A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison entertaining a few friends, decides to read her grandmother's diary. Grandmother's diary is so quaint, so modest, that these modern-day girls are thunderstruck. When the girls go, Cleo thinks of her elopment with Paul Winthrop planned for the immediate future. Her conscience is pricked by a passage of the modest, old-fashioned diary. For though engaged to Paul, she, only the night before enjoyed the kisses of Chick Adams. Both sets of parents opposed the match because at one time the families had been rich but now were social climbers, and the parents wanted each to marry money. Connie Terhune, wealthy, wanted to marry Paul. At a party, Chick Adams draws Cleo aside protesting that she should have come with him. Cleo doubts her love for Paul. Her grandmother's diary makes Cleo wonder. Paul protests his love for the girl. They are wed. Cleo's mother becomes hysteric. Connie shows again her jealousy. The fathers of the newlyweds rejoice. The honeymoon begins. The fierce flame of her love almost overwhelms Cleo. The honeymoon grows more effulgent. The reception for the newlyweds shows Connie in her true light. Cleo becomes jealous. Chick Adams enters a plot. The young wife foils her "friend." The first tears of her married life come to Cleo. Paul and his wife decide to start out for themselves.

LIKE A FISH WIFE.

It was our last night at home. Connie had invited a few of the gang for a dance and supper before she knew we were leaving so soon.

Mother had tried to make Paul and I stay at her house but after the dinner where we had eaten up all the chops and kidneys, I knew she would find fault with us about something all the evening, and I decided that of two evils, I would choose the lesser, although I didn't care much about Connie's company.

I didn't see anything in Grandmother's diary about her mother's interfering all the time, although I had looked for it carefully. Instead I read:

"My dear mother looked as if she were dressing me for my burial instead of my wedding. She was weeping so copiously that when she pinned on my veil, her tears wet the lace on the front of my gown and I was afraid that the spots would show. I therefore gently pushed her aside and finished arranging my costume.

"I do not quite understand just why my dear mother felt so badly about my marrying Thomas — many times she has called him a 'Christian Gentleman', many times she has spoken of him as 'a very personable young man.' I therefore had great curiosity to know why at this late day she was unhappy because I was going to wed him.

"When I asked her the question she only whispered, 'My poor darling innocent child,' and then her sobs choked her voice as she hastily left the room."

When the girls read that the other day in grandmother's diary they fairly screamed with laughter.

"How old was your 'sainted' grandmother, when she married?" asked Doris Blake.

"I think she was 18," I answered, 'although nowhere in the diary does she specifically refer to her age. My mother you know was her eighth child and grandmother died before she was 30, when my mother was born.

"Poor dear," Doris said. "Perhaps she was 'innocent' at 18. For if she had not been 'innocent,' which in my mind means only ignorant, I am sure she would not have had so many children and might have lived a little longer.

"Look here girls," Doris continued, "isn't this pathetic?" and she read from grandmother's diary—

"I am very unhappy tonight. I think God is going to send me another child. I have not dared yet to voice my suspicions to Thomas as we have not paid Dr. Lawrence for his calls upon me, when my latest dear little baby came into the world.

"The last time I asked him to pay the bill, Thomas said that it was much more important to have lightning rods put on the barn and the doctor would have to wait until we could recompense him some time in the future.

"Thomas also acquainted me with the fact that he thought I would not be in such a hurry to have another baby if I realized how hard it was for him to get the money to pay for them.

"I had to leave the room, to keep him from seeing my tears. Thomas does not like me to weep. I am sure if he had thought about it, he would have fully comprehended that I would not want another baby as long as I lived.

"I do not think, however, that he was cognizant of what he was saying, for he was righteously indignant with me at the time because he had just found out that I had used some of the butter and egg money to buy the latest little baby a perambulator. It was so hard while I was doing my work to carry the baby around on my arm.

"I sometimes wonder if I am a wicked woman to wish that I might lay me down and die when the next baby comes."

Poor thing, that is just what she did do. Well, take it from me, I hereby swear that there will be no eight children in my family. I wouldn't even be surprised if there would be no granddaughter to read this diary as I am reading my grandmother's, for if I can read the cards aright there will not be even a daughter or son, at least not for a long while, and as for eight, ye gods and little fishes, never.

I wonder what Paul would think if he could read what I have written here. He is in the bedroom supposedly asleep and I have signified my intention of sleeping on the great broad sofa in this room.

Paul and I have quarreled, quarreled abominably, and I think I've talked to him like a fish-wife, at least that is the way he described me.

It began at Connie's party (I can't understand how I ever liked that girl. She has certainly proved herself anything but a friend since Paul and I were married.)

"RESOLVED that the Common Council of the City of Roseburg deems it necessary and hereby proposes to improve Short Street from the north line of Sykes Street to the south line of Spring Street, in the City of Roseburg, Oregon, in the following manner:

First: By grading said street to the proper sub-grade.

Second: By paving the roadway of said street twenty-four feet in width with reinforced concrete pavement.

Third: By constructing sub-drains, if necessary.

Fourth: By constructing street monuments.

Fifth: By laying vitrified sewer pipe, if necessary.

Sixth: By constructing catch basins, if necessary.

Seventh: By constructing concrete curbs.

Said improvements are to be made in accordance with the Charter and Ordinances of the City of Roseburg, Oregon, and the grade, plans, specifications and estimates of the City Engineer, filed in the office of the City Recorder on the 4th day of May, 1925, which said grade, plans, specifications and estimates are hereby approved and adopted.

The entire cost of said improvement, including engineering, interest and all other expenses which the City of Roseburg would not have incurred except for the making of said improvement, shall be assessed upon the property especially benefited thereby, as provided by the Charter of the City of Roseburg, Oregon, and in accordance with the petition of the property owners to be benefited thereby, and no part thereof shall be paid by the City of Roseburg.

The estimate of the City Engineer of the probable detailed cost of said improvement is the sum of $2,698.97.

RESOLVED, that the City Recorder of the City of Roseburg, Oregon, be and he is hereby directed to give notice of said improvement as provided by the Charter of said City."

Remonstrances against said proposed improvement must be filed in writing with the undersigned within twenty days from the first publication of this notice which is the 7th day of May, 1925.

SPRING WORK ON TRAILS IN UMPQUA FOREST STARTS

The Spring maintenance on trails and telephone lines in the Umpqua National Forest is now starting. Due to the severe weather conditions of the past winter this class of work is heavier than usual. Ranger Irving and a small crew will be started into the Diamond Lake district today to open up trails and telephones for a larger crew of twelve men, who will go in over the 18th and a third crew of eight men will go in over the 27th.

The Forest Service will spend about $1,500 in the month of June for the betterment on the old and present roads. The old Tiller road and the North Umpqua road are being extended about six hundred feet. This will eliminate two fords and greatly improve summer travel. The rest of the money will be spent on improving the tread on the present location.
