DEATH TOLL IS INCREASING IN STORM AREA

The Industrial Coal company by miners who were working a mile and a half from the shaft, says a West Frankfort, Ill., special dispatch to the St. Louis Post Dispatch today.

Robert McPhail, "bottom boss," at the mine was quoted as follows by a Post Dispatch correspondent: "I was at the bottom, 512 feet down," he said. "There were about 500 men working inside. It felt like the wind blowing right through the bottom. The electric lights went off and we called on our carbide lamps. I had rolled up above on the telephone and they told us a storm was coming. "We got the 500 men out of there in forty minutes without any of them being hurt. "About forty men were working on top. Four were killed. Some were hurt badly and all were cut and bruised."

Town Will Rebuild MURPHYSBORO, Ill., Mar. 21.—"Murphysboro will rebuild." It was one of the bravest losers as a result of the tornado but they issued this defiance to a citizens meeting held here yesterday.

Charles Ritter, a business man, "wept it" after Governor Small and a dozen relief workers, officials and commissioners painted the horrors of the tornado. "The relief activities," Ritter said, "can be only temporary. It is what will happen after the temporary relief measures that concerns us mostly."

"The Mobile and Ohio shops are destroyed. The Brown Shoe company's factory is gone. There alone were jobs for 5,000. We must prepare for the future and bring hope to the stricken by assuring them that their jobs will come back."

"The banks of this town are prepared to strain their credit to the utmost to aid its people in restoring their lost homes and industry. "Murphysboro and you will build on the ruins. It may take years to get back our old status, but Murphysboro will rebuild."

Ritter, one of the town's wealthiest men, striking looking with white hair and ruddy cheeks, clutched down from the speaker's platform with tears in his eyes and Murphysboro uttered the cheers that swept over it since the advent of the tornado on Wednesday.

Order Replaces Chaos INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Mar. 21.—"Destruction and terror left in the path of the tornado which Wednesday killed or fatally injured 104 persons, injured more than 500 and caused property damage in excess of three million dollars, in this state, raze way today under a cheering influence of a vast army of relief workers and saved."

Order appeared where chaos had reigned as the bereaved were being comforted, the injured cared for, and the dead buried.

The situation in Southern Indiana seemed to be well in hand. Griffin, where 54 persons are known to have perished and several others were reported missing, was completely devastated. It will be rebuilt. Sixty-four families of the obliterated village have announced they will remain and rebuild their homes.

Meanwhile the work of clearing the debris at Princeton, where 22 perished and at Owensville where 14 died, was progressing rapidly.

The death list at Princeton was increased today by one when one of the injured, William Mitchell, died. Likewise, the death list was increased at Elizabeth where two persons died from injuries and death, bringing the total of dead there to five. A like number perished at Passerville, while four others died at North Sands.

The Wabash river, which yesterday caused some apprehension, appeared today to be receding and only the lowlands became inundated.

The work of rebuilding homes and factories was planned yesterday and in most cases the destroyed buildings will be replaced by finer structures.

Continue Traffic Task CHICAGO, Mar. 21.—The storm swept across the Ohio valley today continued the traffic task of burying its dead, while relief workers completed the duty of bringing order out of chaos and plans for rehabilitation were advanced.

Funerals of some of the victims of Wednesday's storm were held yesterday, but most of the burials were arranged for today and Sunday with memorial services to be held later. In towns where the loss of life was heaviest community funerals were planned, with burial in one lone grave.

Reports from the destroyed districts said that relief work was well organized and today a flood of material aid continued to pour in for sufferers in the greatest tornado in America's history, which snuffed out more than 800 lives, injured 2,000 persons and left entire communities homeless.

While some cases of pneumonia were reported in Southern Illinois, there were little other illnesses to add to the storm horror and no threat of an epidemic of tetanus. Seven hundred units of anti-tetanus serum, sent by airplane from Anselmo, was available for immediate use.

A few isolated cases of footlock came to light, but generally there was no disorder. At West Frankfort a man caught taking a tin from a woman's finger was slain by a police officer.

Business generally was at a standstill but with the work of clearing debris from demolished districts proceeding rapidly commercial activities in some communities were expected to be resumed next week. The main street of Murphysboro was cleared yesterday.

An early check of casualty lists today indicated that the death count was slightly more than 500. Additions to the deaths in some towns and subtraction of duplications left these figures at 809 dead, 2,916 injured. The toll at Murphysboro rose to 501 with the finding of 11 additional bodies while belated reports from rural districts made further additions but in other places original estimates were reduced as final checks were made; no radical change was anticipated as checked lists of identified dead contained 550 names.

The Red Cross at St. Louis issued an appeal for all sick persons to remain away from the storm area, warning that every available building was taxed to capacity in caring for the injured and homeless.

Funerals of Parrish, Ill., victims were held in adjacent towns, as nearly all of the town's 250 inhabitants were killed or injured and the handful of survivors moved to homes of neighbors outside the tornado district.

At Gorham, which first felt the elemental blow in Illinois, 12 funerals were held yesterday. The total casualties may never be known as completed records were not kept.

Many of the victims were moved to other towns. Twenty-two dead were known to be in St. Louis alone.

In the wilderness that is Murphysboro where 1,000 residences once stood, search for additional bodies was continued. Of 700 injured, 500 were said to be in a serious condition. Medicine, clothing and food was arriving by the carload for its 4,000 homeless.

Women and Children Killed WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Mar. 21.—"One of the most touching features of the tornado here was the large proportion of women and children killed."

More than 1500 coal miners were at work beneath the surface in the devastated area and thus escaped injury or death.

Nearly forty percent of the dead in West Frankfort were women and children. One of the most touching scenes after the disaster was the long row in the morgue of Illinois bodies from which life had been snuffed out almost in the twinkling of an eye.

West Frankfort and other storm stricken communities in Franklin county today went about the grim task of burying the bulk of their dead. Of the 163 known dead in the county virtually all had been identified and funeral arrangements made.

Telegraph Wires Jammed WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Mar. 21.—One of the busiest places in West Frankfort after Wednesday's storm was the Western Union office through which passed more than 6,000 messages within 48 hours, representing a total of approximately 120,000 words, W. I. Prater, superintendent's representative estimated.

Most of the outgoing messages told of deaths or injuries or carried appeals for aid. The incoming messages consisted chiefly of inquiries from anxious relatives and friends.

Of the three regular Western Union wires into West Frankfort, the Chicago and St. Louis outlets were severed, while only the wire to Cairo was left in operation. At one time 1,000 outgoing messages were on file unsend and some of these had been on hand 12 hours.

Two hundred messages from persons at West Frankfort were received at Marion, Carbondale and Cairo and forwarded to West Frankfort by train or courier. Boy scouts acted as messenger boys and despite the confusion have been able to deliver practically all of the telegrams.

Nation Extends Sympathy ST. LOUIS, Mar. 21.—Evidence of a nation aroused to sympathy for its hurt and suffering was at hand here today. By a telegram a citizen of Redlands, Cal., sent $100 to the American Trust company here for use in helping the sick and the injured of the tornado devastated regions southeast of St. Louis.

The money was turned over to the Red Cross.

Death Toll Soaring MURPHYSBORO, Ill., Mar. 21.—Despite a steadily soaring death toll from Wednesday's tornado, Murphysboro today turned its attention to permanent relief.

Deaths of injured and recoveries of bodies from the broad area of tangled and charred debris pushed the total toll to 201 and it was feared further exploration of the wilderness of shattered homes covering 152 square blocks would further increase the list.

The general situation was well in hand however, and with the needed quota of doctors and nurses to attend the 700 injured, the graver problem of providing semi-permanent housing, food and clothing for helpless thousands who have herded together, two and three and even seven families to the homes, claimed first attention.

Murphysboro's quota of 6,000 tents was available today and plans were going forward for establishing a tent city. Sanitation engineers have already surveyed an area, it was stated, and strict plans have been made for preventing an epidemic.

The Red Cross today will start a tabulation of the status of families rendered homeless here, not as a basis of their former possessions and standing, but on what is actually needed now.

Only fifty bodies were buried yesterday, and other interments will continue today and tomorrow, and a huge community funeral service on the public square Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Pullman sleepers on slides here offered accommodations for 500 women and children last night, said Marion, Ill., sent word that fifty furnished homes were available, free.

The Illinois Central and Mobile and Ohio railroads are offering free passage to any destination to refugees.

One of the most unusual stories of the storm came to light late last night when it was related that workers searching the debris of the Logan grade school uncovered a lad of 12 years. He was found when he first reached the light and air but he recovered quickly. A photograph of the boy, turned him, but the boy thought of his hunger and mother and dashed for home like a frightened hare.

It was feared that a number of other students possibly still were buried in the Logan school debris.

Start Rehabilitation. CARBONDALE, Ill., Mar. 21.—Rehabilitation work in the devastated tornado-swept area of Southern Illinois was underway today, while the dead were yet unburied and the homeless and injured were still being aided.

A survey of the entire district was promised by a construction corporation with a view to determining the damage to buildings and other property and ascertaining the amount of reconstruction necessary to repair or to replace the wrecked structures.

Meanwhile relief work now thoroughly organized in all towns of the stricken area was progressing smoothly with plenty of doctors and nurses to care for a hundreds of injured and a steady supply of provisions, clothing and other necessities flowing into the storm area.

The homeless today were quartered in homes of the more fortunate or in army tents sent by military authorities to the devastated towns, while clothing and food was being issued to all who are in need.

The business of burying the more than 500 dead in the Illinois storm section, which was started yesterday, not under way in earliest today with a procession of hearse, coffin and casket in near every stricken town.

In many of the towns, several victims were buried in one large grave; in others separate services were being held. Some towns to improve plan mass memorial services for the dead. The area was under strict military supervision, although not under military law.

Two Towns Annihilated. CHICAGO, Mar. 21.—Two towns in Illinois, Parrish and DeSoto and Griffin in Indiana were virtually annihilated. The outlook is that no effort will be made to rebuild the Illinois towns, but State Senator Sneed refused to give up as to DeSoto. "My father is buried there," he said.

Griffin, where 54 persons are known to have perished and several have been reported as missing will be rebuilt, it was announced today. After the storm it was indicated the town would not be rebuilt. One old man, although not a house was left standing, announced he would return and build. "I don't want to die elsewhere," he said.

Many Narrow Escapes WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Mar. 21.—Numerous narrow escapes, many of them miraculous, were related by survivors of Wednesday's tornado in this section. Several were hurled through the air for yards and yet lived to tell of their experience. Among these was Orlin Gray, C. B. yardmaster and a brother of the mayor of West Frankfort.

"I saw the tornado coming and warned the three others in the office to get out," Bagley said. "Just as I was leaving the building the rush of wind picked me up as if I were a feather, twisted me around and dropped me in a ditch forty feet away in which there was three feet of water."

"I was stunned but was conscious enough to keep my head
