CHAIRMEN NAMED TO HEAD ACTIVITIES

The Manufactured Products Committee of the chamber of commerce held its organization meeting at the chamber office yesterday afternoon. All members of the committee were present. Chairman T. H. Ness presided.

After a thorough discussion of the matter of new industries for Roseburg, the committee was organized by the appointment of the following chairman for the sub-committee:

Analysis of Industrial Conditions—Horace Berg, chairman.

Furnish Industrial Data — A. Bashford, chairman.

Securing New Industries, Sites and Trackage—A. N. Hildebrand.

Processing Fruit—A. J. Geddes.

Timber and Mining—Thos. H. Ness.

As with the Raw Products Committee in session Tuesday the Manufactured Products committee set a new pace in the matter of committee interest and it is certain that the wish of many of our people that new industries be located in Roseburg the coming year, will be realized. The committee is a unit in expressing the opinion that not only will new industries be located here, but those already located in Roseburg will enjoy an increase in business during 1925. At least whole-hearted efforts will be put forward to that end.

Neglected Cough Dangerous—How to Stop It Quickly

When the delicate tissues of your throat are raw and sore from coughing, and your strength is exhausted with the constant hacking, you may fall an easy prey to more serious trouble. So stop the cough the quickest you can, before it creeps too deep.

By a very simple treatment you can stop the spells practically at once, and relieve the heaviest cough often in 24 hours. The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing, without following with water. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. With the cause treated in this way, the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription contains no harmful drugs. It simply helps Nature. It is for coughs, chest colds, hoarseness, bronchitis and spasmodic croup. Very economical, too, the dose is only one teaspoonful. For sale at all good druggists. Ask for

SITE OFFERED FOR VETERAN HOSPITAL

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Jan. 14. — The offer to the federal government of a free ten-acre site on the University of Oregon school of medicine campus for a U. S. veterans' hospital was authorized by the University board of regents at its meeting today.

The site is part of the newly acquired tract of 88 acres, adjacent to the medical school campus and known as Sam Jackson Park, which was given to the University last Christmas by Mrs. Maria Jackson and Phillip Jackson, widow and son of the late C. S. Jackson of Portland. Provision was made by the donors enabling the deeding of portions of the newly acquired tract.

The offer of the ten acres to the government stipulates expressly that the purpose shall be for a Veterans Bureau hospital to be built and operated thereon. If Congress allocates a Veterans Bureau hospital to the Pacific Northwest, it is hoped that the government will apreciate the advantages of proximity of such a structure to the medical school and hospital buildings in Portland, which is the acknowledged medical center in the Pacific Northwest.

For more than a year past negotiations have been carried on by the Oregon department of the American Legion, other veteran bodies and the Portland Chamber of Commerce to bring about the establishment of a Veterans' bureau hospital in this state.

The board of regents adopted resolutions yesterday formally thanking the donors of the Sam Jackson Park tract, pointing out that the gift affords opportunity for the reasonal expansion of the medical center and for affiliated or beneficial institutions, and for more adequate research into the causes and methods of prevention of disease in Oregon.

The board acknowledged the gift of $5,000 from Dr. Noble Wiley Jones, a Portland physician, for the establishment of a fellowship in the department of pathology of the medical school, the income from which is to be used to aid deserving and diligent students carrying on special work in that department. Dr. Jones has already provided such an income annually for five years, and now desires to perpetuate the annuity. In addition, he has given $300 annually to bring some distinguished scientist to the medical school for a series of lectures.

In his annual report Portland has appropriated $5,000 for the equipment of the out-patient department of the $200,000 Doernbecher Memorial Hospital for Children. Ground will be broken for the hospital on the medical school campus shortly.

Dean Dillehunt also reported: During the past year 15,000 individuals have been ministered to at the Portland Dispensary, representing ambulatory cases not only from Multnomah county, but from all parts of the state. The despensary is operated jointly by the medical school and other medical, state, and ameliorative organizations.

About 4,000 persons have been cared for by the school of medicine staff at the Multnomah hospital during the year and more than forty have been committed for care under the state children's hospital service law.

The medical school held two extension clinics for sick and deabled children. At Pendleton, forty-eight children were examined and treatment outlined; at Medford, sixty-six were given a similar attention. In several instances the children were committed to the medical school for treatment.

PENNEY MANAGERS GO TO ATLANTIC CITY

"On to Atlantic City," is the watchword of an army that will begin to mobilize in the west tonight, and gathering strength as it goes eastward. This army will not be equipped with gas masks, trench bombs and poisonous gas, but the main "weapon" carried by the great majority will be a pair of blunt-pointed scissors, and the regiment might be termed the Penney Brigade.

The event at Atlantic City this month is the national convention of the J. C. Penney Company store managers from all over the United States, and more than 1000 people are expected to be present. W. E. Strawn, manager of the Roseburg store, will leave here tonight on 54, and will join the Oregon delegation at Portland Friday morning, leaving that city at 9:30 a. m. for Spokane. There will be two Pullmans out of Portland for the exclusive use of the Penney managers. At Spokane the Seattle bunch will join the party, and from the Inland Empire metropolis a special train of eight coaches, including baggage, diner, and observation car will be made up and proceed over the Great Northern to St. Paul where another coach will be added and the train routed over the C. B. & Q. to Chicago, and from the Illinois town to Atlantic City over the Pennsylvania.

The special train will reach Atlantic City next Tuesday morning, and the convention work will begin the day following. Mr. Strawn expects to be gone three or four weeks. During this convention every phase of the nation wide business corporation will be discussed, as all the managers and heads of departments at New York will be in attendance.

One Wife on Approval

by VIOLET DARE

Author of "Luxury of Love," "The Husband Tamer," etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

CYNTHIA AND JIM LELAND return from their honeymoon to his home town, where his mother promptly begins to try to make Cynthia over. She has accepted the girl merely on approval. Cynthia finds it difficult to get along with her sister-in-law.

LOUELLA GRAY, also, but likes her brother-in-law, Stanley. She meets

NOEL GARDNER while her husband is out of town on business partly concerned with some bad investments that his mother has made.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XIV—WORE THAN EVER!

VIOLET DARE

CYNTHIA walked slowly back to her mother-in-law's house, thinking as she sauntered along of many things; of her husband, and how soon he would be with her again; of her kitten, and its tragic death, of Noel Gardner, who had been thrust into her life so suddenly. It would be pleasant to see him that night at the Atwaters' dinner dance, a party that otherwise would have been rather stupid for her. How nice he had been that morning, how sympathetic over poor little Mark's death. Some men would have driven right on, she told herself, feeling running over a cat was nothing to make a fuss about.

She quite discounted her own charm, not realizing that few men would have left so pretty a girl standing on the curb weeping over a defunct kitten. She had been accustomed to appreciation all her life, had always been told that she was attractive and unusually pretty, but nevertheless was quite unspoiled.

Madame Leland was walking restlessly up and down the library when Cynthia entered the house.

"Cynthia!" she exclaimed abruptly, coming to the door of the room. "Will you come here at once, please?"

Cynthia obeyed, meekly enough so far as appearance was concerned, but with resentment boiling within her. Why should she be addressed as if she were a servant who had done something wrong, she asked herself.

Madame Leland had seated herself; she turned to the girl a face so distraught that Cynthia's resentment was swept away by pity. She hurried forward, all sympathy.

"Oh, has something happened?" she cried. Then, with a sinking heart: "It isn't Jim, is it? Nothing's happened to him?"

"No—no, certainly not," Madame Leland exclaimed curtly. "But something is wrong, decidedly wrong. I'd like to know just what you said to Stanley yesterday evening."

"To Stanley?" echoed Cynthia. The brief talk that she had had with her brother-in-law had quite slipped her mind. "Why—"

"When you sat talking with him, when Louella and I left you alone," Madame Leland cut in abruptly. "Just what did you say to him?"

"I don't quite remember. He asked me how I liked it here, and then—"

"Oh, don't be so stupid! I want to know what you told him about my investments."

Cynthia stared at her blankly. What had she said to Stanley? Suddenly she recalled the conversation. Stanley had talked about the town generally, and then he had asked when Jim was coming back, and she told him that while Jim was away he was going to look into the investments Madame Leland had made while Jim and she were on their honeymoon.

She repeated the scrap of talk to Madame Leland, apprehensively, as she saw how grim the elder woman's face became.

"You did tell him then—I couldn't believe it possible!" she cried. "I did not know that James had said anything to you about my investments—I'd have warned him especially not to if I hadn't taken it for granted that he'd realize that I wanted the matter kept absolutely secret.

"But even though he told you, you should have known better than to say anything to anyone else. I don't see how you could! But then some women are born tattlers; they never can keep anything to themselves," she finished, with a scornful glance at Cynthia.

"But I didn't know—I didn't understand—Jim said nothing to me about your wanting to keep the matter secret. And Louella is your own daughter, and you think so much of her; it wouldn't have occurred to me that her husband wouldn't know."

"Well, as it happens, I didn't want any of the family to know of those investments, except James. He has always advised me in business matters and—oh, I don't see how you could do it. You might have known that Stanley would go straight to Louella—she was here this morning, simply furious; said that I should have told her in the first place, that she could have told me that I'd lose my money if I bought those stocks—as if she knew anything about investing money! I'm so upset!"

What had she said to Stanley?

Cynthia watched her ruefully, as she sat wringing her hands, and then suddenly rose, to pace up and down the room, still sputtering about Cynthia's stupidity.

"But I can't see—I didn't know—" the girl began, but Madame Leland cut her short with a wave of the hand.

"You certainly should have known enough to keep your mouth closed!" she remarked majestically.

"Even though I did not know that, I do know enough to realize that it is impossible for us to remain under the same roof," announced Cynthia, sharply. "You have been unkind; I made a mistake and I'm sorry, but I just didn't know any better. You can't expect me to know all about how your family relationships stand when I've been in the family so short a time. I'm sorry about this, and I'll do what I can to make up for it, but I'm going home now." And she walked out of the house before Madame Leland could reply.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

DISAPPOINTED IN ROADS

Roseburg, Ore., Jan. 13, 1925
To the Editor:

For the past several years I have been following the reports of the Weather Bureau with the expectation of some future time settling in your beautiful valley. These reports showed that this section has the most equable climate of any point in Oregon.

I am, or was, formerly a business man conducting a large mercantile establishment in one of the middle-western cities, and have recently retired with the expectation of purchasing a farm in your valley and enjoying life for the balance of the time that I can reasonably expect to be on this earth.

Your Columbia River Highway and your Pacific Highway are both magnificent monuments to your energy and foresight, but yesterday I was taken over one of your market roads, that leading east of Roseburg to Dixonville, and I say that it was a disappointment to me. It begins to look to an outsider that Oregon is "all front and no back" as far as roads go, for this road, which my friend assured me was one of the main market roads leading into Roseburg, is practically impassible, being a complete system of chuck holes.

As I am looking for a section where the farmers, with which class I expect to cast my lot, get at least somewhere near a fair deal in the matter of roads, I am leaving today for the counties farther south and if I find the same condition exists there, will contifiue into California for a permanent location.

The fact that you are losing a citizen who can sign his check and have it honored in four figures, may mean nothing to Douglas County, but I am writing this letter to let you know how your section strikes a stranger and a prospective settler.

In the city which is still my home, we have large manufacturing plants with payrolls running into the millions, while I understand that Roseburg depends largely upon its farmers for its trade, having only the railway division and the tourist traffic outside of its agricultural resources.

It would seem that the business men of Roseburg and your Chamber of Commerce would demand of your County Court that your market roads receive some attention, if you expect the trade of the surrounding farmers. In my home city, even though we do not to a large degree depend upon the rural trade, we would expect that our County Court either keep up our roads or else get off the job and permit some one to fill the office who could.

My friend and I also made a trip over the road leading into Melrose, and while that road is full of bumps, it is not as bad as that leading east of your city.

It has been a disappointment to me, after living in the expectation of some time settling in your beautiful valley, to move on, but I can not locate in a community and receive the attention, or lack of attention, that your farming element seem willing to endure.

Yours very truly,
CHAS. H. HENDERSON.
