AUTO SUPPLY HOUSE TO OPEN ABOUT MAY 1

J. A. Shaulis, of Los Angeles, field representative of the Western Auto Supply company, is spending a week in Roseburg arranging for the opening of the company's store in this city. The branch house is to be opened for business about the first of the month, according to present expectations, and the new manager is expected to arrive soon. Mr. Shaulis is supervising the installation of the fixtures, and the arrangement of the sales room, and has ordered the merchandise for the store forwarded to this city at once. Although the opening date cannot yet be definitely fixed, he states, it will be in about two weeks. The supply house will be located in the building recently constructed by Perry Foster and Stotland Exchange adjoining the telephone exchange.

LIGHTER CARS ON CROWDED STREETS

The fact that the smaller and lighter cars are displacing the formerly used big cars in many ways, becomes more and more apparent with a review of downtown and congested districts, where, according to Leo Rapp, manager Rapp firm, local Star car dealers, are found the cars doing most of the daily service work for owners.

"Motorists have the light car to thank for whatever lessening of traffic congestion has come about, and for the fact that traffic is not more congested," says Mr. Rapp. "The fact that light cars are replacing bigger cars in many uses is told in several ways. One of the outstanding ways where it can be seen is in the sale of the lighter cars to 'two-car-families' and in families where even more cars are used.

"In downtown service, Star coupes, sedans and roadsters are found in increasing numbers, and many sales have been reported to big business executives who have found that the new models have everything in appearance, power, acceleration, that heavy traffic requires, and yet are lighter, have shorter wheelbase, and are consequently far easier to handle than bigger cars. It is far easier to park a smaller car.

"Then, too, the question is attacked from the standpoint of economy of operation, as well as the point taken by many suburbanites, that the car cuts their traveling time between home and office, and eliminates entirely the necessity of waiting for trains.

STATE PRESS COMMENT

REAL OREGON DEVELOPMENT

It is estimated the legislature adjourned leaving $50,000 a year in salaries added to the burdens of the taxpayers, and the state overloaded with boards, commissions and machines.

The state has enormous timber wealth with a big eastern and overseas market. But the state is overstocked with a political machinery and weak in production from the soil. It needs more general farms.

How can the state as a whole fill up with desirable labor and farm production when there is a continuous agitation harmful to business with talk about the state being bonded to death, and taxes going higher and higher.

There are great possibilities for development of Oregon with less radicalism in politics, a first-class business administration—a constructive state administration with a definite business program and leadership in the legislature. The slogan should be: "Make it easier for all kinds of good people to come to Oregon and to stay here after they get here."—Ashland Tidings.

NO CUT IN TAXES

Governor Pierce now admits, after many denials, that he really promised to cut taxes in two during his campaign and declares that he would have accomplished it, as far as state taxes are concerned, had the people not repealed the income tax. The people are to blame, as usual.

With something over $46,660,000 property tax in Oregon this year and only $4,216,000 or 10 percent an state tax, even a 50 percent cut in the latter would not equal the increase in other taxes, and as the income tax is paid by the same persons who pay property tax, there would be no real relief under the Pierce program, if carried out.

The small decrease secured in the state levy does not indicate a reduction in taxation, merely in property taxation, as it is more that made up by special taxation. There has been no reduction in public expenditures, the only way to secure a real cut in taxes, and none attempted.

Until there is an honest effort made in reducing expenditures through consolidation and elimination of overlapping of bureaus and superfluous commissions and departments and centralizing their control under the budget system, taxes will increase rather than decrease—and the governor has offered no constructive program for the former—Salem Journal.

FOR CONSTITUTIONAL TAX REDUCTION

It is lamentable that Governor Pierce can think of nothing but legislation for reducing taxes.

The practice in California and a few other states, cited by him, of separating sources of state and local revenues was not invented as a major economy. It is only a simplification of tax collecting methods and in that respect permits minor economies, provided it does not give a false impression of tax prosperity and thereby encourage extravagance.

If Oregon adopted the practice, which would pay all the state taxes, would pay no toward support of government owners would pay no less. The corporations instead of having their tax contributions divided among state, counties, cities, and lesser districts would pay their taxes all to the state for general state purposes. Counties, cities and lesser districts being deprived of present corporation taxes would have to increase taxes on other property.

The policy may appeal to the governor as in line with the old French taxation art of so plucking the goose that the greatest quantity of feathers with the least possible amount of squawling will be produced, but let him not think that it will ever be accepted in Oregon as a promise kept of tax reduction.—Portland Oregonian.
