FRANCES POPE DENIES TAKING MAMMOTH BRIBE

Cousin of Former President Harding at Forbes' Trial Today.

LETTER INTRODUCED

Text Shows Forbes Was Offered Governorship of Alaska—Fraud Charges Denied.

(Associated Press Lead Wire.)

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Frances E. Pope, Spokane insurance broker, and a cousin of former president Harding, denied as a witness in the Federal court here today that he had been offered a bribe of $1,000,000 by a syndicate formed in 1921 to purchase the government's war time wooden fleet.

Pope was called as a witness for the defense in the veterans' bureau conspiracy trial, in which Charles R. Forbes, former director of the United States Veterans Bureau and W. E. Thompson, wealthy building contractor, are charged with conspiracy to defraud the government through hospital contracts. Elias H. Mortimer, Washington contractors agent and principal government witness testified on December 13, that Pope had been offered a million dollars bribe for his influence with President Harding by a ship syndicate in which Thompson and his partner, James W. Black of St. Louis were indirectly interested.

Pope said, he had been invited to participate in the syndicate, taking a one-fifth interest but that he never had been offered a bribe in any form. He had approached Albert D. Lasker, then chairman of the United States Shipping Board with an indefinite proposal for the sale of the fleet, comprising some 250 vessels, but had been informed the boats were involved in a lawsuit which would prevent any action for three or six months. The project was then abandoned, the witness said. Pope identified a letter from President Harding to Forbes written a month after the president's inauguration on March 4, 1921, in which Forbes insisted that the text of the governorship of Alaska.

"I expected in some suitable way to bring you into the government and I know you want me to work it out to the best advantage possible," the last paragraph of the communication said. It was addressed "My Dear Forbes."

The prosecution objected to its introduction in evidence and was sustained by the court, but James S. Easby-Smith, counsel for Forbes, insisted that the text be transcribed into the trial record, to which the court consented.

The Harding letter to Forbes said: "My Dear Forbes: "April 7, 1921.

"There is going to be difficulty in naming you to a membership on the shipping board. Of course, you know what this difficulty is. It is a thing neither you nor I can avoid. I do not care to write about it. I must of course, be considerate of the sensitivities from any state and in case of forcing their recommendation, I cannot well choose a substitute appointment from their state. This does not preclude a very desirable attachment of your services to the shipping board if that is desirable to you. It is a matter we can talk about later. Meanwhile, I have another appointment which I thought might appeal to you very strongly and I want to submit it in this confidential way. There is a very strong contention between the conflicting elements in Alaska over the governorship. I want to appoint a fine outstanding man, who can go there and bring about a restoration. I do not want him to represent any interests nor go there with the thought of wrecking things. I have almost made up my mind to appoint a governor from the states. It might occur to me, that this might afford you a fine opportunity for constructive service and the making of a brilliant record. I do not want to go further in the consideration of your name in this connection, unless I know that it will be agreeable to you if a decision is reached to ask you to go, there and serve. I do not know that I will make such a request in the final conclusion. The thing has been in my mind, however, and I wanted an expression from you before I go any further. If you think kindly of it, I wish you would wire me in a way that I will understand without specifically mentioning the matter. It will be perfectly easy to understand. If you do not want me to consider it further, please say so much, but do not refer to the name of the position in your message.

"I expect in some suitable way to bring you into the government and I know you want me to work it out to the best possible advantage. "My very best regards, "Sincerely yours, " (Signed) "WARREN G. HARDING, "Hon. Charles R. Forbes, "Spokane Club, "Spokane, Washington."

Pope asserted his proposal was to salvage the fleet for lumber on a cost-plus contract with the shipping board. Lasker had told him the witness continued that another syndicate had submitted another offer for $500,000 for the fleet with the expectation that the vessels would be put in operation.

A. M. MacDonald, Seattle ship-builder and a partner in the Pope syndicate, previously had testified concerning an offer of $3,000 each for the vessels for salvaging.

On cross-examination Pope was asked whether he knew whether the law suit mentioned by Lasker, was an injunction proceeding brought by W. R. Hearst, publisher, to restrain the shipping board from selling certain vessels. Pope said, he did not know as to what litigation Lasker referred.

FINNISH RAGER HAS LITTLE TO SAY OF HIMSELF

A PERFECT ATHLETE

Paavo Nurmi is Reticent of His Achievements and Would Rather Have Record Speak.

(Associated Press Lead Wire.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Paavo Nurmi, Mercury footed son of Finland has a personality all his own, as distinctive as the matchless running style that has carried him to such heights.

Nurmi's track performances which this year reached unprecedented peaks at the Olympics and again a few days ago in Madison Square Garden, grow from no mysterious ability, no unfathomable source. To those who know him intimately three factors stand out as the basis of his success—perfect conditions and relaxing motion, unswerving determination and unflinching concentration on his chief goal. The speed and stamina which put him in a class by himself as a distance runner are the result.

Nurmi does not diet on dried fish as he has been pictured as doing, but he does live simply and spartan-like, denying himself all indulgences and such ordinary luxuries of living as would, in the slightest degree, affect his general physical condition.

In appearance, the Finn does not look the perfect athlete that he seems to be on the track. Of medium build, he weighs about 145 pounds, but his physicians who have examined him say he has perfect muscle development. He is straight as an arrow when he runs and his stride vary only a fraction of an inch.

C. H. Burlingham, of Puyallup, reported to city officers this morning that his 1920 model Ford car had been stolen during the night. He drove into the city last night and left his car standing on Rose street, across from the old Empire barn. This morning the machine was not to be found, and it is presumed that some unknown person drove it off. Mr. Burlingham was in a hurry to reach Sacramento and caught the southbound train this morning, leaving word for the officers to notify him if the car should be found.
