FISHERMEN WILL FIGHT CLOSING LAW

Plans of the game department of the Oregon Game and Fish commission will be rent asunder, in so far as they relate to closing the Umpqua to commercial crab fishing if merchants and fishermen of this section have their way.

William Harris on last week-end was circulating a subscription list among merchants and residents here in order to finance a well organized plan to defeat the proposed legislation which would wipe out a $75,000 annual industry. It is the plan to send J. A. Zachary to Salem to look after the interests of the commercial fishermen and to develop sentiment against such legislation as is proposed by Commissioner Burgduff, in so far as it relates to the Umpqua.

At the December meeting of the Umpqua Fishermen's and Fish dealers association at the Moose hall in Reedsport, it was voted that each individual fisherman should pledge 5,000 to a fund with which to fight the proposed legislation. Last week the merchants and business men contributed toward such a fund.

Co-operation of the various civic organizations is being sought and steps will be taken by lobbyists to protect the interests of the fishermen in entire District No. 2.

A member of the Roseburg chamber of commerce was here the first of the week gathering data on the proposition. That organization is to oppose the proposed legislation.

TRIAL OF STOKES IS STARTED TODAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Trial of W. E. D. Stokes, wealthy New York hotel man, Daniel Nugent, his New York attorney and several others charged with attempt to defame the character of Mrs. W. Ellwood Stokes, in connection with her divorce action in New York was set for today.

A continuance was in prospect however as Mrs. Stokes has asked that charges against Stokes be dropped.

Mrs. Stokes explained in a letter to the state's attorney that illness in her family, coupled with the fact that she was not in good health, caused her to make the request.

The state's attorney indicated, however, he was disposed to proceed with the prosecution, but might have an assistant request a continuance as a result of request of counsel for one of the defendants who was engaged in other litigation.

Mrs. Stokes appeared before the Grand Jury here to obtain the indictment of her husband, his attorneys, and several others, charging they conspired to try to prove she was formerly an inmate of a notorious Chicago club in order to aid Stoke's divorce case.

PIONEER RESIDENT OF CITY IS DEAD

Thomas Critser, aged 79 years, died Saturday evening at his home on Rast Avenue after a very short illness. Mr. Critser was a resident of Roseburg for more than 52 years, and was very well known in this city. He had been ill but two days when death occurred.

Mr. Critser was born in Boone county, Indiana, Jan. 25, 1845, later moving to Iowa. When he was 16 years of age he enlisted as a private in the 13th Iowa infantry, to serve during the Civil War, but one year later, was discharged because of total physical disability.

In the spring of 1863 he came across the plains with his father, the trip being made with ox and horse teams. The trip took them until the fall of 1863 when they reached Roseburg.

Mr. Critser engaged in farming for a number of years and from 1874 to 1884 was interested in the mining business at Graves Creek, where he and Judge J. C. Fullerton and J. G. Rast of this city were concerned in the development of the mining property. They developed the Tennessee ledge near Quine's Creek, one of the most successful mines in the county.

From 1884 to 1898 he was engaged in the flour mill business as a member of the firm of Rast and Critser.

He was married on Nov. 4, 1869, to Miss Lydia Jones, a daughter of A. Jones, one of the county's pioneers. Three sons, Wallin, of West Fork, Thomas of Leland, and Fred of Roseburg, and one daughter, Mrs. J. A. Cobb, of Marshfield, were born to the union. The widow also survives. Mr. Critser leaves a sister residing in Coos county and a brother John, in Grants Pass, as well as many close friends.

The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Undertaking parlors. Hon. J. W. Hamilton will deliver the eulogy. Interment will take place in the Masonic cemetery.

JEWS REBUILDING PALESTINE IS TOPIC

Many have wondered why so numerous a people as the Jews do not have a nation of their own, especially when 3,000 years ago they were the most prominent people upon the earth. The greatest and most wonderful and mysterious book on earth is the Bible, which is confessedly a Jewish production, inspired by the great Creator. Why have the dealings of God with the Jews been so peculiar? Why have the Jews shunned Christianity? Why is Zionism now engaging the attention of Jews the world over?

When God made promise to Abraham respecting the land which is now Palestine that all the land which he could see in every direction would be given to him and to his posterity for an everlasting possession, did God keep His word? Or is the fulfillment still future; and, if so, what has the present activity in Palestine to do with the promise?

House and office buildings are going up; orchards and gardens are being planted; roads are being built; hospitals and nurseries have been established; millions of dollars are flowing to Jerusalem; and every month thousands of Jews are going thither. Railroads are being built and many automobile routes have been established in the Holy Land. Great activity prevails and much encouragement comes from all parts of the world. What is the meaning?

Some claim that the Bible teaches that Jerusalem ultimately shall become the capital of the world. What is the prospect of this becoming a fact? And what shall be the system of government? Will such an arrangement be beneficial to the world at large? Have the radio and its present popularity anything to do with the fulfilment of prophecy?

A lecture on "Jews Rebuilding Palestine—the Reason" answering these questions will be given by Mr. E. J. Eshleman of New York, under the auspices of the International Bible Students Association, local branch, in the Moose hall, Wednesday, January 14 at 7:30 p. m. The speaker is said to be informed on these and kindred subjects; and all are invited to hear him, as the lecture is free, and no collection will be taken.

One Wife on Approval

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

CYNTHIA and JIM LELAND, bride and groom, settle in their new home to find that Jim's mother expects to rule their lives. Cynthia rebels; Jim's devotion to his mother blinds him. Cynthia meets PHIL GRAHAM, an old friend, and invites him home for the night.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XI—COMPLICATIONS

As Cynthia stood staring at her husband's telegram Madame Leland appeared in the library doorway. "Ah, Cynthia," she murmured sweetly. "I was waiting for you. I'm going to take you home with me to stay while James is away. There's no need of keeping the two houses open, with just a lone woman staying in each one. We can be company for each other."

VIOLET DARE

Cynthia hesitated about replying, not knowing just what to say. She did not want to stay with her mother-in-law; but she realized that Madame Leland was trying hard to overlook everything and be friendly, and that she too must do her part.

"That was so kind of you," she answered after a moment. "I'll run upstairs and pack a bag, and be with you immediately."

"Oh, I had Frances pack your bag while I waited; I supervised it myself, so I'm sure that you'll have everything you want," replied Madame Leland calmly. Cynthia's face burned. She could not bear to have anyone take her so for granted as her mother-in-law did. She longed now to cry out that she would stay in her own home, where she wanted to be; that she would not go a step toward the other house.

But remembering her vow of the night before she merely followed Jim's mother out to the car that had just arrived, and sat quietly listening while Madame Leland talked all the way to her home about Jim's trip, and how long he would be gone.

It seemed to Cynthia, as she unpacked her belongings in Madame Leland's guest room, that she never could stay there a single night. She wanted Jim more than she ever had before. If only he had been there with her, to take her in his arms and kiss her and tell her that nothing mattered, anyway, she could have stayed quite cheerfully. But to see Madame Leland all day and every day and never be allowed to have a thought of her own was a prospect that she would have given anything to avoid.

She wondered how long Madame Leland would avoid the subject of Phil Graham. Would she completely ignore having seen them having luncheon, that day, or would she tactfully bring it up later?

That question was answered when dessert had been served and the maid had withdrawn.

"Cynthia dear, I don't want you to think that I' finding fault with you, but do you think it was quite wise to greet your friend, Mr.—er—Mr. Waite, is it, so exuberantly this noon?"

"His name is Graham," said Cynthia, steadily enough. "And I hadn't realized that I was acting unconventionally. He's such an old friend, really like a brother to me, and I was awfully glad to see him."

"Yes, of course; but a young woman, and especially a bride, has to be careful, especially when she's a stranger in her new home city," Mrs. Leland went on, smoothly. Cynthia wished that she wouldn't be quite so suave about it. Why pretend to be so sweet when she really didn't feel that way at all?

"A number of persons spoke to me about it," Madame Leland went on, between spoonfuls of frozen pudding, "and Louella asked me if I didn't think I ought to suggest to you that you act with a little more restraint."

"Louella probaby never had a man that glad to see her in her life," thought Cynthia, but she kept the thought to herself, and merely murmured "Oh, yes," as if the words had not cut her cruelly.

"You see, people are so quick to misunderstand a girl; why, I remember before Louella and Marjorie were married, I never even allowed them to lunch alone with a man, except at Lewis', where they'd been allowed to go as very young girls; everyone realizes that it's quite all right for a girl who's made her debut to lunch unchaperoned at Lewis'."

"Then I suppose it would have been all right if Phil and I had gone there today?" asked Cynthia, a hint of malice in her tone at what must seem like mere misunderstanding on her part.

"Well, I hardly think so. Frankly, Cynthia, it seems to me that it would have been much better if you had not lunched alone anywhere with Mr. Graham. Now, if you had asked someone else to go with you—myself, for instance, or Louella—"

"I had Frances pack your bag."

"But I had understood that you were frightfully upset about the financial matters you've been discussing with Jim, and so I couldn't feel free to ask you. And Louella is so busy with her children at noon as a rule; I wouldn't have dared ask her."

Cynthia hated herself for the pretense she was making of having wanted to ask them; she hadn't even thought of doing so, of course. But she was thoroughly out of patience with Madame Leland, who now, cornered, admitted that it did seem that Cynthia could not have followed her suggestion.

"But you shouldn't have lunched with him at all, under those circumstances," she concluded. "It was really most unwise. James is so likely to overlook such matters that I really must be severe with you, Cynthia. Don't do it again, will you?"

"Hardly," answered Cynthia, staring at her plate and hoping that the tears in her eyes would not fall. "Phil's gone away, and said when he left that he wouldn't be back again. When the people at home hear how unwelcome he was in my home they aren't likely to come to see me if they happen to be in town."

And in silence that spoke louder than many words, Madame Leland led the way to the drawing room.

STILL SEIZED BY OFFICERS IN USE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12. — Seizing a still and jailing the distiller, is all in an ordinary day's work for members of the District Attorney's dry-squad, but today the squad was busy checking up the antecedents of a 500 gallon still seized on the premises of Sidney Miller.

Investigators were not surprised to find a still in operation, they said for they had expected to arrest Miller on a liquor charge, but they were astounded to note a neat county tag hanging on the copper device, bearing the name of a former owner and the date, "July 7, 1924", when the still had been seized in a previous raid and confiscated as evidence. The tag checked with the records, but neither tag nor records told how the still came to be back "in service" so soon.

MUSSOLINI'S FATE HANGS IN BALANCE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

ROME, Jan. 12.—An air of suppressed excitement and expectation pervaded Rome today, with the reassembling of parliament for consideration of Premier Mussolin's electoral reform bill.

The premier this morning presided over a council of ministers to decide on a plan of campaign for the parliamentary session starting in the afternoon.

In the evening he is to preside over the Grand Fasciti council in the hall of the consistory of the Palazzo Venezia.

This meeting is to lay down rules for upholding and applying Fascist principles in the light of the present political struggle.

Although no disorders were expected the government took precautions. The police and carabineers centered their forces at strategic points and increased the guards around their offices of the opposition newspapers to prevent violence by extremist fascisto.

The deputies of the Aventine opposition have thus far kept the country in the dark whether they will abandon their policy, adopted after the murder of Deputy Matteotti, abstaining from attendance in the Chamber of Deputies.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Burning of the premises of a Catholic newspaper and other alleged Fascist excesses at Pisa, Italy, have drawn a violent protest from the clergy, according to a Rome dispatch to the Daily Telegraph.

A manifesto signed by Cardinal Maffi has been issued, according to the dispatch, deploring the violence, especially the fact of its being directed against a Catholic paper which has always held aloof from partisan strife. The manifesto expresses hope that the distressing disturbances will cease and that peace will return to the nation.

BRAKEMAN OVERCOME BY GASES

WILKESON, Wash., Jan. 12.—Overcome by the gases of a coal burning engine, William Flisizk, 23, working as a brakeman on the mine engine of the Wilkeson Coal and Coke company, was drowned yesterday, when he fell face down in a pool of water not over three inches deep.

A car had been derailed and Flisizk went forward to speak to Engineer H. H. Ryan and said in leaving that he would signal when the car was on the track again.

Fifteen minutes passed and Ryan going to investigate found Flisizk laying prone in the water and went to his aid. He too was overcome, however, and Muriel Wilkes, who came to the aid of the men got them to fresh air and applied resusciation. Ryan was revived but two hours work on Flisizk failed to bring him back to life.
