W. E. D. STOKES ON TRIAL TAKES WITNESS STAND

had been passed from person to person always on the trail of red-haired "Helen Underwood."

Mr. Stokes said that he was guided over most of this Chicago investigation by a Mrs. Ella Frier-son who knew many of the Everleigh Club inmates.

He said that he encountered a Julia Yancey in his search for "Helen Underwood" and that Julia threatened him with a broom, threatened to black both his eyes and kicked him into the middle of the street.

"I thought it best to retire," said Mr. Stokes describing Julia's attitude. "And I did," he added emphatically, as Judge Gemmill led the court room spectators in a laugh.

His next tip came from the son of a former cook at the Everleigh Club, he said. The man told him of a red-haired Helen at the Everleigh Club who associated with a negro man.

One woman to whom Ella Frier-son guided him looked at Mrs. Stokes picture and said: "Yes, that's Helen, all right, she's like old wine, improves with age."

In his story the millionaire mentioned several payments of $5 and $10 to various persons who had assisted him in the investigation and said he had been willing to pay $5, $10 or even $20 for a catalogue of the girls at Everleigh Club which one woman told him had been printed just before the resort was closed.

DAWES' SPEECH IS DISCUSSED IN THE SENATE

terday's proceedings and Senator Curtis, the republican leader, asked, as is customary, that the reading be dispensed with. Senators Reed and Hale demanded recognition.

"The senator from Maine," said Mr. Dawes.

Senator Hale said certain criticism of the vice-president had appeared in the morning newspapers because he had not returned to the senate chamber yesterday at the conclusion of the inaugural ceremonies.

Senator Reed interrupted but Senator Hale continued: "After the president had finished speaking, the president and Mrs. Coolidge and the vice-president and Mrs. Dawes went down the steps to the waiting autos. The president started off and the vice-president then turned to me and said 'I must return to the senate in order to preside over that body; how do I get there?'

"I replied he was not to return to the senate, but was to go to the reviewing stand in front of the White House to review the parade. This was due to a misunderstanding on my part and if any blame attaches it must rest upon me."

Senator Reed at once demanded that the journal be read but Senator Curtis wanted to go ahead with appointment of a committee to notify the president the new senate was in session and the Missouri finally agreed to an adjournment until 2 o'clock.

But Senator Ashurst then demanded attention to explain that he had been misrepresented in this morning newspapers as casting certain strictures on Mr. Dawes for his attack on the senate rules.

He added that he had not criticized Mr. Dawes on that score but that he had objected to the "unseemly and unkindly interruption" by the vice-president of the ceremony of swearing in new senators.

This sally passed without reply and then the senate went through the motions of appointing a committee to wait on the president and took a recess while Senator Reed walked over to the secretary's desk and stepped down from the dais to the republican side of the chamber to shake hands with Senator Cummins of Iowa and became the center of an informal reception.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5.—Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, was selected today by senate republicans as their candidate for president-pro-tempe of the senate.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5.—Vice-President Dawes' departure from the usual procedure of the senate yesterday became the subject of debate today immediately after the senate convened.

The new vice-president was president and he and Senator Curtis of Kansas, the republican leader, were undertaking to hasten the proceedings when Senator Hale, republican, Maine, arose to explain that he alone was responsible for Mr. Dawes' leaving the senate for a time yesterday without a regularly constituted presiding officer.

Then Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, objected to dispensing with the reading of the journal as he customary, explaining that he wanted to find out just how the journal recorded events yesterday at the first special session over which Mr. Dawes presided.

Arising to a point of personal privilege, Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, said the newspapers had credited to him some strictures on Mr. Dawes' inaugural address and declared that whatever criticism he offered had been because of his "unseemly and unkindly interruption" of the administering of oaths to senators.

Senator Ashurst declared there were many things in Mr. Dawes' address about modification of senate rules with which he was in entire accord.

After some more discussion with a quorum call the reading of the journal went over until later in the day, and the senate recessed until 2 p. m. so that a committee might advise the president that it was ready to transact business.

Republican and democratic leaders virtually were unanimous, however, in the opinion that there would be no change in the rules to meet views so vigorously expressed yesterday by the new vice-president, while a number of senators have for some time favored modifications, all efforts to that end within recent years have been unsuccessful.

Chairman Curtis of the rules committee sought a year or two ago to get an amendment that would make limitation of debate possible under certain conditions, but he recalled today that the proposition got just three votes.

Senators pointed out today that Mr. Dawes would have neither voice nor vote on the question of senate rules since under the constitution the senate alone has authority to determine its procedure.

While designated as presiding officer of the senate the authority of limited to the making of parliamentary rulings and the casting of a vote only in the event of a tie. He cannot participate in debate and a majority of the senate even can override any ruling he makes.

Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas was re-elected republican floor leader, and Senator James E. Watson of Indiana was again selected as vice chairman of the conference.

Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of New York continued as the conference secretary.

Senator Curtis was directed to select a party whip and is expected to reappoint Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington. The majority leader also authorized to fill any vacancies on the republican committee on committees which names the republicans, insurgents and farmer-labor to the regular standing committees.

All of the present standing official senators were re-nominated. They are George A. Sanderson, secretary; David H. Barry, sergeant-at-arms and the Rev. J. J. Muir, chaplain.

Organization of the senate will await a meeting of the democrats in conference within a day or two to select their slate candidates.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5.—The world court issue was injected today into the special session of the senate.

Senator Swanson of Virginia, the ranking democrat on the foreign relations committee, reintroduced his resolution for American adherence to the court.

MEDFORD MAN KILLED—(Associated Press Leased Wire.) MEDFORD, Ore., March 5.—Frank Jones of Medford, 35 years old, was instantly killed last evening, when the scaffold on which he was painting the barn on the ranch of Paul Shearer near Central Point collapsed and he fell thirty feet striking his head upon the sharp edge of a rain barrel. His wife witnessed the tragedy, and is reported today in such a serious condition that arrangements for the funeral have been indefinitely delayed.

RANCHER FOUND DEAD.—(Associated Press Leased Wire.) MEDFORD, Ore., March 5.—Orin W. Train, 69, well known in the Evans creek district, where he has lived nearly forty years, was found dead last night on his ranch with a bullet through his head. Although the dead man had a .38-caliber revolver in one hand, from which a shell had been exploded, there is some doubt of a suicide, according to officers investigating, as Train was of a cheerful disposition, had no financial worries and the morning of his death purchased a supply of provisions. Coroner H. W. Conger will visit the ranch today, and decide whether or not an inquest is necessary. Train lived alone, his two sons, Marion and Orin living at Prospect, Ore.

Business At Riddle.—Mrs. Florence Grandy, county health nurse, and Miss Hazel Smith, of the U. S. veterans' bureau, spent the day at Riddle attending to official duties.
