Girl "Squealer" Hides in Prison Fearing Death From Dope Ring

"I know what it means, but even if they do succeed in murdering me, I can face even that unafraid. I will feel that I have atoned for my sins if I can save some of the girls who are daily being recruited from the shop and the street."

the authorities to clear up one of the strongest links in the drug chain; and now, defying threats of murder during the trial, and facing the possibility of being hunted and hounded for the rest of her life she writes the story of her sinister adventures.

From behind the protecting bars of a New York prison a pretty little fair-haired girl, once a member of one of the greatest dope distributing rings in the world, declares she is not sorry for having "squealed." Fearing the vengeance of the men whom she has betrayed, the pretty victim of the dope ring is confined at her own request, and as a material witness in the impending trial of a Chinaman accused of the murder of two men. She has already given information which has helped

In an article appearing in the April number of Smart Set, this girl, who is still in her teens, tells how she was lured into the service of the eastern branch of one of the two largest dope distributing rings in the world. She tells of her experiences in the Toig war, of her final escape; her betrayal of the ring's secrets; and she tells how this deadly traffic is carried on by young girls—"until their beauty begins to fade."

A Wrap of Distinction Corinne Griffith Combines Chinchilla and Ermine for the Smart Theatre Wrap

Furs, when beautifully combined, afford the most beautiful and luxurious of evening wraps. Particularly effective are these combinations when white ermine is the foundation.

Corinne Griffith has chosen a wrap of real charm and distinction to wear in several of the scenes from her newest First National film, "Deceit." It combines white ermine and chinchilla with remarkable results.

The pastel shades which are so much the vogue now along the Riviera and at Palm Beach, promise to become the spring's favorites for the formal gowns for the theatre and dance. These delicate colors are most effective when worn beneath a wrap of fur or ermine, or ermine and chinchilla. But the charm of this type of covering is that vivid tones are usually well chosen to wear beneath it.

The lining of the wrap, of course, is important, and Paris has seen to it that the wraps of true distinction are lined in the most gorgeous of silks, plain and embroidered.

Legend Traces Hyacinth to Sorrow of Apollo

The wild hyacinth was originally found in Greece and Asia Minor. The ancient Greeks had a story about its origin to the effect that one day the god Apollo was playing a game of quoits with a young mortal, Hyacinthus, of whom he was very fond, when Zephyrus, the god of the west wind, passing by, Zephyrus was jealous of Apollo and blew the latter's quoit aside, and caused it to strike Hyacinthus and inflict a mortal wound. In his memory Apollo caused these beautiful and fragrant clustered blossoms to spring from the fallen drops of the youth's blood.

The hyacinth was brought to western Europe in the sixteenth century, and extensively cultivated by Dutch horticulturists. The original blue and purple blossoms were varied to numerous shades of pink, rose, yellow, scarlet and pure white. —Kansas City Star.

Lighthouse Story

Bishop's light rises near the Selly Islands and gives a grim warning of the dangers of the coast. It is one of the most exposed lighthouses in the world and the three tenders have a lonesome time. During a recent storm the beams from Bishop's rock came near to falling. The light weighs several tons and revolves on supports resting in a circular trough of mercury. It is balanced so delicately a child may turn it by a touch of the finger. On this night the tower was so shaken by the heavy seas that much of the mercury was spilled out over the concrete floor of the light chamber. The three guards fell to their knees, scooped up the mercury in their hands and poured it back into the trough.

Sunrising

When the sun approaches towards the gates of the morning, he first opens a little eye of heaven, and sends away the spirit of darkness, and gives light to a cock, and calls up the lark to matins, and by and by builds the fringes of a cloud, and peeps over the eastern hills, thrusting out his golden horns, like those which decked the brows of Moses when he was forced to wear a veil because himself had seen the face of God; and still, while a man tells the story, the sun gets up higher, till he shows a fair face and a full light, and then he shines one whole day.—Jeremy Taylor.

Making Fine Distinctions

"A woman does not mind being called a kitten, but hates to be named a cat. A man, on the contrary, is flattered at being thought a dog, but resents being referred to as a puppy."

"When a man describes a woman as a 'sympathetic soul' you know that she has placed herself like a silent and saculent sponge full in the flow of his eloquence for a considerable number of hours, while he declaimed to her his 'conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,' in an uninterrupted monologue of complacency."—"Mere Man," by Honor Bright
