COLLINS FOUND DEAD IN CAVE

here at 10:30 this morning, broke by the military guard on duty at the cave and almost succeeded in going down the shaft when a runner reached him that Floyd was being brought up the shaft.

CAVE CITY, Ky., Feb. 16.—Additional soldiers were assigned to guard duty around the Sand Cave area this morning. This is the first time that the guard has been increased since official reports had found fissures and laterals extending from the side of the shaft being sunk to bring Collins from his trap.

John Gerald, one of the last to see Collins, said that it would take several hours of hard work to release him when he was reached, either in front or behind.

Physicians' plans include medical treatment down in the cave, occupying perhaps an hour or more, if the faintest spark of life is found. Stimulants will be administered and everything possible done to prepare him for the shock of removal through the narrow tunnel.

No sign of Collins being alive has been reported since Friday, when four men testified before the state military inquiry that they heard him cough and gasp. The sound amplifier test failed last Wednesday. Collins has not been fed for 12 days and last talked to the rescue party 11 days ago.

Dr. William Hazlett of Chicago will not be the only physician to go to Collins when found. Two medical officers of the 149th Infantry arrived here Sunday from Rossburg, Tenn. They were Major M. M. Moss and Captain C. E. Francis. At a conference today, they consulted Leo Collins, father of Floyd, and the aged parent said he would leave it to the military persons. It was then arranged that Major Moss and Captain Francis would go with Dr. Hazlett to Collins as soon as it was possible.

An inquest will be called at the scene immediately in event Collins should be dead when found. It was announced by Magistrate Clay Turner. He said that the jury would then adjourn to Cave City to hear testimony of their witnesses.

The military court of inquiry expects to continue sessions after the finding of Collins to complete its records.

Shortly before noon, the miners started removing loose limestone from the roof of Collins tomb. Dr. W. L. Pankhouser said that no blasting would be done and that if the diggers could not get through otherwise, they would use the "plug and feathers" method. This means to drill holes in the rock and put in spreading wedges to break it out.

R. E. Lambie, state mine inspector of West Virginia, explored the shaft and lateral this morning with John Henryetta, a foreman under H. T. Carmichael and praised it as a perfect piece of engineering, expertly done under extremely difficult and dangerous circumstances. Mr. Lambie was sent by the governor of West Virginia to render whatever assistance he could.

CAVE CITY, Ky., Feb. 16.—Surmounting serious obstacles and overcoming large falls, it now remains a question of cubic yards and time until Floyd Collins' rescue party expects to reach the void which will lead directly to him, said an official bulletin issued at 8 o'clock this morning. However, an R requires one hour to remove one cubic foot of material. Immediate results in reaching Collins must not be expected, the bulletin said.

The official statement, timed at 7 a. m. and given out at 8 a. m. by H. T. Carmichael, M. E. S. Pusey and General H. H. Deharadt, follows:

"Results in the lateral heading last night are very encouraging and at a distance of 12 feet from the main shaft an attempt is being made to break through the limestone roof and drift vertically into the avenue, the existence of which is determined from the core drill log.

"Much trouble was encountered during the last few feet of the heading and falls were numerous, but it is being well timbered and is considered safe.

Indications are that sand will be found in the avenue which will facilitate work but progress from this time forward will necessarily be slow as material must be relayed in a narrow passage from man to man to the bucket in the main shaft. It is thought that the avenue referred to above is an extension or branch of the original Sand Cave channel in which Collins is and it is thought that the resulting parties cannot be more than 10 feet from him.

"However, as conditions are such as to require one hour to transport one cubic yard of material from the face of the heading to the bucket in the shaft, immediate results in reaching Collins must not be expected.

"It is felt that the most serious of obstacles have been surmounted and that it is now only a question of cubic yards and time until Collins is reached."

CAVE CITY, Ky., Feb. 16.—One of the greatest difficulties confronting the experienced engineers in the Sand Cave rescue shaft to determine closely the direction from the shaft where Floyd Collins lies imprisoned, is being solved. Shouts between Sand Cave tunnel and the shaft form the chief guide for the engineers because it has been impossible to plot very accurately the course of the tunnel. The distance between Floyd and the cave-in plan in his tunnel vary.

The other great difficulty and danger, too, is the instability of the almost liquid mud encountered at 54 feet. In digging the sloping lateral tunnel, the mud was too soft to support the big limestone boulders encountered and many cave-ins occurred before the roof and walls were finally braced securely.

The only newspaperman to go down the shaft since the lateral was decided upon is William Burke Miller of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who worked desperately to free Collins down the original cave tunnel. He declared he felt safer in the original hole than he did in the shaft. The constant drip of seepage and frequent falls of small rocks and mud behind the shaft timbering gave him a feeling, he said, that the bottom of the shaft might be squeezed shut like a huge trap any minute.

He spoke of this to H. T. Carmichael, in charge of the shaft digging and the danger was admitted, but in full knowledge of this the diggers pushed on.

As the lateral progresses only the most experienced are picked still three men to a shift and they work now in two hour shifts.

FEBRUARY TERM CIRCUIT COURT STARTS TODAY

Three men were naturalized, and given citizenship in this country. John Galla, a native of Germany; James Murphy a native of Great Britain and Andrew Yelton, each took the oath of citizenship. The applicants were examined by R. W. Thomas, a naturalization examiner from the U. S. naturalization bureau at Seattle. All were able to answer the questions in a manner indicating that they have given careful study to the form of government in this country. The examinations were very thorough, testing the qualifications of each applicant and the court expressed satisfaction in the manner in which the new citizens answered. Judge Hamilton spoke briefly to the three new citizens, impressing upon them the responsibilities of citizenship.

The first case called was that of D. L. Niederheiser against G. S. Brown, a suit to collect $195 alleged to be due on an account and for labor. Brown is alleged to have purchased an interest in a restaurant, but to have failed to pay the amounts due, and also to have failed to pay the amounts due employees for labor. The plaintiff's case was heard this morning. Mr. Brown failing to make an appearance. The case went to the jury, but shortly after the jury retired. Mr. Brown appeared, having been detained in reaching the city, but the jury was called back and his side of the case heard this afternoon.

The next case will be that of the State of Oregon against Floyd Harris, a larceny case which has been on the docket for about two years.

MARKETS

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 16.—Egg prices were steady at the opening of the week with some talk of storing at this level. Receipts are good but a majority of jobbers believe the bottom has been reached. There is a healthy tone in the local butter market. Production is about balanced with the demand. Prices are unchanged.

Country meats are nominally steady. Receipts were very light today with little inquiry. Choice calves 16 to 18c; choice light hogs 15c.

Live poultry is nominally steady with few receipts and small demand.

There is a lull in the hay market with demand limited and offerings plentiful.

Timothy, oats, and vetch are holding steady. Other varieties are easier. Farmers that were holding clover for $20 a ton in the country last fall are now willing to sell at $17 c. o. b. station.

Buying prices: oat and vetch $19 to $19.50; chest $16; straw $8.50; clover $16.50; alfalfa $19 to $19.50. f. o. b. Portland team track.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 16.—Wholesale prices show a wide range in the local produce markets this morning, due to the many different grades of stock offered.

Bananas are an outstanding example with different lots bought all the way from 7c to 9c a bushel. But the quality and size of the fruit is an important factor and large sized bananas go at 9c a bushel at all firms.

Oranges are another example with prices ranging all the way from 24c to 36c a crate, but the cheaper fruit consists of small sizes, partly frosted and of uncertain quality.

Good cauliflower is offered as low as $1.75 a crate by some houses, but the real fancy stock is held at $2.25 and is scarce.

Lettuce prices vary according to size and quality. Today lettuce can be had as low as $3.25 a crate but lots offered at this figure are small sizes, old stock and far from fancy. Real fancy lettuce, four dozen sizes, still hold at the $5 level. Good solid packed lugs are firm at $5 but buyers can pick up any amount of soft, over-ripe tomatoes, some barely spotted, as low as $3 a lug.

Potatoes sweet potatoes hold at $4.50 a crate but cheaper stock can be had for $3.50.

Bunch vegetables are about steady at $1.20 for beets, $1.10 for turnips and $1 for carrots.

Onions range around $3.75 to a $4 top on the best Oregon stock.

Potatoes are steady at $2 to $2.25 for U. S. No. 1 Oregon stock and as high as $2.50 for best Yekima stock.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 16.—Wheat bids: hard white bluestem, heart $41.50; soft white $41.80; western white $41.75; northern spring $41.80; western red $41.60; h. b. h. hard white $2.15.

PRESIDENT'S PLAN IS ATTACKED TODAY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Proposals of the president's agricultural conference for a co-operative marketing board were attacked before the senate agricultural committee today by T. A. Nafziger, counsel of the Kansas wheat growers association, as "designed to organize distributors instead of the producers."

"If I wanted to ruin the co-operative wheat campaign in Kansas, this is just the step I would take," the witness declared, indicating copies of the bills already introduced to carry out the conference's recommendation. He expressed the opinion that "a central board for supervision of co-operative marketing was just as impracticable as would be the central board for control of all the businesses in the United States."

DOUGLAS C. BILLS

STATE HOUSE, Salem, Ore., Feb. 16.—Senator Eddy today introduced S. B. 232, appropriating $400 for premiums at the Smith River fair in Douglas county.

The Douglas county delegation introduced H. B. 459, closing of a certain estuary known as Rainbow basin within city of Reedsport and Port of Umpqua.

TO TAX OLEO

STATE HOUSE, Salem, Ore., Feb. 16.—A substitute bill covering the taxing of oleomargarine was introduced in the house today by the food and dairy committee. The substitute measure would levy a tax of 50 cents a thousand pounds on butter. No postage tax would be placed on oleomargarine, but a manufacturer's license fee would be exacted. The bill would also require retail dealers and bakeries handling "oleo" would have to pay a five dollar license.
