MUCH ROAD WORK BY FOREST SERVICE

More than 1,800 miles of roads and nearly 4,000 miles of trails were constructed within or adjacent to the 147 national forests during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, according to the chief forester's annual report, copies of which have been received by District Forester C. M. Granger, in Portland. In addition, maintenance work was performed on 7,423 miles of roads and 32,106 miles of trails. Including the construction work completed within the last year the total mileage of national forest roads constructed by June 30, 1924, stood at 8,707 and the total mileage of trails at 15,855.

During 1924, on the national forests of Oregon and Washington, a total of 390 miles of forest highways were completed, the work consisting of new construction, repair and betterment. On secondary or forest development roads in the two states 225 miles were either built or repaired.

The sum of $9,243,142 was expended on the road and trail work of the forest service on all of the national forests during the last fiscal year, the report says. This sum was augmented by funds from cooperative agencies such as states, counties, and local organizations.

Thirty-one states and Alaska share in the pro rata distribution of funds made each year by the forest service to those states and territories containing national forest lands.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

CYNTHIA AND JIM LELAND, bride and groom, settle in their new home to find that Jim's mother expects to rule their lives. Cynthia rebels; Jim's devotion to his mother blinds him. Cynthia meets PHIL GRAHAM, an old friend, and invites him home for the night.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

X—A DIFFICULT SITUATION

As Cynthia glanced at the adjacent table at which her mother-in-law was lunching, Phil Graham paled, looked also, and groaned softly.

"Does that mean more trouble for you, Cynthia?" he asked.

She nodded.

"Be careful what you say—I'm sure we can be overheard," she replied.

"That's one of my sisters-in-law with Madame Leland—"

"K's Louella. Oh, well—I might have known this would happen. Jim and I had things nicely straightened out this morning."

"And then I came along and upset them."

"No, I did, by accepting your invitation to have luncheon with you. But I don't see why I can't all right; there's nothing dreadful about lunching with an old friend, surely, even though I am a bride."

"I don't see why there should be," Graham agreed. "Now, tell me what you want to eat, and then we'll have a farewell visit, and I'll clear out of your way for good."

Cynthia's eyes filled with tears. She was vexed at seeing Madame Leland, realizing that her mother-in-law would probably criticize her severely for being there with Phil. Wretchedly she ate food that tasted like sawdust, barely listening to what Phil was saying. She hated to let him go like this, but her own troubles occupied her mind so fully that she could not think of anything else. And when they had finished luncheon and were saying good-bye at the restaurant door, she breathed a deep sigh of relief.

But when he had gone she felt strangely lost without him. She walked slowly down the street, wondering what she would do with the rest of her afternoon.

At home she could have called up any one of half a dozen girls and had a delightful afternoon. But she had lived in her new home for so short a time that she had no friends, and as far as her new acquaintances seemed friendly enough to be casually telephoned.

"Oh, well, I'll have my hair shampooed," she decided suddenly, pausing opposite a shop whose window was marked "Elise." She remembered that Madame Leland said she absolutely all the best people went to Elise for shampoo; there was nobody like her. Cynthia went into the shop slowly, half-hoping that she could not get an appointment; as soon as she had made the decision she had wondered why she wanted to spend an hour in the hot indoors when it was such a beautiful day.

"Mrs. Leland? Oh, Mrs. James Leland. Yes, indeed, we can take you at once—just step into that third booth—that's the one. An attendant will be with you at once."

Cynthia realized that "Elise" was scrutinizing her minutely, taking in every detail of her costume.

"She'll tell the girls in the shop about me later, or her friends, I suppose," she mused. "Of course she knows all about Jim's marrying me, and all that."

"I guess old Mrs. Leland runs her own!"

PARDONED CHINK IS TONG VICTIM

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 10.—Tom Lem, alias Ching Lem and Chin Lim, pardoned from a life term in the state penitentiary here in December 1922, is dead, a Tong victim, in Chicago, according to a letter received by Warden Dalrymple from Margan A. Collins, superintendent of Chicago police.

Lem was sent up to the Oregon prison from Union county for a tong killing at La Grande. For nearly 2 years he was lost sight of. Then a few weeks ago, Warden Dalrymple received a letter from Oakpark, Ill., asking for Lem's fingerprint records and description and it developed that he had pulled a killing there. It seems that he was released and went to Chicago where tong enemies "got him."

WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR ENSUING WEEK

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10.—The weather outlook for the week beginning January 11, was announced here today by the United States Weather Bureau as follows:

Washington—Oregon: Mostly cloudy weather with rains in the which he lost his world's heavy-weight championship, rested easily last night in a hospital. Lewis suffered a sprain of the sacro-lumbar joints when he slipped or was thrown outside the ring.

Bob Page, "battling barrister," middleweight champion when the two met in a Detroit arena last night. The champion piling up lead on points that was well represented in the referee's decision that the Pittsburgher won.

An endurance bowling record of 74 consecutive games during 14 hours on the drive ways made recently by Earl Smith of Lima, Ohio, has been disputed by Bill Gray of Vancouver, B. C. Gray claims that in January, 1914, he rolled continuously 153 hours, completing 120 games for a grand average of 180.60. He declared his highest game was 241 and the lowest 118.

Bobby Harper of Seattle, Pacific northwest welterweight champion, retained his title in Everett, Wash., last night via the technical knockout route when the referee stopped the bout in the third round, after Wanda of Portland, Ore., having taken a bad lacing from the third on.

"I guess old Mrs. Leland runs her own!"

the way the town talked about her! They knew her difficulties as well as she did, and were amused by them! And speaking as they had of Phil Graham and her. "All but took her in his arms"—indeed!

"I've decided not to have my hair done this afternoon, after all," she told the attendant who came into the booth just then, and hurried from the shop. She wanted to hide in the darkest corner of her house—or better still, not to go to that hateful house at all. Madame Leland's gift—how could she ever stay in it again?

She walked through the park, and reaching the end of it, turned and walked back again, trying to think, but unable to disentangle her thoughts. If only she could explain to Jim how homesick and lonely she felt, and how hard it was for her to live up to his mother's expectations. If only she could let her go home for just a little while, back to the city where she knew everybody and people didn't misjudge her because they knew that she meant to do the right thing.

"Probably everybody in town will be talking about Phil and me by tonight," she reflected miserably. "Well, I'll tell Jim about it the minute he gets home; at least he'll know the truth, and then it won't matter what anyone else thinks."

But she reached home at five o'clock to find a telegram from Jim awaiting her.

"Couldn't reach you by phone," it said. "Called out of town suddenly back next week. Letter follows."

INTEREST IN NEW CARS IS SHOWN

The public is more interested in motor cars this year than ever if the number of people visiting our show rooms is any criterion, says Ed Marsh, local Chevrolet dealer.

The dismantled chassis display showing the new mechanical changes and refinements seems to be the chief center of interest, although the body refinements and the indestructible Duco finish get their share of attention.

The most enthusiasm is shown by those who have driven the new car, after they have tested it out over all types of roads and fully realized the ease of operation and riding qualities.

GOLF BALL WILL GET ATTENTION

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—One of the smallest factors in the game, yet one of the most important, will receive the major portion of attention today at the annual session of the United States Golf Association. The ball to be used in the future is the topic and a report will be made by the association's committee.

Much of the opposition to the larger sphere which has been recommended in the United States is said to have come from Great Britain where golf originated. The Scotch and English would retain the old style. Golf enthusiasts recall that objections to ribbed clubs also came from the other side of the ocean. The ribs develop the "spin" which brings about the dead stop necessary to the play of a championship contender when he encounters an "island" green, one surrounded by traps.

Jack Britton, former welterweight champion of the world, will appear in a San Francisco ring next Friday night, it is announced by local promoters. His opponent had not yet been selected nor has it been determined what number of rounds the event will be.

Jim Crowley, one of the backfield stars of the Notre Dame University football eleven who has been ill in a San Francisco hospital since Saturday morning, is expected to be able to return to South Bend, Ind., some time next week, according to Dr. John Galloway, the attending physician. Crowley's condition is satisfactory although he is recovering his strength slowly. Dr. Galloway reported today that the Notre Dame player suffered a collapse following the game with Stanford University New Year's Day at Pasadena.

"Bernardise" Billy Wells, English welterweight champion, got off to a flying start in his first fight since his return to the ring in this district since last winter when he handed out a lacing to Chick Roach in an eight round bout at San Francisco last night.

Wells seemed at home over the long distance route and easily captured every one of the eight rounds from his opponent who is rated as one of the leading welterweights of the San Francisco Bay region.

Eddie "Cannonball" Martin, champion of bantamweight boxers, may lose a trip to California, where he expects to appear under the new 12 round law as a result of his failure to fight during a contest in Brooklyn Wednesday night. Martin and his opponent Augie Pizano, were ordered out of the ring after three rounds fighting and boxing. The title was not at stake as Pizano weighed four pounds more than the bantamweight limit of 118. Martin may draw a suspension from the New York State Athletic Commission, and yet his previous good record may react in his favor.
