

What is Worth While?

It is not the critic who counts, nor the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marred by dust and sweat; who strives valiantly; who errs and may fall again and again because there is no effort without error or shortcoming, but who does actually strive to do the deeds. His place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat. We are striving to do a service to this community and shall at all times aim to give you the best we have and in the best way we know how. Come in and give us the opportunity to serve you. AUSTIN MIRES PAYS TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF MRS. C. L. HADLEY

Through the Daily Oregonian I first received information of the death of Mrs. Adelia Slocum Hadley, at her home in Roseburg, Oregon, March 25, 1925, at the age of 71 years. Though over a half a thousand miles from the place where she died, sitting here alone in my home, when I read that notice my eyes were flooded with unbidden tears and my heart was clouded with a loneliness that beggars description, for the realization was forced upon me that I would never see the dearest friend of my early days again.

And now, while others among her immediate neighbors and friends have, doubtless, paid her fitting eulogy, I felt would lay my feeble tribute of respect and appreciation upon the shrine of her memory.

Her father, William Slocum, and family crossed the plains with ox teams in the year 1853. They journeyed part of the way with my own parents and the two families passed their first winter in Oregon at Milwaukie, on the Willamette River, a few miles below Oregon City. In 1854 they moved to the Umpqua Valley. The Slocum family settled on a farm a few miles east of Wilbur, where they resided for several years, and where Adelia their youngest child was born. They finally moved to Roseburg, where they continued their residence until the death of both Mr. and Mrs. Slocum. Adelia never had a home outside the limits of Douglas County. There in the community of her birth she grew to womanhood, married, performed her life work and died.

I knew her from early childhood. We grew up together, she being my junior by something over two years. We were schoolmates and classmates together at old Umpqua Academy. After our school days were over we were thrown together for several years at Roseburg, where she lived with her parents. We attended dances and other social gatherings together. We attended church together. We attended weddings together. We attended funerals together. I make these recitations to show my opportunity for knowing her. I knew her well.

We were never lovers in the popular conception of that term, but we were constant and devoted friends. She was my chain, my confidante, my pal. She knew my heart and mind—my affections and my ambitions. During all the years of our intimate association my memory, now, fails to recall one lapse of jar in our friendship or one cross word or disagreement between us. She knew me better than any other. She recognized and appreciated my ability and the better elements of my nature and she understood equally as well my imperfections and shortcomings. I confided to her my closest secrets and she never once betrayed my confidence.

She was the offspring of sturdy pioneers, members of a people, courageous, self-supporting, honest, hospitable. A people of unshakable hope and deathless faith in the right. A people who dared to do. A people who crossed the trackless plains and pathless wilderness, undeterred by natural barrier and undaunted by savage opposition in their way. Who made ways over the impassable hand of men and women of which time bears record. And she, Adelia, inherited largely of the attributes and sterling virtues of this people.

She was born to humble estate. She bore no title and she inherited no fortune, but she accepted the conditions under which she was born and in which she was destined to live without a murmur or voice of regret. And she gladly met and cheerfully performed every duty that arose in her way, from youth to age; and in the performance of these duties she was just as steady and true as the rhythmic tramp of Time.

She was in love with life and her nature was fully charged with vivacity and cheer. In her younger days she loved to dance and there in graceful movement she had grace a peer. She loved to make merry with her friends on festive occasions, but she never lost her womanly dignity nor laid aside her womanly modesty. She was always truly and wholesomely feminine.

Her heart was pure. Her mind was chaste. Her soul was white as snow. She was industrious and earned her living by honest endeavor. She was sympathetic and kind, generous and magnanimous. There was not a shade of malice in her heart. It gave her joy to be able to remove a stone or a thorn from the path that others' feet must tread.

She gave more to humanity than she ever received, and I deem this one of the highest tributes that can be paid to man or woman. She was the Finest Nightingale of the community in which she lived.

I know she had passed life's three score and ten meridian, but I cannot now think and I never have thought of her as being old. I know her honest face was wrinkled by the ruthless hands of Time and Toil and Care, but there were no wrinkles in her heart. To me she was eternally the same beautiful, faithful pal of my youth and young manhood, and so shall continue in my memory.

ATTEMPT MADE TO ROB PUBLIC LIBRARY DURING LAST NIGHT

Some unknown person entered the library building last night and ransacked the librarian's desk, apparently in the search for money. Entrance was gained through the doorway leading from the side porch into the Slocum memorial room, tracks showing plainly where the prowler entered. Although the desk drawer was unlocked, the would-be thief attempted to flumm the drawer before discovering that it was open. No money was left in the desk, and after searching the till carefully the thief left taking Mrs. Rebenstein's fountain pen as his sole reward for his nefarious work.

CITIZEN'S CAMPS OFFER TRAINING FREE TO YOUNG MEN

The Citizen's Military Training Camp will be held this year during the month between June 19 to July 18. These camps are conducted under the National Defense act, the object being to bring together young men of a high type from all sections of the country and thereby to develop closer national and social unity; to teach the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship; to stimulate patriotism; to interest young men in the importance of military training; to teach self discipline and obedience; and to develop the physical standard of the American youth, through participation in military exercises, athletic games and sports conducted under expert directors.

The benefits to be derived from attendance at these camps are secured without expense to the students, as the government provides transportation to camp and return, board and lodging, expert medical attention, uniform, equipment, arms and laundry.

Each camp will have a surgeon, a chaplain, a morale and recreation officer and an athletic officer. These duties will be to safeguard the health and morale surroundings of the students. Every effort will be made by the camp personnel to make the stay of the students both pleasant and profitable and to send them home better qualified physically, mentally and morally, to meet the responsibilities of citizenship.

President Calvin Coolidge says: "These camps are an essential to the plan of national security. They promote obedience to law and respect for the institutions of a well ordered society. Young men are helped to their physical, health, mental vigor and moral excellence. Social understandings, democratic thinking are developed; love and reverence for the flag are the natural outcome of the training. Courtesy in act, sympathy in feeling, tolerance in thought are the ideal." Visitors day will be held and all parents are welcome, and they will notice the soldierly bearing, the order, neatness and sanitation required from all. The recruits will be accorded the treatment of a man; and when he returns home at the conclusion of the camp, he will have developed a larger sense of his responsibilities as a future citizen of the United States. The camp offers a month of healthful education and patriotism with all expenses paid.

A film showing the activities and entertainments of last year's camp at Camp Lewis, will be shown at the Antlers Theatre, on Saturday, April 18, under the auspices of the local chapter of the Reserve Officers Association.
