Local instructors are quite well pleased with the textbook changes, and believe that the courses offered will be very beneficial. Other changes are desired, but the board is permitted to change only one-third of the textbooks at a time. The instructors are especially well pleased by the introduction of a course in Oregon history. There has been a general movement during the past few years to create greater interest in the history of the state, and of the various localities, and school children have been encouraged to secure and write stories of local history. The new Oregon history course, it is expected, will increase the interest of students in history study, and will give a better understanding of the state.
