CONTEMPT FOR THE TRUTH

It is disturbing to some of us, to see how many writers of popular novels, plays, etc., will seem to take quite lightly the tendency of people to get out of difficult situations by lying. They represent that such falsehoods are told, not merely by characters for whom readers and audiences feel contempt, but by their heroes and heroines who are supposed to be fine people. There is nothing new about that idea. It cannot, like so many other things, be attributed to the deterioration that seems to have followed the war. This spirit was manifested by many popular writers long before the war. Some are pessimistic enough to say that the business world is full of cheats, and that a large part of the goods offered to the public represent some element of deception. It used to be said that when people traded horses, there were few who would represent an animal just as he was, and the general motto was said to be to cheat the other fellow before he cheats you. The man who starts out to trade automobiles now will often run up against similar experiences. And yet one can't help thinking that the business world is showing an increased regard for honest dealing. Business associations everywhere are urging their members to maintain truth in advertising and in all statements to the public. Honor is the most precious possession of human personality, and when a person feels he can lie to get out of a tight place, or gain any advantage he is after, he does not seem to value this possession highly. Lying is the coward's way of getting out of difficulties, and one will find that the clean way of truth telling is the most satisfactory and rewarding in the long run.

LITTLE PROGRESS IS MADE MOVING SLIDE NEAR MYRTLE CREEK

There has been some complaint made regarding the slide near Myrtle Creek which has been blocking the road since last December. During the cold wet weather a large portion of the bluff slid down on the pavement, completely blocking the road for several days. A temporary road was built around the slide, and traffic has been possible at all times, but the detour is dangerous and many people feel that more progress should be made toward removal of the dirt. A small crew has been maintained at the slide but is only able to keep up with the dirt still coming down.

WILL HOLD "FIRE SALE" THIS WEEK

The North Side Grocery stock that was saved from the fire of a few nights ago was removed to the Sykes building on North Jackson street today by Mr. Bennett, and as soon as work of arranging the goods can be accomplished a "fire sale" will be inaugurated to dispose of the groceries that were undamaged. The fire started in the upper story of the building, and before it did any great damage to the grocery stock the department had it under control. Of course the water played havoc with some parts of the stock, but all canned goods were undamaged. Mr. Bennett will place the goods on sale and realize something from them. As soon as the new concrete building that Al Creason is erecting on the site of the old structure at the triangle north of the Deer Creek bridge is completed, Mr. Bennett will reopen his store with a complete new stock of groceries. It is expected that work on the new structure will begin at once, and within 40 to 60 days Mr. Bennett expects to be installed in the new place with a bigger and better stock than ever.

DUMBELL DORA THINKS Pigeon holes are where the pigeons roost.

An American guest at Deauville tells a story about a quick-witted patriot. Poor Smith doesn't cut a distinguished figure in his evening clothes. Well, in a fashionable restaurant the other night, as Smith stood near the door waiting for his wife, a tall, pompous Englishman comes up with: "I say, my man, you the head waiter?" "No," replied Smith quick as a flash, "but I heard him tell a young fellow this afternoon that he wasn't taking on any more help."

"Her father is familiar with many tongues." "Ah, a linguist?" "No, a physician."

We'd like to know who this man Anno Domini is. He built a lot of college dormitories.

ROSEBURG BOY WINS HONORS AT HILL MILITARY ACADEMY.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 1.—While a number of the older cadets of Hill Military academy were studying for senior honors and were ready to receive their commissions, Ross Bates of Roseburg, one of the lads of the junior school, made such good records, that he won advancement, also that on the occasion of a large gathering held at the academy on May 2, was awarded the office of junior corporal, thus placing himself on the road to advancement for military honors. Cadet Bates is the son of B. W. Bates of Roseburg. The award was made by Major Luther Felker, U. S. A. The Hill Military Academy will go into camp at Rocky Butte, their future school site, on May 8 and will remain for a week. On May 15th the officers and cadets will receive guests in the permanent mess hall that has been built for the camp. A parade for the crippled children at the Shrine hospital is another feature planned. During the week the military studies will be supplemented by lectures on nature study, history and other academic work.

ARMY AND NAVY CONTROVERSY ON

HONOLULU, May 4.—The army-navy controversy known as the critique which is to decide who won the sham battle against the island of national defense policies in the Pacific went into its third session today with co-operating umpires, aided by the senior black and blue referees presenting their observations. This included all phases of the maneuvers, the most extensive ever held by the United States.

It was understood, unofficially, here that Brigadier General Le Roy Ettinger, senior black umpire, representing the defending land force, and Captain William Standley, a United States navy censor blue umpire, who observed the attacking naval forces, presented their views to the critique today.

The observations of the senior umpires understood to have included collective constructive occurrences concerning arms of the services which were utilized in the sham battle, included potential activities of other branches of the service, such as chemical warfare which were brought into play.

Unofficial rumors indicated that a stirring argument was going on between commanders of the attacking blue destroyer forces and commanders of the black submarine defending forces. The submarine commanders contend they annihilated fringes of the blue fleet, composed of destroyers and cruisers, thus laying the main fleet open to destructive fire from the shore batteries. There was no official confirmation of this report, however, as the proceedings continued to be secret.

The Business Women's Club will be host to the public at a May Day dance at the Armory Wednesday, May 6. You'll be sorry if you miss it.

PRINCE OF WALES ENTHUSES HEARERS

CAPTOWN, Union of South Africa, May 4.—The Prince of Wales with the chorus of enthusiasts aroused by his unification speech at Saturday night's dinner, still resounding through the city, left today on an automobile tour through the old Hottentot country. His departure was cheered by thousands of people who had left their work to line streets and wish him good luck.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, entertaining a few friends, decides to read her grandmother's diary. Grandma's diary is so quaint, so modest, that these modern-day girls are thunderstruck. When the girls go, Cleo thinks of her elopement with Paul Winthrop planned for the immediate future. Her conscience is pricked by a passage of the modest, old-fashioned diary. For, though engaged to Paul she, only the night before, enjoyed the kisses of Chick Adams. Both sets of parents approved the match because at one time the families had been rich, but now were social climbers, and the parents wanted each to marry money.

Connie Terhune, wealthy, wanted to marry Paul. At a party Chick Adams draws Cleo aside protesting that she should have come with him. Cleo doubts her love for Paul makes Cleo wonder. Paul proffers Paul. Her grandmother's diatribe, Connie shows again her jealousy. The fathers of the new-lyweds rejoice. The honeymoon begins. The fierce flame of her love almost whelms Cleo. The honeymoon grows more effulgent.

WHAT THE GANG DID. On an even road into that silvery radiance. I did not speak. I was afraid again to spoil another wonderful moment.

At last Paul himself broke the silence. "If mother thinks she is going to spoil the first honeymoon I have ever had, she has got another thing coming," he said. "We'll show some of those old croakers what a real marriage is, Cleo. You and I are not going to let anything interfere with our happiness, are we?"

"We are going to try not to do so," I said to myself. Vocally I said "Nothing shall interfere." "And we won't take life too seriously," Cleo dear, will we?"

"Not if we can help it, and I think we can, for you and I all our lives have been the best of playfellows. All the gang has said that of us."

"Then you follow my lead, dear. You seem to have grown rather serious during the last eight days."

"I can't help it, Paul. Something keeps saying to me over and over—'Your days of irresponsibility are almost gone'—and I want them to stay, dear; I want them to stay."

"Of course they'll stay, but now we must be getting back. We have to get up early in the morning."

I bought a new gown for the reception the next day and I was quite happy over it until I saw how gloriously beautiful Connie was as she came sauntering up to me on that evening in a shimmering sort of red and gold and brown dress that was the most gorgeous thing I ever saw. It seemed a part of her gloriously brilliant complexion and her gold-brown eyes. It made my own little blue and silver frock of which I had been so proud, look colorless. I know that by the way Connie admired it, while she was presenting herself in the full-length mirror at the other side of the room.

"You can look for storms and had weather about that time," she continued turning to my husband. "Well it isn't the first of the month yet, Connie," he answered, "so let's have a little sunshine while we can," and they danced away together.

I really wasn't aware that I was watching them until Chick Adams came up behind me and said, "Don't look neglected even if you feel you are."

Tomorrow—Eyes of Green.
