CALVIN COOLIDGE IS WELL FITTED FOR OFFICE PRESIDENT OF U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 2. - When Calvin Coolidge assumes the Presidency in his own right next Wednesday he will take over the direction of a government in which he already has left his impress through 19 months service as the successor through tragic circumstances to Warren G. Harding.

In these 19 months Mr. Coolidge has been engaged primarily in fulfilling a promise made to the American people in his first presidential statement to carry out the Harding policies. New problems, however, have resulted in pronouncements bearing plainly the label of Coolidge policies.

Quietly, in a way which his friends say is characteristic, Mr. Coolidge has charted the waters through which during the next four years he proposes to steer the ship of state. This has meant hard work and a difficult change from his comparatively quiet life as Vice-President. His two years as governor of Massachusetts stood him in good stead, and he constantly has put into use the experience gained in the state house at Boston.

Within a week after the funeral of President Harding Mr. Coolidge began a study of the functions and possibilities of the governmental departments and agencies. One by one he called in the members of the Harding cabinet, which he had accepted as his cabinet, and sought from them an outline of the work of their departments and information as to pending problems. He did the same with several of the larger bureaus and with such independent agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Reserve Commission, and the Tariff Commission. He spent hours reading reports and recommendations in his quest for information.

He consulted frequently with members of congress and others whom he knew he could trust. His first appointment, that of G. B. Parsons, of Virginia, to be his secretary, was arrived at after study of a list of three requested from Senator Curtis of Kansas, Speaker Gillett, and Secretary Weeks. He early indicated a knowledge that Congress would present one of his major problems and Mr. Parsons' appointment was partly due to a desire to have a liaison with that body.

Several weeks before Congress assembled, Secretary Mellon worked out and made public his tax revision plan. Congressional leaders in most cases looked at it askance and said it could not be put through, but Mr. Coolidge endorsed it whole heartedly, believing it to be for the best interests of the country, and made it one of his chief recommendations to Congress.

Fragility and economy, taught by his boyhood days on a Vermont farm, were emphasized always and are today the cornerstone in his conception of the whole governmental structure. Finding the tasks of the Presidency pressing hard upon him, he formed the habit, which he has since firmly established, of assigning special work to his cabinet advisers and holding them responsible. His own motto, "Do the day's work," he made the motto for every cabinet officer, and his friends say, "Woe betide that cabinet member or other executive official who attempts to loaf on the job."

Desiring to assess the trouble in the wheat regions of the north-west and find remedies for it, he had Secretaries Wallace and Hoover call a conference. Desiring to appoint a judge, he asked his attorney general to investigate the qualifications of various eligibles and make a recommendation. He may soon appoint a new Prohibition Commissioner and the chances are that to one he will appoint the man recommended by Secretary Mellon, whose department has jurisdiction over prohibition enforcement.

All the while Mr. Coolidge was maintaining a routine of daily life outlined by physicians and found by experience as best to keep him in health. He quickly established the custom of taking two daily walks of half a mile each about the grounds near the White House, one before breakfast and the other before dinner. This practice he still follows, rain or shine. Soon after he entered the White House he essayed horseback riding, but finding it took an undue amount of time out of his daily minimum, he installed in his dressing room a mechanical horse controlled by electricity, and designed to provide the same exercise as a canter over the bridge path. He takes a turn at this two or three times a day. The President's leisure for meals never vary. He goes to bed each night about 10 o'clock, gets eight hours sleep, and takes a nap after lunch. He finds relaxation in week-end trips with some friends aboard the Mayflower, where business rarely is transacted.

He repeatedly has manifested his aversion to public speaking, confining himself, in his first year in office, to less than a dozen important public addresses and to few trips away from Washington. He has declared his belief that the American people would rather have a President who remained on the job than one who went touring the country. But he sees many people, Secretary Slomp, working in cooperation with him, opened the door to the Presidential office to almost every White House visitor so that many who came to Washington on public business found it easier to see the President, if for only a word to say, than to confer with some lowly bureau chief, a casualness that is sometimes distracting to those most interested.

Conflicts with Congress over tax revision, the soldiers' bonus, postal pay, and the Japanese exclusion provision of the immigration bill marked his initial year in the White House, and he has shown plainly that he does not soon forget a vote by a Republican Senator or House member adverse to his policies. The Senate investigations disturbed, but did not worry him. Gradually he has sought more and more to exercise his influence with Congress, but his success with a Congress elected on a platform with him remains to be seen.

TWENTY-THREE DIVORCES WERE GIVEN IN 1924

Seven Wives Desert Husbands According to Complaints Filed in Court.

CHILDREN AFFECTED

Thirty-One Children Out of Twelve Homes Affected by Divorces Secured by Their Parents.

Douglas county had 203 marriages and 23 divorces during the year of 1924, according to figures gleaned from the records of County Clerk I. B. Riddle.

Considering the number of marriages, the divorce per centage is considered rather low, compared with the general average. Of the 23 divorces, 14 were secured on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, 8 on grounds of desertion, and 1 for felony. Twelve were procured by wives and 11 by husbands.

The man is usually given credit for deserting his family, but the 1924 divorce records indicate an opposite state of facts. Of the 14 divorces granted for desertion, 7 of these were obtained by men, only 1 wife charging her husband with leaving her.

Of the 14 charges of cruel and inhuman treatment, 10 were brought by women and 4 by men. One woman secured a divorce because her husband who is a felon and confined to the penitentiary for crime.

In twelve of the 23 homes which were broken by the law, there were children. In all 31 children were affected. In one family there were 3 children all under the age of 21 years.

One marriage went on the rocks within six months, when the bride tired of her husband and departed with another man. One couple weathered the matrimonial storms for 22 years before the crash finally came. One couple held out 23 years, two for 21 and one for 20 years. There were three marriages which ended after the first year and three after the second year. Others lasted six, seven and eight years.

Only one case out of the 23 was contested, divorces being procured in the others without objection. Student-aid costs less per pound than butter.

HOPPE TO MEET CLEVER OPPONENT

CHICAGO, March 2. - Willie Hoppe, the veteran champion and young Jake Schaefer, his most dangerous opponent, find themselves dividing appearances in the remaining four games of the international tournament here for the world's championship at 15.2 balkline billiards.

This afternoon Schaefer gets an opportunity to continue his record tumbling display with Kamekichi Suzuki of Japan, the goat of the tournament, as his opponent. Tonight Hoppe will engage Edouard Foremans, the Belgian champion.

Tomorrow the great climax will bring together Hoppe and Schaefer. Upon that result possibly will depend the championship, since Hoppe and Schaefer are favored to win their matches today and tonight. Schaefer's brilliant playing last week eclipsed all records.

Tommy Milton is Winner in Race. Culver City, Cal., March 2. - A battle of split seconds and three point decimals today was the aftermath of the 250 mile automobile race with Tommy Milton won here yesterday in the alleged time of one hour 38 minutes and 13 seconds. Milton's victory was not contested but argument raged between officials as to whether he had or had not broken the world's record set by Bennett Hill on the same track last December.

According to William Reuss, who clocked the cars with the official timing device, there may be some slight revision of Milton's time, but there is no likelihood of such revision showing that a world's record was broken.

On the other hand Harold Weller of the American Automobile Association contest board stated early today that a recheck of both Milton's time and the time made by Bennett Hill in his record breaking December race will show Milton was slightly faster yesterday than Hill was last December.

Meanwhile, regardless of the outcome of the world's record controversy, Milton today has $10,000 in prize money and 500 points toward the national championship to his credit as a result of his taking first place in yesterday's whirl.

FARM NEWS. CHERRY DISEASE CONTROL. The annual value of the cherry crop in Douglas County is increasing each year and every effort should be made to control the diseases attacking this fruit. The Spray demonstrations with this fruit over a period of three years has brought to light several important factors. Chief among these is the apparent loss each year from the fungus disease known as Monilia Blight. This disease is much more serious on cherries than other fruits, such as DeAnjou, and Comice pears, apricots and almonds, due to the fact that it often destroys the entire bud cluster and fruit spur of all varieties of sweet cherries. It can be said there is yet much to learn about this disease before we can state that a full control program has been found. Experiments so far indicate that Bordeaux mixture in the 6-6-50 and 4-4-50 formulas are by all odds the most effective control. Work the last year indicates that some change must be made to the schedules as published in the past. The new schedule should be considered as one of more timely application and additional sprays rather than any new plan. Mr. B. W. Cooney, the County Agent, recommends the following program upon all varieties of sweet cherries. 1st Time - As flower buds show tips of flower petals. Material Bordeaux 6-6-50. 2nd Time - Four to five days after full bloom. (This spray is the new addition to the old program) Material 4-4-50 Bordeaux. 3rd Time - As young fruits are coming through the husk. Material Bordeaux 4-4-50. 4th Time - Three weeks before harvest of the crop. Material, Oregon Cold Mix. The preparation of Bordeaux mixture is important and should be carefully and thoroughly done if maximum results are expected. Methods of making a number of spray materials, together with Bordeaux mixture and the Oregon Cold Mix are given in Station Bulletin No. 201, entitled "Preparation of Spray Materials." A copy of this bulletin will be mailed to any grower upon request, together with the 1925 spray schedule. Cherry growers will also be interested in the problem of cherry pollenization. This subject is well handled in the Station Circular No. 27, "Pollination of Sweet Cherries" by C. E. Schuster. The County Agent is very much interested in the presence within the county of the Cherry Fruit Fly. This fly produces a maggot within the cherry similar to the codling moth in the apple. Reports of its presence by the growers will be appreciated. Notice Car Owners - Complete line of balloon tires and tubes at Hohl's Garage, 121 N. Stephens St.
