G. O. P. HENCHMAN ACCUSES GOV. BONE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. — Removal from office of Governor Scott C. Bone, of Alaska, was asked in a sworn complaint filed at the White House today by John W. Frame, who declared the governor had been instrumental in depriving him of the office of republican national committeeman from the territory after he had been duly elected as such. The complaint was referred to Secretary Work of the interior department.

'BRINGING UP FATHER' BETTER THAN EVER

Bigger, brighter and better than ever before, fairly bristling with novelty, comes "Bringing Up Father in Ireland" to the Antlers theatre for an engagement of one night, next Monday. This is the tenth season of this very remarkable cartoon review, with an entirely new production at every visit. The "Bringing Up Father" series of plays, has become the greatest laughing show the theatrical world has ever known, through the extraordinary popularity of Mr. George McManus of the New York American and Journal. More than a thousand newspapers throughout the entire civilized world, feature this series in their Sunday "Funny Page." The tenth consecutive year will be very much on the order of a celebration for those inimitable characters "Jiggs and Maggie" not forgetting our old friend "Dinty Moore" without whom this would be a dry old world for "Jiggs." Since "Maggie" bought a slice of stock in the rolling pin trust, she is never at a loss for an argument. In fact she invariably presents a very solid argument, and Jiggs will substantiate the fact, if his head had not already proven the fact that he was substantial, we would have been all out of "Jiggs" long ago. This year's offering will have the usual number of pretty girls, wearing the latest creations in gorgeous gowns. Special music of the snappy sort has been furnished, with novel dances to lend zest to the entertainment. All together, there will be nothing better in this vicinity this entire season. It is always adviseable to order seats early for this attraction, as capacity houses are general at every visit.

CLEVELAND ITEMS

Harold Reynolds is assisting Rev. Hammer of Roseburg in conducting revival services at Glengary this week.

We are glad to hear that E. G. Trozelle is improving and will soon be able to leave the hospital.

Miss Alta Goff spent the week end with her parents at Sutherlin.

Dave Good has built a new spray outfit preparatory to spring work.

John Lavenner is in the mountains tending his traps.

We are glad to see John Maddox in our midst again.

Alice Fest and Kate Spaur of Edenbower motored out this way last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Krohn drove to Roseburg on Wednesday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Krohn's uncle W. A. Woodruff.

We wish Albert Becker would show up occasionally so we could put his name in the paper.

News is scarce this week. Cleveland is hibernating during this rainy weather, but we don't mind as long as we have Prune Pickins' and the Cross-Word puzzle to amuse us.

RICE CREEK SCHOOL NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Meredith and daughter spent the week end with their parents and family. Also Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Meredith and little son spent Sunday with their parents and family.

Little Cornelia Ledyard had a birthday party the 24th of January and some of her friends accompanied her and we sure had a very nice time.

A party was held at Mrs. Colters last Saturday night. It was a surprise party of Mr. E. Bradford whose birthday was January 31. A very big crowd was there. Cake and chocolate were served at one o'clock then the party broke up. All had a good time. A birthday supper was given by Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Rice at their home on Thursday evening, Jan. 29 in honor of Miss Katherine Jacoby's birthday. Following a delicious supper a large birthday cake decorated with 22 candles was carried in by little six year old Della Rice. The evening was spent in listening to musical selections on the victrola. Those present were Misses Katherine Jacoby, Margaret, Eva, Ethel, Della and Wao Rice; Messrs. Harrison and Douglas Rice, and Albert Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Shoup, Mr. P. O. Bailey, and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Rice. Everyone enjoyed the evening.

Little William Hiney and his family have moved to Roseburg, where William will attend school there. We will miss him in our school.

Mr. Byron Coultune, is expecting a new drag saw most any time Mr. Coultune is cutting wood on the E. E. Bradford place.

Last week we were favored with visits from the following people: Mr. J. J. Meredith, Jan. 23, on Wednesday, Margaret, Della and Douglas Rice, on Thursday Mrs. G. T. Royer visited school. We are glad to have visitors come to visit us. We held our second meeting of Sunday school Sunday, called by Mrs. G. T. Royer the superintendent.

GLIDE NEWS.

Still it rains!

Beatrice Wright has come back to school this semester. She has been living in Roseburg this winter.

Those attending the Pomona Grange from Glide at Greens were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Blakely, M. D. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Blakely and Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander.

Will Singleton and C. L. Beckley was chasing Coyotes in the vicinity of Glide the first of the week and they succeeded in getting three, for which the men that have sheep are very glad.

Mrs. Emma Nemetz spent the week end as the guest of Mrs. Alexander.

Mrs. Fanny Smith was taken to Roseburg yesterday with erisypelas. We are hopeful for a speedy recovery.

The Directors of the Glide Chamber of Commerce, at a meeting held Friday evening, passed a resolution condemning any attempt on the part of the Legislature to tamper with the present Primary laws.

The resolutions passed by the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce favoring the appropriation of $50,000 annually for two years to be used in advertising the resources and industries of the state was endorsed and the Roseburg Rod and Gun club commended for their opposition to the proposed opening of the season on beaver.

The bill increasing the salaries of the District Attorneys was discussed, but action was deferred until further information was received. It was the opinion of the Board that other County offices deserved consideration at the same time.

Friday evening an Elocution Recital was given by Mrs. I. M. Gervais and her children at the Glide School building. The entertainment was very interesting and showed that they were the result of very careful preparation. Mrs. Gervais's interpretation of James Whitcomb Riley's wonderful poems was excellent, several of them being given in costume. Pantomimes of the old songs, "Comin' Thru The Rye" and "Old Black Joe" acted by Vivian and Isaac were exceptionally fine.

One Wife on Approval

by VIOLET DARE

Author of "Tyranny of Love," "The Husband Hunter," etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

CYNTHIA LELAND'S husband, Jim, has gone to Honolulu shortly after their marriage, following a misunderstanding with his wife, and has taken his mother with him, leaving Cynthia to face the disapproval of her sister-in-law,

LOUELLA, and all her world. Cynthia turns to

CECILE MALCOLM, leader of the town's gayest set, and accepts the friendship of NOEL GARDNER, the town's black sheep, going with them to a mid-winter house party at Cecile's mountain cabin.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XXXIII—BACK TO THE WORLD

VIOLET DARE

ON the third day after their departure from Cecile's camp, Cynthia and Noel left the house in which they had taken refuge from the blizzard and turned toward home.

Cynthia's shoulder was very lame, and her whole left side was strained and sore. An ugly black and blue spot had developed on her forehead, and she felt thoroughly wretched.

It was out of the question for her to make the trip home on skis, but Noel had found a sled in a storeroom of the house and had strapped a wooden chair on it, in which he made her as comfortable as he could.

With her skis strapped on his back he started out, making his way easily over fences and tree stumps, that were now entirely covered with snow. Cynthia, huddled down in a big fur rug, talked gaily to him for a while, and then lapsed into silence.

"I haven't much idea where we are," he told her frankly. "But we can't go very far without running onto another house or a town of some kind." To himself he admitted that they might go on for hours, but he had no intention of letting her know the truth, lest it frighten her.

By afternoon Cynthia's shoulder had begun to pain so that she could hardly keep from screaming. Noel, glancing back over his shoulder and seeing her white, set face, guessed what was the matter, and weary though he was, redoubled his efforts. Real danger lay ahead of them if they did not find a house before nightfall. He had not dared go out alone to find help and leave her in the house which they had left that morning, yet now he began to wonder if perhaps he had not made a mistake. If they were forced to spend the night in the woods they would probably freeze to death.

"Guess I'm a hum woodsman, Cynthia," he told her, as the gray light began to fade. "Instead of heading toward Cecile's I've evidently gone straight in the opposite direction."

"Well, we'll come to Canada soon and encounter a bootlegger who'll help us," she answered, managing a shaky little laugh. "Don't despair."

"You're the best sport I ever knew," he told her, pausing a moment to rest, and coming back to stand beside the sled. "You're a wonder."

"Not at all, but you are," she replied. "If I'd been a strong-minded woman I'd have insisted on staying back there in that house while you went for help. The prospect of spending a night or two alone there wouldn't have been too much for me. But you knew how I felt and brought me along—and if it means that we freeze to death, why—"

"Freeze to death nothing! Why, we're in the heart of civilization, if we only knew it! Brace up, me child! Want to bet that we sight a house within the next half hour?"

He went on, doggedly, after that. And the half hour was barely over when they did sight a house, a log cabin that they thought at first was Cecile's. It was nerve alone that took Noel the last few yards; he could hardly unstrap his skis, could hardly see, as he lifted Cynthia off the sled, put one arm around her, and helped her up the steps to the door.

"'Tisn't Cecile's after all, but we won't turn it down because of that," he remarked, hanging on the door with the knocker.

The door was flung open; they stumbled into a living room that seemed filled with people. For an instant Cynthia stared blankly; then a familiar voice pierced the haze that fatigue and cold had cast over her.

"Cynthia!" it said. Those disapproving tones—how familiar they were!

"Cynthia, where have you been?"

"Cynthia, where have you been? Cecile Malcolm has the whole county out looking for you. We've been frightened to death." Louella rushed forward and caught Cynthia by the shoulder—her lame shoulder. The girl's cry of pain made her step back instantly.

"I think she'd better see a doctor before you try to question her," Noel remarked, as Cynthia reeled against him. "She's hurt, but I don't know how badly. Had an accident in the woods."

Cynthia hardly knew what happened in the confusion that followed. Somebody put her to bed, somebody came in with a strange man, who was a doctor, and hurt her mercilessly. She could not help wishing for the quiet and peace of the long days she had spent alone with Noel in the stranger's house. At least he had not found fault with her. And Louella, who was at her bedside, let fall various remarks that were anything but kindly.

She felt too ill to try to imagine what report would be sent to Jim, or what he would say about it. Would he ever let her explain, herself?

Queerly enough, she didn't care whether he did or not. It didn't seem to matter any more what Jim thought. She seemed to have come a long way on a strange road, and now the end was in sight, the right destination for her. She could sink back happily on her pillows and go to sleep, sure that things must turn out right, and very soon.

HAYHURST NOTES.

Mrs. J. J. O'Dale of Drain, was visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Miller one day last week. Mrs. O'Dale is one of our most successful turkey raisers and expects to raise a nice flock of birds the coming season.

Mrs. Katheryn Francis was attending to business in Drain and Yoncalla last Tuesday.

Mrs. Arthur Williams and Mrs. Lee Allen attended the Rebekah installation in Yoncalla on Thursday of this week.

Mrs. Annie McKirdy attended the funeral of Mrs. Sarah Morningstar which was held at Drain a few days ago. Grandma Morningstar had many friends in this community, who grieve for her, and deeply sympathized with the bereaved family. She was a woman of true Christian character.

Mrs. Henry Moran is visiting her mother at Sutherlin.

John Smith, who resides near Yoncalla, was visiting friends here last Sunday.

John Kruse, who has been helping operate the saw mill at Skelley, returned home last night, as the boys will do logging ready to saw again next week.

Mrs. Mary Hamilton entertained a number of lady friends on Thursday, in honor of the birthday of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Warner Laird. A delicious luncheon was served, with a lovely birthday cake, and a general social time was had.

Mr. C. H. Chambers, the lumber man, accompanied by Mr. Peterson, was here a few days ago, looking after timber.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Crow were callers at the J. T. Miller home on Tuesday. Mrs. Crow is teacher in the Monticello school, and visited Miss Emily Alford of the Hayhurst school.

About the biggest item right now, is rain! The "Japan Current" must be getting in its work for February.
