WILL ATTEND NEW YORK CONVENTION

Establishing men on a higher plane of efficiency thus enabling him to carve out a place in the busy, throbbing business world where service and competence will earn their just reward, is having more and more attention from the large mercantile and industrial organizations throughout the country.

The old way of measuring a man's qualification by the extent of his physical endurance, has passed out of use in the big, progressive institutions of today. A notable illustration of the expediency of this training is found in the selling organization of the local J. C. Penney company store.

This nation-wide institution of department stores with its 571 co-operating member stores, not only looks carefully to its own lower, but in a very definite way, trains men and women in all the requisites of successful merchants and salespeople.

The company has long maintained an educational department and a business training course which are instrumental in creating a desire in the minds of its associates for advancement in the higher ideals of service to one another and to the public at large. It materially helps them to attain that desire.

Therefore, it is quite natural that the co-partner-managers of this great organization should assemble at Atlantic City next month for a four-day inspirational convention when man building, self-building and the man power in business will be discussed by some of the most able speakers in the country.

W. B. Strawn, manager of the J. C. Penney company store, will attend the convention, leaving Thursday night, January 15th, and will join the other managers at Portland, Friday, January 16, accompanying the party in a special Pullman car from this state, who will attend the New York convention.

LETTERS ARE HELD AS MURDER CLEWS

HIBBING, Minn., Jan. 8.—Police today had under examination more than a score of letters written in a feminine hand and found in a trunk belonging to Francis X. Bernard, who killed himself after wounding Miss Lora Palmer at Madison, Wis., yesterday.

The letters were signed with different names, police said, but all were in the same handwriting. They found them in Bernard's rooming house last night, but except to say they contained many affectionate phrases, refused to reveal their contents.

Recent letters had been mailed from Madison, Wis., while those of earlier dates included some mailed from Paris.

Knute Rockne's galloping horsemen trotted close to half the circumference of the earth in quest of football honors during the past season. They visited states in climates ranging from 40 degrees above at Princeton, N. J., to 90 degrees below at Pasadena, Cal.

In winning 11 games from representatives in every section of the country Notre Dame traveled 10,000 miles. One sixth of the season was spent in Pullman cars. Three of the games, Army, Princeton and Stanford take in railway mileage of more than 9,000 miles.

Enil "Irish" Meusel, Giants outfielder, said to be sought by the Browns of the American league is far from being waived out of the National, according to officials of the New York club. Meusel has been mentioned as part of several trades this winter, but according to Secretary Joe Tierney he remains a full fledged member of the Giants payroll.

Young Stribling, Georgia school boy light heavyweight, will meet a formidable foe in boxing Jimmy Delaney of St. Paul, a protégé of Mike Gibbons, at Grant Rapids, Dance Armory Saturday night. Hiss Devils Music.

One Wife on Approval by VIOLET DARE

Wife's who and what's happened

CYNTHIA and JIM LELAND, bride and groom, settle in their new home to find that Jim's mother expects to rule their lives. Cynthia rebels; Jim's devotion to his mother blinds him. Cynthia meets PHIL GRAHAM, an old friend, and invites him home for the night.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT VIII—BREAKERS AHEAD

"CYNTHIA!" Jim Leland's voice was very harsh indeed as he spoke to his wife.

"That was quite apparent—that he was delighted company," commented Madame Leland, acknowledging Cynthia's introduction of Phil with a curt nod. She turned to her son wearily. "And now, James, if you don't mind taking me upstairs—"

Jim took her arm and escorted her up the wide stairway; she leaned on him heavily, pausing once or twice as if she had strength to go no further.

Cynthia turned to Phil Graham with wide eyes. "If she feels so ill as that, wouldn't you think she'd rather stay home than come here?" she whispered. "Don't you see that you must stay? After all, I'm married to Jim, and this is my home. I can't let anyone treat me as she has."

"But I can't stay, when I've almost been thrown out," he protested. "I'm your hostess! I asked you to come. It isn't my fault if one of my husband's guests is rude to you."

"No, honey, it isn't your fault," he answered quietly. "And I can see how hard things must be for you here. It's a shame. But honestly, Cynthia, you'd better just let me go. Give your husband any reason you like; tell him I got a telegram and was called away, or anything, else you think of—that won't matter."

"Phil, if you go I'll go too!" Cynthia cried, taking hold of his arm. "I'm not going to stay here and be treated so. Jim's mother must realize that this is my home, even if she'd like to give it to us."

Neither of them realized that Jim Leland was standing at the head of the stairs. He started down slowly, just as Phil Graham bent and kissed Cynthia lightly on top of her head, then strode out of the front door.

Cynthia faced him, her eyes filled with angry tears. "Phil's gone," she told him abruptly. "And I can't blame him, after the way your mother acted."

"Have you paused to consider the way you acted?" he asked. "Mother and I came in to find you practically in Graham's arms, at this hour of the night."

"You know that isn't true, Phil and I were sitting there on the couch, looking at some kodak pictures that he had, and waiting for you to come home. Surely there was nothing wrong in that."

Jim shrugged his shoulders, then turned quickly and took her in his arms. "Forgive me, dear," he begged. "Mother's had bad news, and I've felt so upset that I wasn't responsible for what I said to you just now. Don't mind, I beg of you."

"I'm sorry—I was horrid," she answered quickly. "I should have understood."

But she could not feel any more kindly toward her mother-in-law because of the incident, and rejoiced the following day when Madame Leland decided to go back to her own home.

"I came here last night because I couldn't bear to be alone," she explained to Cynthia at breakfast. "But perhaps it's better for me not to stay."

Cynthia said nothing, and Madame Leland departed when Jim went to his office. Cynthia spent the day planning for the happy evening that she and Jim would have together.

And dressed for it late in the afternoon in her prettiest frock. They'd make up for the tiff of the evening before, she told herself. But at six o'clock Jim phoned her, regretfully announcing that he would have to dine with his mother.

"She wants to talk over some new developments of this difficulty she's in," he told Cynthia. "And I'll have to go."

"You haven't even told me what sort of difficulty it is," Cynthia reminded him. "Shall I meet you there, or will you call for me on the way?"

"It's financial matters that bother her," he answered, slowly. "Only don't let her know that I told you; she's very sensitive, you know. And I guess perhaps you'd better not go with me, dear; she wants to talk with me alone."

Cynthia hung up the receiver abruptly. Her disappointment at not having the evening alone with Jim was so keen that she wanted to throw herself down on the floor and cry. Apparently she was just a stranger in the family, she told herself; she didn't really belong in it at all. She sat down to a lonely dinner, and afterward spent the evening with only Marie, the kitten, so near her company. Try as hard as she could, it was impossible not to feel resentful toward Madame Leland.

JEWISH ATTORNEY WILL SUE H. FORD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—A formal demand for retraction of certain statements alleged to have been made in Henry Ford's publication, the Dearborn Independent, has been made by Aaron Sapro, counsel for several farmers' co-operative organizations, preliminary to a projected libel suit for $1,000,000 against Mr. Ford.

If retraction is not made within thirty days, the suit will be filed in Detroit, Mr. Sapro said. In the notice of intention to bring suit, the attorney named E. G. Leibold, vice-president and treasurer of the Dearborn publication company, W. J. Cameron, editor, and the Ford Motor company.

Mr. Sapro alleged that his name was linked in a series of articles with those of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, Bernard Baruch, Albert D. Lasker and E. Myer, Jr., in charging him with participation in an alleged Jewish conspiracy to control American agriculture, or to organize the farmers of America in the interests of communism.

Mr. Ford was accused by Mr. Sapro of approving "an attempt to destroy my participation in the co-operative marketing movement." The attorney has been counsel for numerous co-operative organizations notably in California, he was for a time counsel for the American Farm Bureau Federation, and in attorney for co-operative associations led by Walter Pileat, formerly of Texas, William Settle of Indiana and Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois.

REEDSPORT BOYS HAVE EXCITING EXPERIENCE

Verne DeMeritt had a rather exciting experience Christmas Day when he got lost while out hunting in the Schofield river, says the Portland Courier. For several hours after dark, the young man was wandering about the woods. Finally he and a companion, who had only brought a sandwich each, came upon the old railroad spur of the Winchester Bay Lumber company and followed the rails into the city. Arrangements were being made to send out a searching party when the young men returned. The DeMeritt boy felt the effects of the hardships for several days.

JUNIOR COLLEGE PLAN INVESTIGATED

City School Superintendent M. S. Hamm returned today after having spent two weeks in California getting information pertaining to the operation of Junior Colleges. He visited and conferred with officials at the University of California, San Jose, and inspected the work being done at San Mateo, Modesto and Sacramento. Generally speaking, the people of California are very enthusiastic over the Junior College plan. Mr. Hamm states, and it is working very satisfactorily in that state. He made a very careful study into the nature of buildings, the needs for the establishment of the course, the financial operation, and the methods used in conducting the schools. He will make a full and detailed report to the board at a subsequent meeting.
