Cadman-Tsianina Concert Coming Musical Event

If a person were to ask Charles Wakefield Cadman how he came to be associated with the full-blooded Indian singer Princess Tsianina, he would probably answer: "It was Fate" or else "It was just a natural consequence." And therey hangs a little tale. One or two investigators in the field of American Indian Lore had made public their ethnological and musical findings quite a few years before Cadman with his enthusiasm came upon the scene. But their presentation of the subject had been more stereotyped, less of an "entertainment" than Cadman foresaw to be the logical thing. It was in 1908 that Cadman conceived the idea of his "Indian Music-Talk," and it is significant that the words "music-talk" are now a part of American musical language as they have been applied to various subjects by many lecturers and musicians now in the concert field. The composer seemed to feel that the public would not "stand" a dry lecture-recital on the subject of Indian folk-lore, so he decided to design a program that would contain three-fourths vocal and instrumental material based on native themes, and one-fourth analysis delivered in an untechnical manner with succinct and snappy sentences; augmented by a collection of native musical instruments including a genuine flageolet.

Constance Talmadge Dresses Her Moods in Trailing Chiffons or Youthfully Smart Mandarin Suits

To fit the mood, fashion has been annually kind this season. In olden days thoughts of negligees were relegated to trailing garments in beautiful silks, satins and chiffons. But nowadays it is possible to be comfortable as well as correctly attired for the boudoir in a youthfully appealing Mandarin suit or gown. Constance Talmadge, who is appearing "with so much success in her new first National picture, 'Her Night of Romance,' has selected negligees of varying lines for the mood which best suits them. For the luxury loving mood, Miss Talmadge is happiest in the dainty and exquisite gown of chiffon which features fashion's newest

Gymnasium Exhibition at Women's Club Meeting

A demonstration of gymnastic and dance work, by Miss Solan assisted by three of her pupils, entertained the members of the Business and Professional Women's club at their meeting Friday evening. ### Antlers Theatre

One of the most romantic phases of the world's history, and certainly the most spectacular period in American chronicles, is slowly vanishing. The passing of the old American West, the cowboys, the cattle, and the hardy pioneers who invaded and conquered a great empire, these are the highlights of "Sundown," the first National production, which comes to the Antlers Theatre on Sunday and Monday. Earl Hudson's story, as presented in "Sundown," has raised the question in the minds of Americans as to how the future supply of this nation. During the last two decades the great cattle owners of the West have been gradually forced to seek new grazing lands. This condition was brought about by homesteaders who were apportioned small sections of land by government grants.

Shapely Ankles Return With Smart Kid Boots

No more will milady be seen on the winter street in slippers cut down to the sole, and colored hose! Her ankles, if she is truly smart, are now to be encased for the winter and spring in high topped kid shoes, for this is the hair which has apparently intoxicated the leading shoe designers of Paris. After an absence of five years, trim snugly fitting high shoes that look so much like silky slippers and accentuate the shapely ankle are once more making their appearance in the Paris shops and on the boulevards. This would seem to confirm the American theory for kid footwear by leading it to new heights. The model shown above

THE FORMAL GOWN

The gown for formal occasions has a tendency to feature trains to be they ever so short and narrow. The old broad train that swept the floor in grandma's day has, of course, gone the way of the buckle and sixteen inch waist. But gaining steadily in popularity is the dress of graceful line which gives a slender silhouette and is made formal by a trailing bit of chiffon.

Corinne Griffith, in "Love's Wilderness," a First National picture, wears with distinction a sophisticated gown of beaded satin. The skirt, in keeping with the fashion popularized by Paris, is quite short and slightly draped in front.

The gown glisters, every inch of it with embroidery in crystal beads and pearls. The train, of softest chiffon, falls gracefully from the waist and is weighted with the exquisite embroidery of shining beads, which add brilliance to the gown. While, so frequently selected for the formal gown, is worn by Miss Griffith with stunning results. The glistening crystal beads relieve the gown of being colorless. Fats, which are a new note in accessories, accompany the smartest evening gowns, and Miss Griffith has chosen a very lovely one of feathers, uncurled on a tortoise shell frame.
