I KNOW A MAN

Chester C. Sherlock, writing in Better Homes and Gardens says:

"He is a hard worker, for he has a job that he loves. Needless to say, his family is happy, contented, healthy. When he comes home at night, Ted and Julia, the two youngsters, are watching down at the corner. With shouts of welcome they 'hop' the running-board as he slows down the old bus, and ride up the block and into the driveway, their laughter and banter heard above the roar of exhaust and the squeal of brakes. When he climbs out they attack by flank and front, until overwhelmed he capitulates and laughingly disgorges the gum or candy always found in his pockets.

"In a few minutes he comes out of the door again, his grateful homage having been paid to her who has stood at his side through defeat, anguish and death—in shadow and storm—as willingly as now. His collar is loosened, his sturdy black briar aglow, a strange contentment on his care-lined face. He wanders about in his flower beds and around his lawn, drinking in the beauty which he has helped to create with his busy hands and ready heart.

"In the corner, by the garage, where a shrub thicket holds dominion, a robin is singing his evening roundelay, making the whole neighborhood a shrine. Our friend pauses and listens, a smile hovering on his lips as he watches. Then he moves to the other corner of the yard where a Jenny Wren in her tiny bungalow provided by his hand is the soul of domestic activity. Again he pauses and he is satisfied.

"Up the yard he turns, caressing this dahlia admiring that hollyhock, drinking in the sweet perfume of that tube rose or nodding in greeting to the laughing cosmos and coreopsis. Perhaps he kneels as at prayer, in the edge of the lawn—but only to root out a vagrant dandelion which has escaped his ever vigilant eye in the past.

"Mornings, as the first faint fringes of pink and rose pierce the eastern sky, he comes out in the cool, vibrant air, and for an hour works havoc on his garden foes. But at night, like a benediction from a day well spent, he merely enjoys and looks and learns and listens to the mighty symphony of Creation.

"Then childish voices summon him to the simple repast which frugal taste and healthy appetites most desire. Through the open window, we hear the hush and murmur of thanks going up to the Almighty, as tiny heads bow with those of middle age.

"I know a man who has achieved all the happiness this world holds, because he has learned to work, to love and to laugh. I know him because he is my neighbor—and I think one of him lives on your block too!"

The fact that Germany has elected a monarchist and friend of the old kaiser, as president, will cause anxiety in the rest of the world. Yet it does not necessarily prove that the Germans want war again. The business men of that country felt that in voting for Hindenburg, they were opposing those dreamy theories. The Germans are at present worrying as to how they can borrow money in America. If they find it difficult to obtain loans for their relatively small peace time enterprises, it would be 100 times as difficult to secure them to promote a military campaign. The German politicians will have quite a job the next time they appear in the American financial markets, to pass the hat for a loan. It will no doubt be said to them, that a country that will place a representative of the discredited old regime at the head of its government, is not entitled to a credit rating.

Next week Roseburg will go over the top with one of the best Strawberry carnivals staged here for a long time. The program prepared for this year's event is exceptionally good and the entire three days will be full of merriment.

By the time the average fellow learns something about his automobile it is time to buy a new one.

THE VELVET HAMMER

BILL HARDING
To say that one is filled with prunes respectfully implies that when he ratiocinates his judgment isn't wise, but Harding's long and large career was stuffed with purple fruit, feeling a sufficiency both chronic and acute, he sold his trees and bugs and bees and shrubbery and vines to those who numbered raising prunes among their best designs. He stored a stack of well-earned jack where moth cannot corrupt, nor burglars come with manners ill-considered and abrupt. Still young and prime, he has the time to keep the golf green clipped; that ball he'll fight from noon to night unless he gets it whipped. He recently discovered this important boon of man, and while his score is some and more, he's moving tow'rd the van. And since you mention leadership of consequence and skill, remember the Kiwanians say "President" to Bill. He fills his vital office with initiative and pep and leads the march of progress with a brisk and breezy step. The Roseburg Band needs dough on hand to make the trombones thrill. It's Harding's fate to pass the plate with eloquence and skill.

DUMPELL DORA THINKS
She's goin' to have a tough race for queen with all the local sheiks votin' agin her.

CAMPAIGN DOPE Today's queen count stands as follows:
Dumbell Dora 12
As predicted in yesterday's issue,
Dora combed another six votes
from the kind-hearted section men.
The Swedes have not yet come through as a carload o' Copenhagen arrived at Carnes durin' the week and took their surplus jack.

The accompanying sketch shows Dumbell Dora's campaign manager in a heated argument with a local hash-slinger who made a wise crack at a nearby table to the effect that Dumbell Dora had a complexion like bakery punkin pie. Follierin' a lengthy discussion of our little damsel's school-girl complexion, the head-waiter changed his remark to read "like lemon pie."

One thing we dread about the approach of summer is the number of moist fat men who will wear soft collars.

We heard today that Bill Heinline's dog has been poisoned. Dogpoisoners oughta be fed on a diet of arsenic and Paris green until their toes start to kick and then their carcass oughta be tossed to the hawks—but be sure and have the hawks vaccinated agin vermin.

SAFETY FIRST

Who, in mixing some confounded stuff,
Touched a match to a vial,
And after a while,
They only found his front teeth

BILL BRYAN TO AID IN BATTLE ONEVOLUTION

Tennessee Science Teacher Will Go on Trial For Expounding Theory.

INTEREST IS SHOWN

Bryan Asserts Atheists and Scientists Attempting to Run Schools of the Nation.

MEMPHIS, May 13.—When J. T. Scopes, science teacher, is called into court in the little town of Dayton, Tenn., to face a charge of violating the Tennessee law against teaching evolution in the public schools, the case will have passed beyond the borders of state interest and an array of nationally known individuals and organizations will be found lined behind the prosecution and defense.

The latest prominent individual to enter the lists is William Jennings Bryan, foe of the theory of evolution. He announced in Pittsburg yesterday that he had accepted an invitation to represent the World's Christian Fundamental Association in the prosecution of Scopes.

Simultaneously persons interested in the investigation of Scopes, who consented to arrest on May 5, in order to start a test case of the evolution law, announced plans for the collection of a fund to defray expenses of carrying the litigation to the school.

George W. Rappleyea, a chemical engineer and advocate of the theory of evolution who was responsible for the issuance of the warrant, under which Scopes was arrested, announced at Dayton that before the proceedings he had obtained a guarantee from the American Civil Liberties Union

Get Rid of That Backache!

Roseburg People Point the Way.

The constant aching of a bad back. The weariness, the tired feeling; Headache, dizziness, nervousness, distressing urinary disorders—Are often signs of failing kidneys. And too serious to be neglected. Get rid of these troubles! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Hosts of people recommend Doan's.

This is a Roseburg case. You can verify it. F. Hite, 315 Short St., says: "My kidneys troubled me for a long time and I was almost down with my back. I could hardly get out of bed mornings and when I stooped, dizzy spells came over me. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. Doan's Pills rid me of the aches and pains and made my back well and strong."

that it would co-operate financially to carry the case to the highest courts.

Following his arrest, Scopes, teacher in the Rhea county high school, was held for action by the grand jury which meets in August.

Mr. Bryan's acceptance of a role in the prosecution, contingent upon such representation being agreeable to the legal department of Tennessee, came as the result of a request by the Christian Fundamental Association, meeting here. The organization also asked the compeer to tour the colleges and universities of the country and present the arguments of fundamentalists before student bodies and reply to advocates of the theory of evolution.

"I have been asked to help in the fight to preserve the integrity of that law (Tennessee evolution law) and I am going to it," Mr. Bryan said in an address to the Pittsburg Presbytery after the invitation had been received.

"We cannot afford to have a system of education that destroys the religious faith of our children," Mr. Bryan asserted that "carefully prepared figures indicate that among freshmen who enter college 15 per cent are without religious faith. By the time they have reached their senior year the college atmosphere of unbelief has so influenced their lives that there are 45 per cent who are without religious faith."

The attack being made right now upon those who stand squarely for the Christian faith of their fathers, is not an attack on orthodoxy. It is an attack on religion.

"There are about 5,000 acolytes and probably half of them are atheists, in the United States. Are we going to allow them to run our schools? We are not."
