EULOGY FOR LIVE MAN WAS UNUSUAL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

STATEHOUSE, SALEM, Ore., Jan. 28. — The senate engaged in considerable hilarity yesterday when a resolution thanking I. N. Day for a map of the state came up for adoption. The resolution, introduced by the resolutions committee in compliance with a request from the governor was lavishly laudatory of Mr. Day, and caused Senator Garland to inquire if Day were dead.

"I never knew of such a tribute being paid a man while he was alive," said Garland.

DISAPPEARANCE OF PIANIST A MYSTERY

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Speculation concerning the disappearance of Ethel Leginska, English pianist, just before she was to play before an audience Monday night in Carnegie Hall, today ranged from a publicity stunt to more serious conjectures.

Friends said she apparently fled in a fit of artistic temperament. They seemed on the whole to feel little alarm over her disappearance she played truant the same way in London 15 years ago, it is said.

Mrs. Charles Roshore, a neighbor, is the last person to have seen Miss Leginska, Mrs. Roshore said she saw the pianiste walk from the house where she lived in company with Miss Lucile Oliver, her secretary. There was no taxicab in sight, Mrs. Roshore said, and Miss Oliver went alone as if to seek a cab. When she had departed Miss Leginska turned and ran in the other direction, the neighbor said.

Mieczylaw Muenz, Polish pianist and friend of Miss Leginska who took her place in the concert Monday night, said he knew nothing of the pianiste's disappearance.

YOUNG MEN'S CLUB WILL BE STARTED

A meeting will be held at 7 p. m. today at the Palace of Sweets for the purpose of forming a temporary organization of a young men's business club. Considerable interest has been shown in this plan, which is to create a club made up of the younger men of the city who are not now heads or managers of businesses, but who will be the future business men of the city. The purpose of the club is to train and direct the activities of these young men, and to take up work not now handled by other civic organizations.

PHILLY ATHLETICS STRONGEST TEAM

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—Connie Mack's Athletics, the mystery team of 1924 are looked upon as the most strengthened rival of the Washington Senators and New York Yankees in quest for the 1925 league flag.

The sensation of the league early in 1923, only to flop back at mid-season, the Athletics played better ball after July 4, last season in games won, than any other team in the league.

Connie Mack has few predictions to make. He is standing pat on the team that finished the 1924 campaign in such excellent style but is hopeful that added strength to this battery departments will pull his club up in the race.

Robert (Lefty) Groves, southpaw acquired from Baltimore for a reputed $100,500 is the mainspring of Mack's hopes.

For the rest of his mound staff, Mack has six veterans headed by Eddie Rommel, famous knuckle ball ace. The others are Bryan, Harris and Sam Gray, right handers, and Meeker. Baumgartner and Heimach, southpaws. The new pitching material besides Groves, includes Art Stokes, a young right hander from Des Moines, Iowa, of the western league.

Behind the bat, the Athletics will have the veteran Cy Perkins with two promising newcomers in Jimmy Fox of Easton, Md., and Gordon S. Cochrane, Boston college product, who was obtained from the Portland, Oregon, club of the Pacific Coast league in a deal involving about $50,000. Mack sent five players to Portland in payment for Cochrane—pitchers Hasty and Burns, third baseman Riconda, Catcher Rowland and Outfielder Sherling.

The infield will start with Joe Hauser, home run clouter, at first; Max Bishop at second, Chick Galloway at short, and Jimmy Dykes at third base. The only chance of a shift is that Dykes may replace Bishop at second base, with Sammy Hale at the hot corner.

The regular outfield is expected to consist of Al Simmons in center, Bing Miller in left and Bill Lamier in right.

One Wife on Approval

by VIOLET DARE

AUTHOR OF "Luxury of Love," "The Husband Parade," etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

CYNTHIA LELAND had a misunderstanding with her husband.

JIM LELAND, due to his mother's interference in their affairs. Jim goes to Honolulu, taking his mother with him. Cynthia accepts the attentions of NOEL GARDNER, and through him buys some stock which Madame Leland has thought worthless, for the purchase of which she had held Cynthia responsible. Cynthia makes several friends outside the set in which her sister-in-law,

LOUELLA and her husband, Stanley, move. Among them is

CECILE MALCOLM, who openly avows her affection for Noel.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XXV—THE FAT AND THE FIRE

DURING the following weeks it seemed to Cynthia that her husband faded further and further into unreality. She had no word from him, no replies to her letters. She kept telling herself that of course Jim still loved her, that he could not have changed so completely. Yet it was hard to believe that he cared when he treated her so badly.

VIOLET DARE

Strongly contrasted with his neglect of her was Gardner's devotion. Noel was always on hand. Flowers arrived from him each morning—sometimes a great sheaf of roses for the vases in her living room, sometimes a huge bunch of pansies or violets, or half a dozen orchids for her corsage.

She dined with him frequently, went to the theater with him, was escorted by him to the various dance clubs. One rainy morning he phoned her immediately after breakfast, and they went for a long walk through the park. He was a perfect comrade, and his kindness helped her to fight off the loneliness that Jim's absence had caused.

She had tried to continue to see the friends of her husband's family whom she had met through Madame Leland, but their small circle seemed duller than ever to her now, and although Cecile Malcolm and her friends went too far to the other extreme, Cynthia found that she preferred them.

Then, too, among her mother-in-law's friends she frequently met Louella, her sister-in-law. And Louella made no secret of her disapproval of Cynthia.

"You're too hard on the poor kid," Louella's husband told her on one occasion, when she had snubbed Cynthia ostentatiously.

"Indeed, I'm not. She's acting abominably, running around with Noel Gardner and that Malcolm woman. I'm ashamed of her. To think that she's married to my brother!"

"If he doesn't treat her better than he has so far, she won't be married to him long," he retorted. "And by snubbing her you're not going to make her mend her ways. You'll just drive her into being even more indiscreet."

Which was exactly what happened. Cynthia had not intended going with Noel to a fancy dress ball that was being given for charity the following evening, but after Louella's rudeness she decided to go.

"I don't care whether any of these people like me or not!" she told herself, as she hung up the receiver after phoning Noel that she had changed her mind. "They didn't like me when I tried to suit them, and they don't like me now—why should I care?"

She had not prepared any costume, but Gardner told her that he would send her one in time for the ball. It came late in the afternoon. Opening the box, Cynthia held her breath. For within lay a fluffy mass of rose-colored tulle, with tiny roses cascading down over it.

She wore an evening wrap over it when Noel called for her that evening. He was costumed as Pierrot; her first glance told Cynthia why he had chosen a Pierette costume for her.

He removed her cape for her as they entered the house where the ball was being given.

"You're wonderful!" he exclaimed, looking from her pretty little feet to the crown of her golden head. "You're too beautiful for words, Cynthia. Oh, my dear—"

"There's the music, do hurry and leave my cape, so that we can dance," urged Cynthia, turning away. She did not want Noel to make love to her, now or at any other time. But it was pleasant to know that he wanted to.

Louella was there, dressed to represent Queen Elizabeth. Stanley was a courtier. He danced once with Cynthia, and begged for more dances later, but Noel Gardner had scrawled his name on Cynthia's card frequently, and there had been a determined battle among her other male acquaintances for the few vacancies that he had left.

"You're wonderful!" Noel exclaimed.

"I'm sorry, Stanley; I'd like to dance again with you," she told him.

"You don't include me in your dislike for the family?" he asked. "I'm glad of that."

"I don't dislike any of you," she answered frankly. "But I don't understand Louella, and she doesn't understand me."

"You're very charitable," he replied. "If I were you I'd hate the bunch of us. By the way, is it true that you bought the stock in that company of Gardner's that he bought back from our revered mother-in-law? I've heard that you did."

"What a wild rumor," she replied. "I can't imagine how it could have started. Stanley, have you and Louella heard anything of Jim?" Her face was lovely in its wistfulness.

"We've had several letters from Madame Leland, and she mentions him, of course. They must have reached Honolulu by now. Cynthia, Jim's been a brute to you!"

She shook her head, sadly.

"Not that. But he hasn't been—kind," she admitted.

Stanley went fuming back to his wife, leaving Cynthia to dance with Noel Gardner.

Advice from Louella.

RESOLUTIONS ARE GIVEN APPROVAL

The Roseburg Chamber of Commerce board of directors yesterday afternoon went squarely on record as favoring the retention of the present automobile license law, and no further increase in the gasoline tax, as proposed by bills now before the state legislature.

The board also went on record as favoring an appropriation to continue the public service commission of the state. It seems that the budget committee in making up the state budget for the next two years failed to provide the money to keep this important commission functioning, thus leaving the commission high and dry. As all matters of railroad rates and public utility regulation comes under this commission it was not thought wise to practically do away with it. It will be remembered that this commission was of great assistance last fall in the matter of apportioning the cost of the overhead crossings in Douglas county on the Pacific highway.

At the meeting of the board on January 20th, the secretary was instructed to have resolutions drawn protesting against senate bill No. 11, which declares an open season on beaver in Douglas county alone of all the counties of the state. These resolutions were also presented to the board and received the endorsement of that body.

A special resolution opposing changes in the automobile license law and an increase in the gasoline tax, was presented and adopted and copies forwarded to the Douglas county delegation.

The resolution adopted by the Portland chamber of commerce, relative to the financing of the public service commission was approved. It was held by the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce that the public service commission is a necessary and efficient agent for the continued regulation of public utilities, and that its continuance should be assured by the state legislature.
