TOURNAMENT AT MARSHFIELD TO BE POSTPONED

The tournament between the Marshfield and Roseburg golf clubs has been postponed from April 25 to May 3. It was announced this morning by E. A. Lockwood, who has been in charge of arrangements. The heavy rains have made the Marshfield course so wet that good playing is difficult, and it is desired to postpone the match until the grounds are in better condition.

BULGARIA FACES SERIOUS REVOLT; SOVIET IS BLAMED

LONDON, April 22.—Information reaching London regarding the troubles in Bulgaria is of such a character as to preclude a satisfactory estimate of the situation. The censorship established under the state of martial law apparently is preventing independent observers there from recording developments and there are no means of checking up on the rumors emanating from such doubtful centers as Vienna and Belgrade, which are sending out reports of massacres, wholesale executions and fleeing, with enormous numbers of casualties.

UMPUQA POST WINS INDOOR BALL GAME FROM OAKLAND

The members of Umpqua Post of the American Legion held a rousing meeting last night. The attendance was excellent and the meeting was greatly enjoyed. Dr. E. B. Stewart told of the coming endowment fund campaign and the steps which are being taken to stimulate action in this drive. Douglas Clark's quota has been placed at $3,000.

Major Baker, of the Oregon National Guard, was present and discussed the subject of state armories. The Roseburg armory, he states, is running behind financially and as the state has no funds available for improvement work nothing can be done this year towards repairs or improvements to the building, other than patching the roof. The state desires that the public use the armories. Major Baker says, and it is the purpose of this year to make them community centers as far as possible. Many other states close the armories to the public and allow them to be used for military purposes only, but the policy in Oregon is different in that respect, the public being invited to use the buildings for all meetings of a public nature.

Ben Irving, of the forest service, showed a number of slides and gave an interesting talk on forest protection.

Following the meeting the Roseburg and Oakland indoor baseball teams met in a heated contest which Roseburg won by a score of 10 to 6.

RANCH IS SOLD

The 29-acre fruit tract belonging to W. R. Bates, and located at Winston, has been sold to A. J. Young of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Bates expect to leave about the middle of May for Los Angeles, where they will visit for a short time with a daughter, later going to Seattle for a visit. About the middle of the summer they will go to Minnesota, where they have property interests, and where they will remain for a short time attending to business. They will return to the coast in the fall, but have not determined where they will locate permanently.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today
By Idah McGlone Gibson

SYNOPSIS
Cleo Madison is entertaining a few friends. They are extremely modern in their attitude toward extremely modern in eta her era the conventionalities. So much so that Cleo thinks it would be fun to read them quotations from her grandmother's diary. They are all thrilled at the idea. Grandmother's diary is so quaint, so modest that these modern day girls are thunderstruck. The girls go. Then, alone, Cleo thinks of her elopement with Paul Winthrop which is planned for the immediate future. She reads another passage of the modest, old-fashioned diary. It strikes her conscience. For, though engaged to Paul she, only the night before, enjoyed the kisses of Chick Adams. Then Cleo wonders whether her grandmother had missed anything. Cleo's parents had been rich. Now they were social climbers. So were Paul's. He has just been graduated from West Point and assigned to San Antonio. Both sets of parents opposed the match for identical reasons. Each wanted their child to marry money. So Cleo and Paul planned to elope in haste. Connie Terhune, wealthy, wanted to marry Paul. Cleo's mother is furious when she learns of Cleo's determination to marry Paul. She demands Cleo marry wealthy Chick Adams. Cleo and Paul attend a party at Connie Terhune's. The affair is lively. Chick Adams draws Cleo aside protesting that she should have come with him.

Cleo doubts her love for Paul. Her grandmother's diary makes Cleo wonder.

A HARD TEACHER
I had learned this lesson of inferiority to the male all too well and it made me angry at myself that just on the eve of my marriage I had made the great mistake of telling Paul just what I thought.

When I am married I shall never play a game of any kind, not even bridge, with my husband. I had hardly gotten well into my fit of weeping, however, when Paul showed up again. He had had time to think the matter over and had come back to forgive me. But finding me weeping, he ate humble pie not only to the queen's taste but mine. He promised that he would never find fault with me again.

It rather astonishes me sometimes how a man will perjure himself to a woman when he wants to obtain anything from her. Paul lied beautifully. He knew he was lying and he knew that I knew he was lying, but at that it was an artistic bit.

Connie appeared while he was here. I believe she saw him come. She seemed altogether too much surprised at finding him.

All the time she was in the house she talked of the high cost of living, of which, of course, she knows nothing. I could see that Paul was getting more discouraged with the whole idea of marriage, so I knew it was up to me to tell Con a few things.

"Connie dear, you are a fine one to talk about the high cost of living. You, who never have known the joy of planning and working for anything in your life. Everything you have wanted has fallen into your lap without the slightest effort on your part.

"Now, if you had been poor, as I was, you would have had some idea of what it means to economize."

Paul perked up at this. "You do know about it, don't you Cleo?" he said with conviction.

"Yes, she knows," answered Connie victoriously before I could speak. "She knows what it is to wear four evening dresses instead of eight a season. She knows what it means to have to refuse to play bridge for money. She knows probably that a rise in the price of gasoline would make it impossible for her to keep her car going all the time."

"However, evening dresses, bridge debts and nasty sport model runabouts have no place in the lives of the economical."

Then Paul made his worst "bonehead" play, and he is capable of some.

"If you don't think, Connie, that two people could marry on a lieutenant's salary? You know we have quarters and other perquisites."

"How much is a lieutenant's salary?" asked Con as innocently as a cat on whose whiskers still remain some of the contents of the cream.

"One hundred and fifty dollars a month," answered Paul promptly. "Turning to me, Connie asked, 'What did that gown you had on last night cost you? I paid $500 for mine.'"

Paul's eyes nearly dropped out of his head. "Oh," he said in a miserable voice, "I didn't know that the simple little things cost so much."

"They don't except on such girls as Con Paul. Besides, we have been wearing so few clothes we can save on the rest of them."

"Well, if you begin to discuss the dearth of clothes on the modern young woman, why I'm off," said Connie, deciding she had made all the trouble possible.

After she had left Paul was almost as weepy as I was before he came. I began even to wonder if I really loved each other enough to make any sacrifice for it. The same thought seemed to have permeated dear old Paul's brain, for he said, as he put his arms about me, "Do you think it will last?"

"What?" I asked shortly, although I was aware of what he was talking.

"Our love," he answered solemnly.

"If you have any doubts in the matter we had better call it off now," I said with some asperity. "I don't know whether it will last and, honestly, I don't much care. We love each other now, don't we, and because of some cowardly doubt that it might not last, why should we dispense with the joy of a honeymoon for me to cool then you could fall in love with someone else and have it all over again."

"Darling," interrupted that benighted and befuddled male, "you know I'm simply crazy about you. I can't work, I can't think, can't do anything when I'm away from you except to scheme how I can be with you again."

BIDS ON THREE COUNTY JOBS TO BE OPENED TODAY

The county court left this morning for Portland to meet with the state highway commission, and attend the opening of bids on several jobs in which the county is interested. The highway commission has advertised for the moving of the old highway bridges at Winchester and Oakland, and bids will be opened for these jobs by the commission.

Two spans of the Winchester bridge will be moved to Elkton, to span the Umpqua river there. The other span will be moved to Round Prairie to be placed across the South Umpqua connecting with the Pacific Highway. The Oakland bridge will be moved to that place also to complete that structure.

The Winchester bridge will be moved at once, as the highway commission has announced that in paying the approaches to the new bridge, they will have in strips, so that traffic will not be interrupted.

The Oakland bridge, however, cannot be moved until the new bridge and overhead is completed which will probably be well towards the middle of the summer.

The commission will also open bids today for the construction of a three-mile section of the Roosevelt highway in the vicinity of Gardiner.

SENIOR PLAY "DULCY" IS ENJOYED AT MYRTLE CREEK

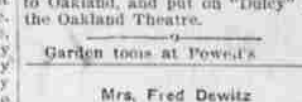

The Senior play "Dulcy" was given at Myrtle Creek on Monday, April 20, where they put on the play for the Myrtle Creek people. The cast gave an excellent showing of ability and good coaching. They had a very appreciative audience who laughed at the right time and applauded between acts.

The play was also enjoyed by the audience. Hal Seely gave an appreciation speech and thanked them for supporting the school so well. After the play, only the most favorable comments were heard and the cast are confident that their efforts were fully rewarded by the cordial greeting given them by the Myrtle Creek population.

On Friday night the cast will go to Oakland, and put on "Dulcy" in the Oakland Theatre.

If you're a Young Woman or Even in Middle Life Here is Some Good Advice For You

Salem, Ore.—"While bringing up my family I depended upon Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to keep up my strength. It was especially beneficial to me during the trying months of expectancy, relieving me of nausea and quieting my nerves, and I do believe that I would not have come thru the critical time of life so easily and comfortably as I did had it not been for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I have given the 'Prescription' to my daughters also when they had need of a special tonic and nerve and they have always been benefited and strengthened by its use. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is truly a woman's medicine. I take pleasure in recommending it."—Mrs. Fred Dewitz, 625 N. Capital St.
