OREGON'S BIG YEAR Seventy-one special trains already have been booked to come into Oregon over the Southern Pacific lines this summer. Forty-one special touring parties are coming over the same lines. James A. Orman, general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific company, has announced. He remarks: "When it is remembered that the number of tourists who move in special train and special tour parties is usually small compared with those who travel on regular trains, it can be seen that tourists travel to the Northwest this summer will be much larger than ever before." This is to be Oregon's big year for visitors. All those who are coming over the Southern Pacific lines will pass through Eugene. How can we best slip to them the message of what we have here? DUNCAN GETS FOOD AND COAT AT FARM (Continued from page 1.)

retake. This afternoon officers telephoned in from Dole that they had located the place where Duncan spent last night. He found a shelter near the Fisher ranch and apparently remained there until dawn this morning, when he went to the ranch and procured the overcoat and food. As he has had only a few hours to travel, he is still in the county they believe, and is probably between Dole and Myrtle Creek, the entire vicinity being closely guarded.

Came as a Variation A man took home a booklet on Esperanto and during a meal a guest remarked that the party with extracts pronounced according to the instructions supplied. At last there came a strange sounding word, evidently pronounced with great difficulty. "Is that really Esperanto?" asked the host, innocently. "No," was the reply; "that's fish bone."

Judge for Yourself "How old is she?" "I can't say, but on her last birthday, when she got caught on a cake with the candles, several of the visitors got nearly faint with the heat."

George Jacon was here yesterday afternoon for a short time attending to business matters and visiting friends. He resides at Looking Glass.

Pearls in Abundance in Scottish Streams

It is not commonly known that the Scotch River Tay and its tributaries provide a rich harvest of pearls which are sold up to as high as $50 each. Anyone can go pearl-fishing in the Tay, and all have equal chances. The professional pearl-fisher has a special boat in which he floats downwards with the stream, and armed with his simple lens—a piece of glass substituted for the original bottom of a tin can—which when immersed, enables him to see clearly through the surface agitations to the pebbly bottom, and a long stick with a V-shaped notch at the end, grabs all the shells he sees as he lazily drifts past, and at the end of a day his spoil is by no means small. But the amateur despatch with all encumbrances except the notched stick. With it he simply wades into the shallows and gathers all the shells he sees within reach. The shells are of various sizes from an inch up to six inches in length, and only one in perhaps ten contain a pearl of value, although many may carry freak pearls, black or deformed ones, which may be quite saleable. A ready market for the pearls obtained is at the nearest Jeweler's shop, but the professional pearl-fisher prefers to deal privately and directly with the tourists who frequent this district, and who probably thus become possessors of a pearl at a fraction of its real commercial value.

Queen Victoria's Rule Over Royal Household

Princess Catherine Radziwill in a book, "Those I Remember," tells many stories of royalty. Queen Victoria, says the princess, "was a martinet politically as well as socially. The prince of Wales (King Edward), especially stood in awe of his parent, and when almost an old man himself he hardly ever opened his mouth in her presence. Her eldest daughter, the late Empress Frederick of Germany, was used to say that whenever she was summoned to the queen's presence she first asked for a glass of water so as to conquer her emotion."

Queen Victoria, adds the princess, never appeared at state concerts or balls, but sometimes she would condescend to show herself at a garden party given by the prince and princess of Wales at Marlborough house.

She used to arrive late and was driven round the grounds in a little pony carriage, beside which her children dutifully walked, talking with her the whole of the time, for Queen Victoria was not above a bit of gossip, and liked from time to time to be told the news of the day, especially if it dealt with the marriage of somebody she knew, or the love affairs of some one she had met.

People Today Longer Lived The English races are healthier and longer-lived than famous ancient peoples, such as the Egyptians and Romans, says the New York World. And American descendants of European parents are, on the average, bigger and taller than their fathers and mothers, according to Dr. F. C. Shroveton.

Statue and weight today, he said, are not less than in the days of Agincourt or Waterloo. Modern civilized man is decidedly not deteriorating. Our expectation of life is far greater than ever before. The fossilized bones of the earliest human beings indicate that our most ancient ancestors seldom lived beyond the early adult stage. Many cases in Egypt show that an Egyptian child of five years might expect to live to be only thirty-five. A five-year-old child of Rome under the Caesars could expect a life of only twenty-nine years. But a child of five living in present-day London or New York can expect to live to be at least sixty-four years old.

Symbolic Ice Skates A curious sight it was, an old pair of rusty skates hanging outside a shop on a tropical island in the West Indies. I wondered, says Mr. A. Hyatt Verrill in his book "In the Wake of the Buccaneers," whom the proprietor expected to sell them to, so I entered and inquired. Imagine my astonishment when the shopkeeper solemnly informed me that they had been there for years, and that no one knew exactly what they were used for.

"But," he added, "I am aware that they are significant of the holiday season, and so I hang them outside regularly each year as an indication to passers-by that my Christmas stock of merchandise is in aisle."

Ancient Use of Copper Copper and copper-alloy objects are found in the prehistoric remains of Egypt, dating back to the fourth dynasty, 3500 to 4700 B. C. It was found in Asia Minor dating probably to 3000 B. C., and in China to about 2500 B. C. The remains of the Mycenaean, Phoenician, Babylonian and Assyrian civilizations (1100 to 500 B. C.) have yielded a variety of copper and bronze objects.

Say Kidnaping Mystery Is Solved

MR & MRS PETER MCKENZIE & RICHARD LILLIAN MCKENZIE

In August, 1923, Mrs. Peter McKenzie, shown here with her husband and son, Richard, lost her three-month-old baby, Lillian, in a baby carriage before a New York department store while she shopped. The baby was stolen, and a nation-wide search failed to find any trace of it. Now the baby is reported to have been found in the possession of Mrs. F. V. Grofe, of Hackensack, N. J., who had adopted a baby said to have been furnished her by an unlicensed doctor. The police are investigating the unusual story.
