All Art Combination of Hands, Brain, and Heart

In one of Ruskin's essays he talks about art, and points out the difference between manufacture, craft and art. How would you define them? What does "manufacture" mean? You know from your music lessons as well as from your Latin lessons, that "manus" means hand, and "facto" means do, or make.

Craft, he tells us, is anything that is done with the hands and the brain; or more, mental control is required and skill results. Thus each worker depends upon his brain and invents his own methods of producing results, and executes his own ideas.
