Vinegar for Longevity

A man died in the apple district of New York who had spent nearly all of his ninety-two years in the manufacture of vinegar and he had contended for years that the secret of his longevity was the character of his work and it seems as if there might be something in his contention, for almost simultaneously there comes a story from England where the ages of four employees aggregate 333 years. The oldest of this group was nearly ninety and the youngest nearly seventy. The proprietor of the establishment said he knew of another vinegar distillery where there were four generations of one family at work.

Garismen Work Hard

A professor at Yale university has been making tests with regard to the energy used by trained racing oarsmen. He tells us, London Times notes, that they are more efficient than most gasoline and steam engines, as one-fourth of the energy produced by the rowers goes directly toward driving the boat. Special apparatus showed that during a race an oarsman breathes 16 gallons of air a minute. Each man produces nearly four horse-power in energy at the start of a race, and in a four-mile event his body will use up fuel equal to nearly half a pound of sugar.

Uncle's Will Great Help

They were discussing the things which help a man to obtain success in the world, when one young man said: "There's nothing like force of character." Now, there's Jones. He's sure to make his way in the world. He's a will of his own, you know. "But Brown has something better in his favor," said his friend. "A will of his uncle's."

Uncle Eben

"I've got a few members of the congregation keep off to sleep," said Uncle Eben, the minister, as he gave a sermon and not a little bedtime story.

Mankind Vainly Seeks Nature's Great Secret

We may be quite certain that Nature holds in reserve causes of resurrection, as it also holds in its hands the causes of destruction. For Nature, there is nothing. An action which requires a hundred thousand years to accomplish is as clearly determined and planned as an action which requires only a minute. Absolutely speaking, eternity exists alone, and time is but a relative form. As for our human personalities, which are a part of this universal matter, and their immortality or resurrection, it would be of the highest interest for us to know the essence of the soul. Each of the constituent atoms of our bodies is indestructible and incessantly travels from one incorporation to another. Logic leads us to think that our vital force, our psychic monad, our individual self, is equally indestructible and more justly, able to rise to the stars. Under what conditions does it exist? Under what forms is it reincarnated? What were we before birth? What shall become of us after death? Astronomy gives us the first reply worthy of the majesty of Nature. But this reply cannot be merely the corollary of a psychological solution. Let the astronomer indicate the astronomer. Let them work with facts instead of speculating with words, and one day the veil of Isis shall be entirely raised for our souls, which so eagerly long for the truth. Positive science, science alone, will reply: "Life is universal and eternal."—Dr. Arthur Schopenhauer in the New York Herald-Tribune.

After All, Foundations Are Things That Count

As you have watched a skyscraper rise slowly from a deep foundation, has it ever occurred to you to liken your life to the erecting of a building? A huge skyscraper was under construction in our neighborhood. It seemed to take a long time to dig the foundation. Progress in getting the basement built also appeared very slow. It took a man seven to eight months to dig the hole for the foundation. After that, however, the skyscraper rose rapidly. To anyone who had not followed the early stages, it must have appeared that the building tumbled up almost overnight. Isn't it very much the same with a successful career? Every now and again a man seems to climb spectacularly. To those who don't know him, his progress looks phenomenal. But that is because they have not followed closely all the foundation-laying the man has done. Usually those least astonished by a big man's rise are those who have been most familiar with his earlier record. They have seen the planning, the planning, the sweating. Any man who appears to raise a monument to himself must first expend endless toil in preparing the right kind of foundation.—Forbes Magazine.

Who Knows?

It was in a restaurant. The anxious waiter was hovering round the spluttering and benevolent diner. "Do you believe that history repeats itself, sir?" he asked anxiously. "I certainly do," replied the customer as he rose from the table and put down the napkin he had been using. The waiter's face lost something of that anxious look. "Well," he said, "a gentleman who was here yesterday gave me $1 for a tip."

Old-Time Shoes

Henry VIII suffered from gout and, judging by their footwear, so did most of his subjects. Shoes because of such extraordinary width that, owing to the fact that England is an island and space limited, a few men possess footwear any one to wear shoes wider than six inches across the toes. Elizabethan boots were the most ornate. Worked in gold and silver, they cost at least $50 a pair. In 1603 the present type of shoe was introduced, and in 1608 buckles came into fashion but it was not until the Nineteenth century that shoes were made specially to fit the right and left foot.—From T. P.'s and Cassell's Weekly.

Danger as Years Pass

As the years go by we are all more or less subject to two dangers, the danger of prostration and the danger of prostration; either that we shall become hard and callous, crusted over with customs and convention till no new ray of light or joy can reach us, or that we shall become lax and dissipated, losing our grip upon the real and vital sources of happiness and power. writes John Burroughs. Now there is no preservative and antiseptic, nothing keeps one's heart young, like love, like sympathy, like giving one's self with enthusiasm to some worthy thing or cause.

Bidding Prayer

A prayer which bids or directs what is to be prayed for is frequently known as a bidding prayer. This form of exhortation, always concluding with the Lord's Prayer, was employed by the fifty-fifth canon of the Anglican church in 1562, to be used before all sermons and homilies. It was, and in its authorized form still is, very impressive, allowing individuals to supply from their own knowledge special cases of necessity under the different heads.
