Several social events were staged by the young people here during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips gave a very enjoyable watch party on New Years Eve, while a party of youngsters made a raid on Mr. and Mrs. Kruse, New Years night, and gave them a complete surprise.

Those who had turkeys to sell here in Hayhurst, were well pleased with the results. We have not the figures for all sales made, but Mrs. J. T. Miller sold 33 turkeys which brought her $162.40. Twenty-two of the birds were sold at the fair price of $4.50, the price being 30 cents per lb. The other eleven were dressed, and sold to R. W. Davis and Eric Stenith, for 35 cents per lb.

Owing to snow on the ground at the time of the recent cold snap, it is thought that fall grain is not materially damaged, except, also came through in good shape.

Arthur Williams now has a nice bunch of early lambs.

The evening of New Year's Day Mr. and Mrs. Merl Austin were given a reception at their new home at Green, by Billard and Green friends of the bride and groom. Refreshments were served. On Sunday January 4th, Mr. and Mrs. Austin left for Portland to spend their honeymoon.

The Christmas vacation of the Green school lasted from Dec. 24, till Jan. 5, 1925. On Christmas eve the school, Sunday school and P. T. A. joined in giving a program and tree for the children of the community. The program, under the leadership of Mrs. Baum was given many favorable comments.

The teachers spent and enjoyed their vacations in their several ways. Mrs. Isom remained a part of the time at home and the rest, visiting her parents at Cottage Grove. Clara Anderson went on Friday morning the 5th, to Cottage Grove, to spend a few days visiting with Nora Ward there. From thence, she went to Salem where she attended the wedding of Nellie Pickens and John Hatfield on New Year's Day.

Mr. and Mrs. John Howard had for their Christmas vacation guests, Mrs. Howard's mother, Mrs. Fuller of Corvallis. Also her nephew George Fuller of Corvallis.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

CYNTHIA and JIM LELAND, bride and groom, settle in their new home to find that Jim's mother expects to raise their lives. Cynthia rebels; Jim's devotion to his mother blinds him. Cynthia meets PHIL GRAHAM, an old friend, and invites him home for the night.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT
IX—A FIRM RESOLVE

WHEN Jim came home from his mother's late that night Cynthia pretended to be asleep. Her long evening alone had given her time for many thoughts, and they had all ended in the same conclusion. She could not really love her or be bound to her mother or to come between them so frequently.

She had been married so short a time that sometimes even Jim seemed a stranger to her; she could not turn to him frankly now, because she felt so sure that he would see things from his mother's point of view rather than from hers, and she did not know how to put the matter to him differently than she already had, so that he would understand how she felt about it.

She found herself wishing that she knew him as well as she did Phil Graham. Phil understood so perfectly! Perhaps she had made a dreadful mistake after all, in marrying Jim. Perhaps it would have been better to marry Phil—she didn't love him, to be sure, but they were such good friends!

She lay there quietly, through the long hours of the night, picturing her life as it would have been with Phil. She would have raised much—but how easy things would have been. He hadn't any relatives but his sister, who was already a friend. Phil liked the things she liked. He wouldn't have insisted on the round of social parties that Jim seemed to think were necessary. He would have understood her so much better!

"Well, it isn't too late yet!" she told herself, trying not to cry as she considered this new possibility. "Phil is fond of me—but I wouldn't want to marry him now. He's a lawyer, though—he could get a divorce for me. Probably Jim would be his lawyer without me. He could go back to living with his mother, then, and they both be contented."

But her fighting spirit refused to let her think seriously of leaving her husband so soon, vanquished by his mother. And her sense of fairness sided with her. After all, his mother had been black to her, and she had to be fair to her. "If it was your son," it said to her, "wouldn't you feel that you ought to be able to depend on him in a time of trouble? Would you want to give him up completely to another woman?"

She went to sleep at last, but and bewitched, but resolved to make another try at straightening things out. Never before in her life had things gone wrong with her; petted and pampered, she had always known only the bright side of life until now, and the whole future looked black to her. She didn't know how to handle it.

She realized when she woke in the morning to find Jim standing beside her bed that she expected her to be cross with him. Smiling, she lifted her arms and drew him down to the edge of the bed.

"Sorry I was asleep last night, dear," she told him. "I missed you."

He smiled at her, and she felt a little better. "I can't get up to see you, Cynthia," he answered gravely, and when they had seated themselves at a table by the window he went on, "Remember what I told you the other night—I'll always come to you if you want me to, and if things get too hard for you here you can always come to me."

Cynthia smiled, wistfully. And then, glancing up, she beheld Madame Leland at a neighboring table. Her heart sank, as her mother-in-law favored her with a gracious nod.

A Difficult Situation.

SUCH IS LIFE
"Eighteen years ago I had three ribs broken, fourteen years ago my right leg; eleven years ago I nearly went over with typhoid fever and since then have had awful stomach and liver trouble. Was filled with gas most all the time. I would have called attacks so bad as to become unconscious. No medicine helped me and doctors advised an operation. One day talking with a stranger he recommended May's Wonderful Remedy, which helped me at once." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and always the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists.
