EX-DRY AGENT TRIED TODAY

"shoot to kill." He fired one shot in the air, Sutherland said that Roadman started moving away quickly. The officer then fired two shots at Roadman, according to the testimony and the youth disappeared back of the theatre. It was testified then that Kirk walked unsteadily around the street, cursing and talking loudly, exclaiming that he would "get" Roadman yet. Sutherland testified that Kirk was staggering and talking incoherently.

A. C. Marsters, who lived on Rose street at the time, testified that he heard shots on the night of August 9th. He heard loud talking also, but said he paid little attention to it. He could not say how many shots he heard fired.

George Ogle, night clerk at the Hotel Grand, took the stand, and told of what he witnessed on the night of the shooting. Ogle testified that Kirk had been in and out of the hotel lobby several times during the night of the shooting. Ogle heard the shots in the early morning and rushed outside of the hotel. He met Kirk, he said, and asked him what had happened. Kirk replied, "Oh, I just shot up one of your bell-hops." Kirk later attempted to enter the hotel, Ogle testified, but was refused admittance. He surrendered the key to the room and started towards the depot. Ogle also testified that Kirk appeared to be intoxicated. Ogle was the last witness on the stand yesterday evening.

Fred Sexton and Charles Thacker, were called this morning and testified that they heard loud voices in the street. They were sleeping in one of the west rooms of the hotel and could look out upon the alley intersection where the shooting occurred. Kirk was talking loud and cursing, they stated, before the shooting.

A. C. Ross, court reporter and clerk at the Grand Hotel, testified that he stayed at the hotel on the night of the shooting, because of the absence of W. O. Clinger, the proprietor. He heard the shooting, and a few minutes later saw Kirk return. "I'll get the—— yet," he heard Kirk tell Sutherland, he testified. He immediately dressed and went downstairs, and a few minutes later Kirk approached the hotel entrance. Ross and the night clerk took positions outside the door to prevent his entrance, and he surrendered his room key to them. "I had to shoot up one of your bellhops," he is said to have remarked as he approached. Ross testified that Kirk had liquor on his breath and was apparently under the influence of liquor. He had been intoxicated earlier in the evening, he stated.

Lyle Roadman was the state's next witness. He said that he saw Kirk about 7 o'clock on the evening of the 8th of August, and that Kirk had then been drinking, and asked Roadman to tell him where he could procure liquor. Roadman said he had seen Kirk several weeks before, and that he had at that time, at Kirk's request, directed him to a billiard parlor where Roadman says he told Kirk he might find a bootlegger.

On the night of the 8th Roadman says Kirk offered him a drink, and that they each had one drink out of the bottle, and that Kirk told him he had more.

After Roadman went off he procured a room at the Umpqua Hotel, the Grand Hotel being filled, and then started out to get something to eat. He said that he had previously heard that Kirk was a deputy sheriff, and that as he went past the Grand Grill he was informed by the cashier that she knew Kirk and that he was an officer.

Roadman says Kirk was seated at a writing desk, and was called out by Roadman who demanded to know if the report that he was an officer was true. Kirk denied the report and said he could whip anyone who said so. He demanded to know who had told Roadman and the latter said he could prove it by a waiter at the Home Restaurant.

Roadman said they went together to the restaurant, and there the waiter accused Kirk of having railroaded two of his (the waiter's) friends in Lane county. Kirk went outside and Roadman said he did not see him again until later.

"I came back up the street with Sutherland." Roadman told the court," and saw Kirk standing in front of the Grand Hotel. When I came up he said, 'You're arrested for being drunk.' He pulled out a gun and a pair of handcuffs and held the handcuffs out to me and said 'put these on.' I backed off and told him to put up his gun and I would go with him. Sutherland told me to stop, that I hadn't done anything to be arrested for and Kirk would shoot if I didn't. I told him Kirk was going to shoot anyhow.

"I could tell that Kirk was crazy drunk. His face was all twisting, and his eyes were like a crazy man's. I knew he was going to shoot. I told him I would go with him if he would put up his gun. I was about ten feet away and kept backing off rapidly.

"He said, 'Stop you —— or I'll shoot to kill!' He fired twice more as quick as he could and one shot hit my hand."

Roadman exhibited the scars to the jury, showing where the bullet entered the fleshy part of the hand and penetrated through the web between the thumb and first finger and then shattered the thumb joint, leaving the thumb stiff.

Roadman say he ducked around the corner at the rear of the Majestic theatre almost the instant the shots were fired, but not quick enough to save being hit. He then went to the home of Dr. Houck, and then to his room.

On cross examination he retold his story in practically the same words, and denied emphatically that he had ever procured liquor for "anyone, anytime."

The state called the nurse, Mrs. Fellows, who was present when the injury was dressed, and she testified regarding the course of the bullet, and exhibited the x-ray pictures taken at that time.

Raymond Rausch, night officer, who arrested Kirk immediately after the shooting, was called and testified that Kirk appeared under the influence of liquor when arrested.

The jury trying the case is made up of James C. Riggs, C. W. Burrows, A. J. Lilburn, Edward Hancock, A. I. Cackey, John Lander, John Hurley, Ed Hinkle, Carl G. Fulton, James A. Young, Charles McLain and Russell Ralston.

The defense placed its first witness on the stand shortly before noon. Frank Alley identified a map of the scene of the shooting as one which he had prepared indicating the correct measurements, and locations of all objects at the scene of the occurrence.

Kirk then took the stand in his own behalf. He told of his appointment and the authority given him, stating that he was working under the direction of the district attorney. He was instructed to watch the Grand Hotel he said, as he had previously obtained liquor from a bell boy named Robertson. He said he was trying to locate the source of the booze, and finally obtained two pint bottles from Roadman. In order to divert suspicion from himself, he said that he passed the liquor around, after taking a small drink with Roadman. He denied being intoxicated. Later in the evening, he said that Roadman called him out of the hotel and accused him of being a stool pigeon. He denied the charge and went with Roadman to see the waiter who had made the charge. The waiter wanted to fight, and Kirk said he left. He tried to find the nightwatchman to arrest Roadman according to his testimony, desiring to keep suspicion from himself until he could obtain a delivery of booze which he had arranged for the following day.

When he failed to find the nightwatchman he decided to arrest Roadman himself, and attempted to do so. Roadman, he said started to back away and kept backing across the street. Kirk said that he had Roadman covered with a gun, and ordered him to halt. When Roadman kept backing he finally fired a shot into the drain pipe at the corner of the Perkins building and two into the air. Roadman was running he said, and had turned the corner before the second shot was fired. Kirk said he continued the search for Roadman but could not find him. A short time later he was placed under arrest.

HOMECOMING WILL BE BIG EVENT

CORVALLIS, Nov. 18.—Everything is in readiness here for the greatest Homecoming in the history of the college, November 21, 22 and 23. A combination of circumstances, not the least of which is the unusual football situation in Oregon this year, has created widespread interest that insures the largest crowd Corvallis has ever entertained.

The Oregon-O. A. C. game this year promises to be a classic. Both are determined to "get the jump" on the other in the matter of victories at the start of the new athletic regime.

Last year the Aggies were victorious in the annual clash, banishing, forever, they think, the traditional "ten year jinx." They are determined to establish supremacy in football over their rivals such as they now hold in baseball, wrestling, track and most other sports. They are making no plans for a defeat, and after their strong showing against Washington state are confident of victory Saturday.

Another athletic event of the week-end will be the annual dual cross-country run. Oregon has never won this event from the Aggies and Coach R. O. Coleman and his runners are certain they shall not begin this year.

Underclassmen will tangle this year in a series of new contests termed freshmen-sophomore Olympics, included will be boxing bouts, flag rush, shuttle relay, and the traditional bag rush. The freshmen also plan to have a gigantic bonfire ready for the rally after the noise parade.

With the new stadium unit completed, the college is prepared to seat 20,000 under cover at the game, insuring comfort to the spectators regardless of the weather.

All editors of the state have been invited to the game and those who accepted before November 10 will be seated in a body.
