

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today
By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, entertaining a few friends, decides to read her grandmother's diary. Grandmother's diary is so quaint, so modest, that these modern-day girls are thunderstruck. When the girls go, Cleo thinks of her, 'dloppment with Paul. Paul Winthrop planned for the immediate future. Her conscience is pricked by a passage of the modest, old-fashioned diary. For though engaged to Paul, she, only the night before enjoyed the kisses of Chick Adams. Both sets of parents opposed the match because at one time the families had been rich but now were social climbers, and the parents wanted each to marry money. Connie Terhune, wealthy, wanted to marry Paul. At a party, Chick Adams draws Cleo aside protesting that she should have come with him. Cleo doubts her love for Paul. Her grandmother's diary makes her wonder. Paul protests his love for the girl. They are wed. Cleo's mother becomes hysterical. Connie shows again her jealousy. The fathers of the newly-weds rejoice. The honeymoon begins. The fierce flame of her love almost overwhelms Cleo. Her grandmother grows more effluent. The reception for the newly-weds shows Connie in her true light. Cleo becomes jealous. Chick Adams enters a plot. The young wife tells her "friend" the first tears of her married life come to Cleo. Paul and his wife decide to start out for themselves. Cleo sees Paul and Connie in fervent embrace. Almost crazed by liquor and jealousy Paul threatens Chick. The young husband accuses his wife as to a past.

THE AVERAGE MAN. As I sat here writing I wondered what other girls did under the circumstances. Surely this case of mine was not unique. Perhaps the thing had happened to me earlier than to many others but the consequence must have been the same. Something had gone out of my life. Here I was with my hopes of a future tumbling about me while I was buried so deeply beneath its stifling debris of disillusion I could see no way of working out.

Why didn't my mother tell me that marriage was like this? All she had done was to rail against Paul's lack of money when if she could have made me understand Paul's lack of consideration of me after marriage I never would have married him. My eyes were smarting; my throat was choking; my mind was in chaos. I threw myself on the sofa determined to get a little sleep when my mother stuck her head in the door. With a groan I said "Please mother, please go back to your room and let me see if I can get a little sleep."

"That's a nice thing to say to me after coming home here and waking up everyone in the house with your disgraceful quarrel with Paul. I expect he has gone to bed drunk."

"No, he wasn't drunk—being a man he knew he could sleep and he also knew that we have a long journey before us tomorrow."

"What were you quarrelling about?" "I'm not sure that it is not my private affair."

"You haven't made it a private affair. Neither your father nor I have been able to sleep a wink since you came in and I am certain the servants have heard. I heard Paul accuse you of 'necking that Adams' I suppose that is more vulgarly expressing the same thing that you call 'petting.'"

"I distinctly remember a conversation we had just before you ran away to get married in which you confessed to liking Charles Adams' kisses although you informed me 'that after you were married to Paul such happenings would cease. I am sure your husband would not accuse you if you were not guilty and he had certain proof. Oh, to think that a daughter of mine could descend so low!'"

"Oh, put on another record, mother. I've just about as much as I can stand from Paul tonight and I can't stand any more from you."

"Well, I told you not to marry him in the first place. You couldn't possibly leave without getting in that I told you so line. Why did you tell me not to marry Paul? Was it because you thought that the moment the wedding ceremony was over he would forget all about me whenever he came near Connie Terhune or any other pretty girl? Was it because you knew that he would be suspicious and mean about my actions because he knew that he was not above suspicion and meanness himself?"

"No, you said nothing at all to me about these things. You simply told me not to marry him because he was poor, and I knew that if he loved me and told me so and gave me the attention that he was giving me, the lack of our lives would mean nothing in our lives."

"Mother, mother, why did you not tell me what to expect? Paul is the average young man, I am sure. You must have had some awakened even with dear old dad for I know how he can swear and what contemptuously ugly things he can say, when the bills come in the first of the month."

"Why, even in grandmother's diary, that 'Christian gentleman, Thomas,' talked to my grandmother as though she had committed the unpardonable sin because she had allowed some other swain to lift her hand to his lips as he bade her goodnight."

"Don't compare the men of today with your father and your grandfather, Cleo."

"Why not? Do you think they were any better or any worse? I don't. It is only that I wish I knew what I had to face. I would have gone at it very differently. I would not have allowed myself to dream and anticipate Paul's love. I would not have allowed my pride to be hurt as I was when I saw him kissing Connie."

"How do you think he felt when he found Chick kissing you?" mother interrupted. "I didn't kiss him, but let me tell you and my husband something right now, and I raised my voice in fury, 'I'm going to kiss Chick tomorrow when I hop off to Texas and it isn't going to be any of your sweet polite conventional kisses either. I'm going to make Chick Adams think he is in heaven at least once and I hope at the same time it will make my husband think he's in the other place. I might just as well have the game as the name. Both my husband and my mother who should believe in me most."

"Cleo, Cleo, I believe in you." I turned to see Paul standing in the doorway in a suit of wrinkled pajamas, his hair every which way, and his arms outstretched. It was so exactly like the last act of a cheap melodrama that I laughed as mother slammed the door.

LEGISLATOR OF OREGON FREED IN BONUS LAW CASE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) PORTLAND, Ore., May 16—Phillip L. Hammond, Oregon City attorney, was acquitted by a jury in federal court late yesterday of a charge of violating the bonus act. He was alleged to have collected $100 each from Joseph Mooney and Mary J. Mooney, parents of John L. Mooney, who died at Camp Fremont, Cal., for obtaining compensation from the government. The fee limit in such cases is set by the government at $25.

Witnesses testified that Hammond had rendered other legal services for the Mooneys. Hammond declared the charge had been brought against him for political purposes in an attempt to defeat him in his race for the state legislature to which he was elected.

Hammond formerly was attorney in Clackamas county for the bonus commission but was removed from office on charges of neglect of duty.

SEVEN WASCO MEN FACE CHARGES OF HOMESTEAD FRAUD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) MAUPIN, Ore., May 16—United States Deputy Marshal Morelock has served warrants of arrest on the following residents of Wapinitia Plains: O. L. Poquet, James P. Abbott, Jr., Chester Peckett, Mary Peckett, Edward Gabel, John Panchetti and John Delco, now at Prineville. All the defendants are held under $1,000 bond each to answer charges of violation of federal statute for alleged "subordination of perjury and wrongful collusion" in obtaining homesteaded lands in Wasco county.

Young Abbot is the son of one of Wasco County's wealthiest sheep men.

WEST MEDFORD IS WINNER FOR A NEW HIGH SCHOOL SITE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) MEDFORD, Ore., May 16—By a record breaking vote, the largest ever cast in a city election, the people of Medford yesterday selected the Holly Street, over the Pacific and Eastern site, for the election of the new $185,000 high school. It was a victory of West Medford over East Medford, after a week's whirlwind campaign of exceptional excitement and personal bitterness. The final vote was 1,503 for the Holly Street and 1,172 for the Pacific and Eastern, a majority for the former of 431 votes.

AMERICAN BOATS SAVE BURNING ITALIAN SHIP

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) NORFOLK, Va., May 16—Two sailors were injured, one seriously in an explosion today aboard the Italian ship Adria anchored off Sewell's point. The explosion, believed to have been caused by an accumulation of gas in the bunkers, was followed by fire which was extinguished with the assistance of a coast guard cutter and a Norfolk fire boat.

MAN APPARENTLY GUILTY GIVEN PARDON BY PIERCE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) SALEM, Ore., May 16—Declaring his belief that Floyd Gauthier, serving ten years in the state penitentiary for a statutory offense involving a woman in Union county, is not guilty, Governor Pierce yesterday issued a conditional pardon. Restoration of citizenship will depend on his future conduct. The governor said that the testimony of physicians indicated that it would have been impossible for Gauthier to be the father of the woman's child and that another man, Chester Butler, has admitted the guilt.

Zion Canyon, Utah, one of the most picturesque spots in America. The result is that the thrilling incidents in the picture-fights chase, stage coach hold-ups, all have a beautiful natural background of massive canyons, glaciers and cliffs, at the Antlers Theatre tonight.

MAJESTIC THEATRE. Helen Holmes, America's foremost stunt girl, who hesitates at nothing no matter how hazardous it may be, performed her one and one-half day high dive from a cliff during the filming of "Blood and Steel", which will be shown tonight at the Majestic Theatre.

No horse is too wild for Helen Holmes to ride, no water is too treacherous for her to swim. The story of "Blood and Steel" called for a spectacular high dive from an overhanging cliff. Into the creek below, J. P. McGowan, director of the film offered to get someone to do the trick for Miss Holmes. She would not hear of it, and by the time the camera had been set she was at the top-most peak waiting for the signal to go.

ANTLERS THEATRE. Good news for local film fans! "The Hundering Herd," Paramount's celluloid version of the famous Zane Gray novel, is headed this way and will make its local debut at the Antlers next Sunday. It is a romantic story of the "Old West" that will carry one from the pavements of today to the trails of yesterday, from the limousines of this period to the covered wagons of 1876. All 196 thrills and adventurous action of fifty years ago live again in this glorious epic story which was filmed under the direction of William K. Howard.

KHAYM, MYSTERY MAN, IS COMING

The following article taken verbatim from the Kansas City Post of Jan. 25, fully describes mysterious Indian principle attraction as to be presented at the Strawberry Carnival.

Such features as this are the type of entertainment to be offered:

"To convince a skeptical minded person is an art that has been attained by few.

Whenever mention is made of an accomplishment in mental development whereby one person can gain the thought of another, skepticism is given a free reign.

Yet it has been proven that telepathy is an accomplished fact and there are several people, who after years of study devoted to mentally have developed a routine of demonstrative experiments in the art of psychology or telepathy, that they can hold an audience in the thrills of wonderland for hours at a time.

Such a person is Khaym, known as the peer of all mental masters, who is offering at the Liberty Theatre this week one of the most baffling demonstrations of mind reading ever seen here.

Khaym makes no claims as to being gifted with super-natural, super-normal powers, but lays his success to the door of study.

In some unaccountable manner this pleasing personality can call you by name, reach your innermost thought and give a very practical answer to your problems.

That this is not the result of concealed wire, code system, or confederates, is surely seen by all when Khaym gives a detailed explanation of his work.

He claims to be a Harvard medical graduate who became interested in mind, through several brain operations seen at a school clinic, and this claim is well substantiated is seen by the unusual flow of English and polished manner of the man.

Whether one believes or not, it is worth the time and money spent to see such a well presented and deeply thought out production."

HIGH SCHOOL LAD WHO STAGED FAKE AGAIN RUNS AWAY

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) SALEM, Ore., May 16.—Salem police are trying to locate James G. Heltzel, Jr., and Elton Quinlan, two Salem high school boys about 16 years old, who have run away from their homes, leaving a note saying that they would return in the fall.

Disatisfaction with their school work was given as their reason for leaving home. Heltzel is the son of a Salem attorney and Quinlan is the son of J. J. Quinlan, engineer at the state prison. Young Quinlan created a sensation here several months ago when he ran away with "Peewee" Sherman, an escaped convict, after leaving his bicycle and some clothing on the river bank to indicate that he had drowned. The river was dragged for days until evidence of the fake was discovered. Later the boy and the convict were arrested in Iowa.

PIERCE REFUSES TO SAVE LIVES 2 COOS MURDERERS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) SALEM, Ore., May 16.—Hope has been abandoned for executive clemency for Arthur Coveil and L. W. Pearce, who are sentenced to be hanged next Friday, the former for the murder of his sister-in-law Mrs. Ebbot Coveil of Bandon, and the latter for the murder of his wife. Both are from Coos county. Coveil is a helpless paralytic and Pearce is an old man nearly 70. Governor Pierce has instructed Warden Dalrymple to prepare for the hangings and it is not believed the pleas now reaching the governor for clemency will be heeded.
