Stop Night Coughing This Simple Way

People who have persistent, annoying coughing spells at night, and who through loss of valuable sleep, are weakening their systems and laying themselves open to dangerous infections, can stop this distressing trouble promptly by a very simple treatment. Hundreds who have hardly been able to rest at all for weeks, have gotten their full night's sleep the very first time they tried it. The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. It simply takes a few minutes of your night before retiring and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, with the water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. The result is that you usually sleep as soundly as a babe the very first night. In the entire cough condition goes in a very short time. The prescription is highly recommended for coughs, chest colds, hoarseness and bronchitis, and is wonderful for children's coughs and whooping cough—no harmful drugs. (Sensational, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. It is on sale at all good druggists. Ask for

SINS OF HARDING'S FRIENDS DECRIED BY U. S. ATTORNEY

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—Assistant Attorney General John W. Crim began the final argument for the prosecution in the veterans' bureau conspiracy trial today. Crim vigorously attacked the defense argument that Elias H. Mortimer, the chief prosecution witness had been accepted as a man of high social standing in Washington because of his professed friendship with President Harding. "O, the sins of the friends of Warren Harding visited upon him," he exclaimed. "O, that they had stayed away from Washington! O, his untimely death, that he might be alive today to tell how he was duped by his friends!"

The prosecution previously had recalled testimony that Francis E. Fox of Spokane, Wash., had been invited in the summer of 1922 to participate in a syndicate to purchase the government's wooden fleet.

Charles R. Forbes, former director of the United States veterans' bureau and J. W. Thompson, wealthy building contractor of Chicago, and St. Louis, went to trial before Federal Judge George A. Carpenter November 24 last, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government.

The proceedings grew out of charges of corruption, collusion and loose management in the veteran's bureau under Forbes in 1921 and 1922, related before the senate investigating committee in 1923 by Elias H. Mortimer, Washington agent, and self-styled "snipper of official red tape."

Thirty-three overt acts were charged in the indictment on which the trial was based, among them conspiracy to prevent free competitive bidding, favorites for certain contractors in the announcement of contemplated projects, and the passing of confidential information relating to selection of sites.

The prosecution contended that Thompson and his partner, the late J. W. Black of St. Louis, entered into a conspiracy with Mortimer and Forbes in 1922 to secure preferential treatment for the bids of the subsidiary and associated companies of Thompson and Black.

Mortimer, who posed as a close friend of President Harding, it was said was taken into the conspiracy because of his pretended influence with Forbes. The plan then developed, according to the government's presentation, was for the division of the entire nation-wide program of veteran's hospital construction, involving some $47,000,000.

Defense counsel claimed in their closing argument that every detail of the charges of the prosecution had been refuted. They argued the entire case of the government was based upon the uncorroborated testimony of Mortimer, a protected government informer, and that every allegation was by that fact alone but beyond the pale of credibility. A scathing attack upon Mortimer's character and reputation was a part of the defense effort. Mortimer was painted the arch-conspirator bent upon vengeance upon Forbes. The entire litigation, it was asserted, was found upon "a venomous cock-and-bull story from a reverence witness."

In addition, voluminous documentary evidence was offered in support of the contention that Forbes was motivated by the best interests of the disabled veterans.

HEALTH BULLETIN.

The new attitude toward disease and its cure which emphasizes prevention rather than cure places a great responsibility on the school. This is but partly because the child throughout his most susceptible years spends so many hours of the day in the school under physically trying conditions presented by the school building itself and by the free intermingling and grouping of the pupils. If it be true, even more largely, because of the possibility of instilling health knowledge and health habits is greatest in the school period of life. The school, therefore, has clearly two duties to perform: one is to assist in preventing physical defects and diseases; the other, to assist in furnishing the teaching and training which will make and keep the body well and strong. The school can fairly discharge these duties only when every school house is both sanitary and safe; when every school child is the beneficiary of competent medical inspection and health supervision, and when every school child is thoroughly trained in body, in health habits and living. To this end must be devoted the combined support and activity of all who desire to promote human efficiency and human happiness. Douglas County Health Dept.

TO MAKE REPORT ON MODEL FARM

Arrangements have been made whereby Prof. Scudder of the Oregon Agricultural college, who has in charge the details of the state demonstration farm east of this city, to meet with the board of directors of the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Prof. Scudder wishes to go into the details of the demonstration farm, showing what he expects to do at the end of the five year period allowed by the law that made it possible to establish demonstration farms in the state four years ago. If enough interest is manifested by our people the board of directors will arrange to hold the meeting where more people can be accommodated than at the chamber office. So anyone interested will confer a favor upon the chamber by phoning the secretary, that they wish to hear Prof. Scudder's report in this matter.
