SUPREMACY OF BATTLESHIP IS NAVAL PROGRAM

Air Power Can Never Supercede Force of Capital Ships at Sea.

COOLIDGE'S IDEA

Announce Thirty Million Dollar Naval Program for Present and Ensuing Years.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Despite acceptance by President Coolidge of the navy department theory that air power can never supercede battleship supremacy at sea is implied if not stated, in his announced $20,000,000 naval construction program for the present and ensuing fiscal years, now before congress.

This was disclosed in the publication today of the report of the navy general board, acting as a special board of inquiry by the president's direction on the relative military value of aircraft, submarines and battleships, along with a statement by the executive showing the basis of the appropriation recommendations he has forwarded to congress.

While the president made "no" direct reference to the board's findings, his statement shows acceptance in principle but on a modified scale, of the board's recommendations as to the priority and nature of new construction for the navy.

The board recommended immediate modernization of six of the older battleships as the first requirement for the navy. The president in his program for modernization without gun elevation, cut this number to three ships and eliminated another recommendation of the board for modernization of seven other battleships "as soon as possible."

In the board's recommendations for prompt completion of the two new aircraft carriers and their planes as the second step, the president concurred.

Where the board recommended "building without delay" the eight 10,000 ton cruisers already authorized the president reduced this to two ships to be started at once.

As fifth in priority the board submitted the following recommendation for which no provision is found in the president's program:

"That a progressive and adequate airplane building program be authorized to insure to the fleet a complete outfit of up to date planes, with fifty percent replacements in reserve, as well as the necessary training planes, at a total expenditure for the first year of twenty million dollars."

The program before congress also proposes no step to carry out the board's sixth recommendation for laying down in 1927 of the three fleets, submarines already authorized, while for the seventh, pending authorization and building "without unnecessary delay," of a 23,000 ton additional aircraft carrier, the president substituted a provision to start work on the group of gunboats already authorized for patrol work on rivers.

In his statement the president said he did not believe the statements recommended by the board were warranted "at the present time." Going extensively into every aspect of the aircraft versus battleships problems the report included detailed information as to bombing experiments since no war existences in the tests that preceded the sinking of the hull of the uncompleted battleship Washington. From that data the board deduced its conclusion that future battleships could be made secure against attack from the air.

In that conclusion also, the board had the agreed testimony of scientists that the definite maximum limitations in size of airplanes was established by physical laws not to be evaded short of new and startling discoveries. These limitations the board pointed out, ran against proposals by Major General Patrick, chief of the army air service, that an increase in the size of bombs to 4,000 pounds would be necessary in view of the Washington experiments.

In taking issue also with the inference drawn from photographs showing bomb damage to naval ships, which have played a part in the present congressional aircraft inquiries the board said:

"The huge structures that are built above and around the armament which give us our visual impression of a battleship can all be demolished and we still have the primary attributes for which she was designed—still in existence and still capable of continuing the battle—the board dwells upon those points because photographs have been shown which describe the damage wrought by the bombs dropped on battleships and which leave in the minds of the public the impression that the ship is a helpless hulk as a consequence of the bombardment."

KLAMATH-BEND RAILROAD WILL BE N. P. PROJECT

Northern Pacific President Reaffirms Intention of His Company.

TO GIVE ARGUMENTS

Says Lumbering Business Klamath Falls, Will Undergo Considerable Expansion.

(Associated Press Local Wire.)
PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 19.—President Charles Donnelly of the Northern Pacific Railroad, in a statement here today, reaffirmed the intention of his company together with the Great Northern Railway, to build southerly from Bend, in Central Oregon, to Klamath Falls, Ore., as soon as the interstate commerce commission determines the issues in the controversy involving the construction of rail lines through interior Oregon. Arguments in this case will be heard by the commission at Washington, March 27.

The exceptions to the report of the examiner, filed by the Oregon Trunk and Great Northern (each owning a one-half interest in the Oregon Trunk), express correctly the view taken by the Northern lines of the questions now pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission and there is little that can be added to what they convey.

"We have stated that we now have under serious consideration the possible construction of a railroad which would reach Klamath Falls. This is the exact truth. It may be said, indeed, that in building the Oregon Trunk to Bend, the Northern lines realized that this construction put them in contact with the immense lumber resources of that region; and, of course, it was their purpose to keep their own facilities for serving the region fully abreast of its development.

The indications at present are that the lumbering industry in the vicinity of Klamath Falls will undergo, in the comparatively near future, a very considerable expansion. How soon this will take place is uncertain, because there is, I believe, some division of sentiment among the leaders of that industry as to whether it is not now expanding too rapidly.

"But, however, this may be, our purpose in building into this territory was to supply its transportation needs and speaking for the Northern Pacific, I do not hesitate to say that our line will be extended whenever it shall be made to appear that the available traffic will provide a return on the capital required for its extension.

From Portland, President Donnelly will go to points in Western Washington to note what changes there may be in industrial and railway conditions since he was out this way from St. Paul last fall.

GRAND JURY PROBE OF WHEELER IS ON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—After more than two weeks of deliberation, the grand jury here considering the new charges against Senator Wheeler of Montana, called before it today some of the principal figures in the senate Wheeler investigation of several months ago.

Tom Stout, a former member of congress from Montana, who testified before the senate committee in regard to the Gordon Campbell land permits was one of the witnesses examined.

Mr. Stout was followed by E. S. Booth, former solicitor for the interior department whose correspondence with Campbell was introduced into the senate inquiry.

Still another witness summoned for today was James H. Baldwin, a law partner of Senator Wheeler, who government counsel said, was subpoenaed at the senator's request.

GRAZING FEES MAY SOON BE CANCELLED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Reduction or cancellation of the grazing fees on national forests was demanded in the senate today by Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, who criticized treatment of the industry by the department of agriculture as indifferent and ignorant.

Senator Ashurst declared the industry faced extermination as a result of injustices deliberately imposed by the government.

He charged the department of agriculture had a deliberate lobby seeking defeat of bills in congress aimed to relieve cattle growers.

Resolutions adopted by the Arizona Cattle Growers Association asking a reduction in grazing fees and repeal of a ruling forcing removal of fences of the public domain were read by the senator.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The secretary of the interior would be authorized to waive all fees during 1925 for grazing on public lands on a joint resolution adopted today by the senate.

Southwestern senators forced temporary displacement of the Muscle Shoals conference report in order that the resolution might be considered, after Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, had charged that the operation of interested federal bureaus seemed designed to "exterminate the cattle industry."
