BROCCOLI CROP IS BADLY HURT

Crop in Southern Part of County Will Make Up Bulk of Shipment.

LOSS IS HEAVY

In Spite of Reverses This Year, County Agent Advises Sticking to Industry.

The broccoli crop in the Umpqua Valley has been practically destroyed by the unusual degree of frost experienced some two weeks ago. The County Agent, H. W. Cooney, has refrained from advancing an opinion as to the condition of the crop until he could be sure of the actual damage done.

The loss of the crop in the main valley represents a very large financial loss to all the growers, but it does not set aside the fact that the crop still remains by all odds the best paying vegetable crop produced by our farmers.

A review in the industry for a period of fifteen years clearly points out the fact that the crop starts well at the top of agricultural crop risks.

We appreciate keenly the position of many growers in the loss of the crop, which may give rise to serious thought among the younger growers as to whether or not they should proceed with 1925 planting of broccoli or try some other vegetable.

It is upon this point that the County Agent has consulted with many growers in all parts of the broccoli growing districts. The advice has been and will continue to be one of caution when a grower contemplates the production of a substitute vegetable upon fields where broccoli has been a proven success in years past.

The successful production of any vegetable commercially depends upon many factors. A careful analysis of all production and marketing factors is of the greatest import.

The history of successful production of any agricultural crop comes slowly over a period of years. This fact does not detract in any way from value of any plan for crop experiment. All trials of new vegetables or fruits should be considered as purely experimental until the annual tests have covered a sufficient number of seasons to show their commercial adaptability to our climatic conditions and varying soil types, together with market demands.

Growers have long experienced the many exciting problems of production, but it is of comparatively recent times that the grower has learned that his interests do not stop with the harvest of the crop. The successful marketing of any crop calls for as high a degree of organization and skill as the production of the crop.

The successful marketing of the broccoli crop in this county is entirely responsible for the popularity of this vegetable and the position it now occupies in our agriculture.

When the final analysis is struck it can be said that substitution is not as satisfactory as the original article.

THEATRES

Liberty Theatre. Probably no writer has caught the spirit of the Great West as faithfully as Bret Harte. And no motion picture actor has interpreted that spirit as faithfully as Harry Carey.

When the two of them are brought together—Harry Carey as the hero of Bret Harte's greatest story, "Tennessee's Pardner"—you can be sure of a corking good picture.

"The Flaming Forties" is the name under which "Tennessee's Pardner" has been brought to the screen. It is not only one of the best Western dramas in which Harry Carey has ever appeared, but we consider it one of the most thrilling pictures that we have had the pleasure to offer. At the Liberty theatre today and tomorrow.

Antlers Theatre. In producing "Frigorous Sal," his latest First National picture, which opened at the Antlers theatre yesterday, J. K. McDonald has given the screen a worthy successor to "Boy of Mine." The latter was a Booth Tarkenton story. The photography was so good that it success was regarded as accidental by those who knew that it was only the second picture McDonald had ever made.

But "Frigorous Sal" maintains the high standard that this young producer has set through his previous pictures. The story is his own. It was directed by Victor L. Schertzinger, and the cast includes Eugene O'Brien, Mae Busch, Ben Alexander, Hom Santschi, Mitchell Lewis and Mildred Harris.
