

ALLEGES ATTACK AT "GIN PARTY"

HENRIETTA HAMMOND & MONTCLAIR PARSONAGE

The story told by Miss Henrietta Hammond of a wild party in a Montclair, N. J. Presbyterian parsonage, where she said she had her first drink of gin, resulted in the conviction of Philip Wylie, Princeton graduate and preacher's son, on the charge of attacking her. The story was denied by Wylie, who has appealed.

DAUGHERTY NOT ALLOWED TO TELL ALL THE DETAILS

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney General, appeared today to testify for the defense today at the trial of Thomas B. Felder and Gaston B. Means, former agent of the department of justice before Federal Judge William E. Lindley and a jury.

He was accompanied by William J. Burns, former chief agent of the department of justice.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney General called as a witness for the defense today in the Means-Felder trial was refused permission by Federal Judge Lindley to tell "the details of the situation" existing at Washington during the events leading up to the indictment of the defendants.

Mr. Daugherty said that for some time the state of affairs in Washington was such that there were men in the capital who were hell bound and spell bound.

Mr. Daugherty denied that Thomas B. Felder, one of the defendants, ever talked to him about indictments then pending against the Crager system, a company manufacturing glass caskets.

Mr. Daugherty denied that Mr. Daugherty in attempts to quash the glass caskets indictments.

Keith S. Boehm, nineteen-year-old Denver, Colo., high school boy, shown here with his mother, Mrs. Evelyn S. Boehm, charges that he was kidnaped from their home in a Denver hotel by a group of Ku Klux Klansmen and taken to the offices of Dr. John G. Locke, Grand Dragon of the Colorado Klan, where he was compelled to marry Miss May Nash. Boehm told the authorities he was threatened with death unless he went through with the marriage ceremony. Dr. Locke denied any force or intimidation had been used to bring about the marriage.

WHEAT PRICES ON INCREASE TODAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—With buying on an immense scale wheat rose today to $1.59 3/4, within 1-4 cent of $2 a bushel for May delivery. This price of $1.59 3/4 virtually fulfilled predictions which have been current for months that wheat would reach $2.

The rise today accompanied reports that farmers in Argentina were holding their wheat back for higher prices and that Hungary and other European countries which usually are exporters had become importers.

SOCIETY OF LEES WILL PRESENT PEW

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., Jan. 27.—The society of Lees of Virginia presented to the Washington Memorial Chapel here a choir pew in honor of the Lees who served in the revolutionary war and an endowment for maintenance of the chapel choir.

The pew is to be of oak, hand carved with the names of the Lees who served in the war.

STATE GOVERNORS WILL BE GUESTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Invitations have been sent out by the local inaugural committee to all state governors to participate in the parade and other inaugural ceremonies in Washington on March 4. Attendance of the governors has long been a tradition in the inaugural program and their escorts in the past have lent much of the color to inaugural processions.

IMPROVEMENT IS SHOWN IN REPORT

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 27.—Further moderate improvement in business was reported during December 1924, continuing a movement which carried business activity from the semi-depression of mid-summer to approximately normal levels at the close of the year. It was stated in a report issued today by John Perrin, federal reserve agent and chairman of the board for the twelfth district, states of the Pacific slope.

STARMER WILL MAKE REPORT TO COMMITTEE

Benton was paid by the county for his help. "Cleaver's report not only gives the state credit for these jobs but he took Benton's reports and added the six months' report to the yearly report, when the yearly report actually covered all of the activities mentioned by Benton.

"At the time I refused to give a deputy sheriff's commission to the man who had been a member of my force since then."

HOLDING REVIVAL AT RIVERSIDE

In answer to a number of requests from Riverside and Edenhower, Rev. L. F. Burror, pastor of the Bible Standard Mission, will open a series of meetings in the Riverside school house. Services starting tonight at 7:30, and continuing every night, except Saturday this week and next. Mr. Burror has been very successful as an evangelist, having been engaged in evangelistic work for some time previous to his coming to Roseburg.

MORNING SERVICE AT M. E. REVIVAL

The first morning service of the Methodist revival was held this morning at 9:30. Doctor Miller preached on "A Religious Millinaire." The Evangelist is at his best in these expository sermons, and those who love good preaching and a study of the scripture miss a spiritual treat, when they absent themselves from these morning services. A capacity crowd is expected.

PROHIBITION OFFICER LINVILLE INVOLVED IN CLEAVER CASE

PORTLAND, Jan. 27.—Federal Prohibition Commissioner J. A. Linville said today that he had dispatched his legal adviser, Frank B. Mitchell and one of his men to Salem to give testimony in the Cleaver probe regarding an effort that he says was made on the part of Cleaver and the anti-Saloon league to involve his office in bribery charges.

MANY HEAR THE CADMAN CONCERT

The Heinline conservatory was crowded last night by an appreciative audience which enthusiastically enjoyed every number on the program of music offered by Charles Wakefield Cadman and the Princess Tainiana. The program was one of unusual interest, and both Cadman and Tainiana were generous with encores, responding many times with numbers that had been omitted from the program, or repeating numbers popular with the audience.

Perhaps the most outstanding of Tainiana's many beautiful solos were the "Cane Song" by Cadman on an Ojibwa theme, and the well known "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water," by Cadman. Mr. Cadman's piano number from the "Thunderbird Suite," and the romantic "Love Song" were especially appreciated. Mr. Cadman's explanations of the various numbers, and the side lights on Indian music and the American Indian enhanced the effect of the music, the majority of which was touched with the barbaric theme found in all Indian music. The program was closed with several numbers from the American opera, "Shamewy" by Cadman, who sketched briefly the story of the opera.

Mr. Cadman and the Princess Tainiana remained over in Roseburg today, and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Heinline, Mrs. Heinline having sponsored the concert here. A number of prominent Roseburg people were invited to a luncheon in their honor at the Heinline home today.

U. OF O. TO MEET WHITMAN TONIGHT

EUGENE, Ore., Jan. 27.—Playing the first of three home games this week, the University of Oregon basketball team will meet the Whitman College quintet from Walla Walla, Washington, this evening on the armory floor here. The game, according to every indication will be a strong Oregon's, though Whitman has been developing rapidly and is expected to put up a strong battle.

The Oregon team appears much more finished in team play and in handling the ball than it did a week ago, and a combination has been worked out that is especially strong on offense.

PROHIBITION PROBE BECOMES HEATED

Johnston said it was found out that she had been driving with Barker for several days prior to this incident and that he had looked up her past record. After her arrest he said he called Cleaver by telephone and asked him if he employed such a woman.

"They tried to prove," he said, "that I was in league with the bootleggers, was a drunken whelp, etc."

fraudulent from cover to cover and in no way conformed to law," Johnston attacked the statement of the prohibition commissioner that at no time did he employ more than eleven agents or more than five on salary. Johnston said vouchers in the secretary of state's office showed that in March he had 13 or 14 and other months showed similarly. Also he declared Cleaver's statement that not more than one of his men had ever done time in jail was untrue. That he himself had convicted Charles Vintyard, in about three fourths of the counties where Cleaver claimed credit for conviction, and fines, Johnston said he was entitled to no credit as he because he had done nothing.

Johnston assailed the financial report by Cleaver and challenged the right of Cleaver or the governor under the law to have both a prohibition and a narcotic fund.

Referring to Cleaver's report of very small balances in his funds, Johnston demanded that the committee asked Cleaver to explain the large sums that he has in the Lumbermen's Trust company bank in Portland.

"This is not shown in his report," said Johnston, "but he finally got frightened about it and wrote the attorney general as to what he should do with the money. I believe if the committee will call upon all the sheriffs and district attorneys in the state as to the amounts of money turned over to Cleaver in witness fees, etc., in addition to the regular 25 percent that went to make up his $25,000 allowance under the law, you will find that he had a total of about $50,000 or $25,000 above the regular amount. The question is what did he do with it?"

Johnston was of the opinion that an investigation of the $271,000 in fines which Cleaver claims credit for would show that he did not come anywhere near the amount.

Another statement of Cleaver that he attacked was the assertion that Coos county was the banner county of the state in law enforcement. Figures he said would show that Washington county was the banner county, and that Lane county was ahead of Coos. Johnston attacked the report as attempting to blackguard the law officers of the state and another point of attack was relative to two small automobiles listed in the report. Johnston claiming that Cleaver uses a state-owned car of larger make.

Senator Hare, asking several questions placed into his hands by Cleaver, wanted to know from Johnston if he ever said to Cleaver:

"I have used intoxicating liquor all my life and always expect to."

"I did not," answered Johnston. "I told him I had taken a few drinks in my life and might again."

Asked his opinion as to what the law should be Johnston said he believed in a central supervisory power lodged in the attorney general.

Senator Staples was sworn as a witness to testify about conditions at Reedport where he is heavily interested. His testimony was in refutation of that offered in the afternoon by Sheriff Starmer of Douglas county.

Starmer had said that although Cleaver swore to the complaint before the Reedport justice in the bribery case, all the evidence had been obtained by the sheriff's office and the conviction that sent three men to prison was all upon evidence so procured.

Senator Staples declared that prior to and during a part of 1923 there was no law enforcement at Reedport and that conditions were "terrible."

"Sheriff Starmer is a nice man," said Staples, "but he is always ready to listen to any song and dance from anybody. Cleaver absolutely cleaned up Reedport and it is in good condition today as a result of his work."

Mr. Cleaver was the final witness called. Explaining Johnston's claim about the car he used, he said the cost of the car was accounted for in his report and entered into his balance, but that inadvertently the name of the car was left out of the report.

Cleaver contradicted Johnston's assertion about more than five men being on salary at any one time. He explained that any person who operated for him, if only for a day was given a number, which accounted for more than five appearing on the vouchers, but that not all these were on salaries.

Relative to Johnston's claim that Cleaver has a lot of money in the Lumbermen's Trust Bank in Portland that has not been accounted for, Cleaver said that after receiving an opinion from the attorney general he had distributed all this back to the counties.

Cleaver was asked by Hare why he had not followed the attorney general's advice, and informed him that a statement from the state treasurer shows about $1,300 in the treasury that Cleaver has not accounted for. Cleaver was unable to explain this, and replied that there must be a mistake somewhere.

GEO. M. COHAN'S SON-IN-LAW DEAD.

MR. & MRS. J.W. SOUTHER.

Georgette Cohan, daughter of George M. Cohan, noted comedian and producer, is still in a New York City hospital she has not been told of the death of her husband, J. William Souther, wealthy young stock broker, who died of appendicitis in Rawlins, Wyo., where he had gone to look at oil leases.

Witness to testify about conditions at Reedport where he is heavily interested. His testimony was in refutation of that offered in the afternoon by Sheriff Starmer of Douglas county.

The Spotlight

You've been in a theatre when the stage was dark, and a spotlight suddenly focused upon the thing you wanted most to see. Advertisements are light spotlights. They focus attention upon the goods that interest you most.

You could wander in and out a dozen stores and, in the confusion of many objects, overlook what would please you best. Yet by reading the advertisements, without leaving your home you can tell definitely where the desired wares are, their prices, how they will serve you. You can know actual values long before you buy.

Advertisements throw light on new comforts and improvements, too, you might like to own. They let you see conveniences other folks are enjoying—bring them within easy reach.

Let these spotlights guide you to standard goods. They'll help you save. Read the advertisements regularly.

ADVERTISEMENTS LIGHT THE WAY TO WISE BUYING
