color."

Judge Kennamer also charged that a negro had virtually no chance of getting his suffrage rights through appeal to the state supreme court.

MURDERERS ARE HANGED TODAY

 MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—Louis Moreland and Frank Gambino, murderers of Henri Cleroux, were hanged at Bordenaux jail at 4:55 this morning. Giuseppe Serafini and Tony Frank, followed them to the scaffold and were executed three minutes later at 4:59 a. m. Gambino's last words on the scaffold were addressed to executioner Ellis, whom he enjoined to "go easy."

With the execution of four of the slayers of Henri Cleroux at Bordenaux jail today, one of the most sensational robberies in Canada is brought to a close. Of the six men convicted of the slaying four have paid the death penalty and two others are serving life sentences.

On April 1, of this year, eight masked men held up the money car of the Bank of Hochelaga and without warning opened fire on the crew. Cleroux (61) died. The bandits seized $172,000 and fled. Speeding away, the bandits automobile crashed into a telegraph pole and was wrecked. Seven of the robbers fled on foot but the eighth, Harry Stone, was killed.

The Husband Tamer

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

PATRICIA CLEVE protests to her husband.

ANDREW CLEVE, a young lawyer, that he has made her a farmer. He other women's husbands, forcing her to do so much entertaining of clients that he sacrifices her to his business. She goes on a visit to her sister.

CAROL WILLOUGHBY, who, with her husband.

KEITH WILLOUGHBY, lives in a country club colony near Chicago. Keith, like Andrew, seeks to use Patricia's charm as an asset, trying to persuade her to intercede in his "what's."

GREGORY HEWITT, a famous financier, when she has met through Andrew.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT
 XXV—TURMOIL

PATRICIA closed the door of her room and stood with her back against it, staring through the open window opposite at the tops of the trees that she could see silhouetted against the moonlit sky. This was too much! She had not so much minded putting Andrew's case before Gregory Hewitt, and his promise to consider Andrew's firm when he changed his legal advisers had made her jubilant. But to scheme to influence him for Keith's benefit, especially when Keith had been so brutally rude—"I shan't do it!" she exclaimed rebelliously, tossing her hat into a chair and curling up on the foot of the pretty little sitting-room bed.

She arose presently, went into the bathroom and started a hot bath. She slipped on the soap, and began to shriek. She whistled abominably, when she was trying to think. Her fatigue had vanished, her mind was eager, alert. It raced back to Gregory Hewitt. What was he thinking now of the evening's events—or had they been significant enough to keep him awake till now? Probably not!

She was tossing a handful of bath salts into the steaming water when a gentle tapping at her door summoned her. She ran to open it, and Carol, in a negligee and with her hair hanging over her shoulders in two long braids, tiptoed in.

"Dear, you're mind being more quiet?" she whispered. "The whistling, I mean—and if you could wear something else on your feet than those high-heeled mules—"

"Surely I forgot about the baby," replied Patricia contritely.

"Oh, it isn't the baby! It's Keith. He hates any noise in the house after he's gone to bed, and his room is right next yours, you see. Oh, Patricia, it will be wonderful to have Mr. Hewitt come out to dinner. I have been planning what we'd have, and Keith made one or two suggestions—I'm so thrilled!"

"But, Carol, I haven't the faintest idea that he can come. He's a very busy man, you know, and it's quite likely that he'll be leaving town immediately—"

"But if you ask him and explain about things, he'll come, I'm sure," Carol replied. "Keith's just been telling me that Mr. Hewitt was awfully pleased to see you, today at his office. And he said—this is just a suggestion, of course, dear, but I do think I ought to say it—Keith told me that it seemed hardly wise for you to allow a man, especially a man so well known as Gregory Hewitt is, to greet you so effusively. You're a married woman, you see, and of course, he's married, too—"

"That was just a friendly greeting!" protested Patricia, her face flushing with anger. "He merely shook hands with me! Neither of us thought of another thing."

"Oh, of course, dear, I understand that. But anyone seeing you wouldn't—"

"Why not? There was absolutely nothing wrong with it. Really, you never used to be so narrow-minded!" She rose and walked the length of the room, half-stick with embarrassment and disgust.

"I'm not narrow-minded! I just think that you ought to be more circumspect. And certainly you couldn't call Keith narrow-minded!" Carol left the room abruptly, her head in the air.

"I'd call him a fussy old hen!" exclaimed Patricia to the closed door. "Narrow-minded! Ye gods! Why, Andrew wouldn't have thought anything of the way Gregory shook hands with me. After all, Andrew was superior to most men, she told herself, as she went into the bathroom and stepped into the tub of steaming, scented water. Andrew was a darling, that's what he was! He had his best points, of course—" and he'd simply have to understand that she must have a home, and children, instead of acting an official hostess for him all the time.

Her mind swung to Gregory Hewitt again. She dragged it back, but later, as she turned out the night light, and rolled over between the heavy linen sheets, the thought of him returned forcefully. "Little Pat, if I could come to you as I'd like to—and ask you to be my wife," she could hear his deep, quiet voice saying what he had said to her that evening, over and over.

She could not help feeling that such thoughts were disloyal to Andrew, but it was impossible to keep them out of her mind. Finally she switched on the light on the bedside table and picked up one of the books that she had brought with her from New York, a book that had lain on the table beside her in the trunk during some of her talks with Hewitt. She recalled his picking it up and gazing through it as he talked with her. Then he had tossed it down on the opposite seat with some papers of his own.

She turned the leaves hasty, then quickly slipped them back. For a wrap of paper had protruded; it must have slipped in between the pages when it was thrown down, she decided, as she noted that the writing on it was his. And the words, "Keith WilloUGHBY, G. H. HANER," and an address. Keith and his partner!

—Patricia the Reformer!

WHEELER TO END CAMPAIGN IN WEST

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 WHEELER SPECIAL, Enroute to St. Louis, Oct. 24.—Senator Wheeler, independent vice-presidential nominee, engaged himself today with the conclusion of his campaign in the west. His engagements were in St. Louis and he prepared to put in the final 19 days with the working of his way towards the east.

He will be in both Chicago and Rockford, Ill., Saturday and in Springfield Monday, traveling from there via Michigan and Ohio cities to New York.

TO EXPERIMENT WITH LETTUCE

A number of inquiries have reached the Chamber of Commerce relative to the growing of head lettuce in the Umpqua valley, and yesterday afternoon Messrs. W. A. Bogard, Foster Butler and Gregory Wheeler, independent vice-presidential nominees, drove out into the country to make an investigation. They are satisfied that head lettuce can be grown successfully on a commercial scale in this valley, and to that end a meeting of all interested in making the experiment will be held at the office of the chamber of commerce on Tuesday to talk over matters.

Yesterday several signed up to put in from an acre to four acres of the lettuce this winter, and it is hoped that at least 25 or 30 acres altogether can be signed up at once, so that the ground can be prepared for the seed bed in ample time. It is thought that the lettuce should be seeded in February, and in that case would be ready for the market in May or June, right between seasons as regards California.

It is not the desire of the promoters to have any one person put in too much acreage, so that if the crop is a failure there will not be too heavy a loss to any one grower. The land could also still be used for some other crop in case the lettuce did not do well.

It is hoped on Tuesday evening that a number of the progressive ranchers of this part of the Umpqua valley will attend the meeting at the chamber, so that as wide an expression as possible will be available.

IN THE MACHINE WAS FOUND $40,000 OF THE BANK'S MONEY.

Within 24 hours police arrested six men and two women and announced they had found $40,000 and that the suspects had been identified.

On June 23, six of the suspects were found guilty of Cleroux's murder. They were Leo Davis, Tony Frank, Louis Morel, Mike Valentine, Giuseppe Serafini and Frank Gambino. Yesterday the death sentences of Davis and Valentine were commuted to life imprisonment.
