HEALED THROUGH PRAYER

I am so glad to tell the readers of the Roseburg News-Review of my marvelous healings. Two years the fourth of August, the blessed Lord restored my eyesight after wearing glasses for 25 years. I couldn't see to comb my hair without my glasses. Dr. George B. Pratt of Portland was my last oculist.

I burned my glasses three days after I was healed with this scripture verse coming to me: "I will keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on me because He trusteth in me." I have been healed also of neuritis, catarrah, hernea, bunions, broken arches, also of an infirmity of 12 years. Should anyone be interested in this testimony will be glad to pray with you.

The fifth chapter of James tells us "the prayer of faith shall save the sick and the Lord shall raise him up."—Mrs. E. E. Woodcock, 1136 West First street, Roseburg, Oregon.

CHILDLESS HOMES

Read Mrs. Benedict's Letter Praising Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Kewanee, Illinois.—"When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run-down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my 'teens and until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 313 Payson St., Kewanee, Ill.

BUSINESS LOOKS GOOD IN SPITE OF SETBACK TO CROPS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28. — Figures for the twelfth federal reserve district for April, 1925, show that business activity remained steady despite the usual seasonal decline and such unusual features as the abandonment of more than 50 per cent of the winter wheat acreage and widespread damage to berries and deciduous crops throughout the district due to unfavorable weather. Decline in total volumne of trade as compared with the previous month was less than that which usually occurs at this season of the year. The total volume of credit extended by customer banks of the federal reserve system increased during the month as did the total deposits of these banks.

Building activity is approaching record levels. Twenty of the principal cities showed a total of $41,593,882 or 20 per cent greater than in April, 1924. However, estimated total construction costs were about one per cent less during March and April than during January and February. The employment survey of the reserve district bank during April shows a slight decrease in volume of employment in Oregon as compared with March, due to declines in the number of workers in the lumber industry. Approximately 53.4 per cent of the winter wheat acreage was abandoned, there being but 1,780,000 acres remaining to be harvested out of total of 3,763,000 acres sown. This abandonment was largest in Oregon and Washington, where the crop in many areas was destroyed by cold weather which preceded the winter snows. A large percentage of the abandoned acreage has been reseeded to spring wheat, however, and weather and soil conditions have aided the growth of this crop.

BETTER GRAZING RULES REQUESTED BY OREGON ASSN.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., May 28. — Bend was chosen for the next convention of the Cattle and Horse Raisers' Association of Oregon, and all officers were reelected at the closing session of the association's twelfth annual convention here late yesterday.

The officers are: F. A. Phillips, president; W. A. Steward, first vice-president; Walter M. Pierce, second vice-president; William Duby, treasurer; Charles J. Shelton, secretary; Gerry Snow, inspector. William Pollman is president emeritus.

The attitude of the association on grazing and use of public lands was defined in resolutions adopted. Committees fixing grazing claims and appeals to courts from rulings of forest officials were asked. Leases of unreserved government lands for periods sufficiently long to fix improvements and a system of payment to the states of money's collected from grazing and timber sales were suggested. Segregation of permanent grazing areas to protect prospective homesteaders from losses in attempting to improve lands unsuited for agriculture was the subject of another resolution. Limiting of grazing charges to amounts sufficient to cover costs of grazing affairs and holding in abeyance of the removal of illegal fencing until the senate committee had reported to congress was requested.

PIANO RECITAL GIVEN LAST NIGHT

Mrs. Charles G. Stanton, local instructor in piano music, last night presented over 40 of her pupils in a recital at the Christian church. The auditorium was filled to capacity by the parents and friends of the young music pupils who played, and the program was very interesting. The auditorium, in view of the near approach of Memorial day, was decorated with flags, presenting an attractive appearance. All of the young musicians played very well, pupils from all departments being presented. The program was one of instrumental music only, solos, duets, and trios offering a diversity, which kept the large audience well entertained. Following the recital Mrs. Stanton entertained all of her pupils in the church parlors, where light refreshments were served.

Fined for Speeding—

F. C. Birch, arrested in Douglas county for speeding, was fined $15 when arraigned in justice court yesterday before Judge Rust. Birch, a Marshfield oculist, chose to have the case tried here instead of in Roseburg. Complaint was laid by Traffic Officer C. C. Williams, who patrolled roads in Douglas county last week during the Roseburg strawberry festival. — Coos Bay Times.

Assisting Mrs. Stanton with the flowers were other members of her class, who did not appear on the program, Misses Mona Porter, Dallas and Delpha Colby, and Esther Wright.

TO DEMONSTRATE ELECTRIC BRAKE AT LOS ANGELES

R. A. Busenbark, of the Automatic Electric Brake company, and Louis Kay, machinist, left this morning in an especially equipped car for Los Angeles, where they will demonstrate the electric brake as to its various phases of usefulness. This trip is being made in response to calls from the California people for a demonstration of the working of the brake under working conditions. To do this, the company here fitted up a car with the appliance and after testing it out to the entire satisfaction of the officials, the car left for the south today. Couplings for attaching the brake to one or more trailers were taken along, and it is expected that Mr. Busenbark will show the Los Angeles people that the brake will work under any and all conditions, the operator in the car or truck being able to control the appliance or release of trailer brakes by the switch.

Very recently the brake was improved to meet suggestions made by a prominent engineer from one of the big automobile concerns, and this new model was attached to the motor that is now enroute. The improvement was merely a rearrangement of the gearing so as to speed up the brake. Tests made here yesterday demonstrated that the brake now works instantaneously, and the local company believe that they will meet with great success in putting over the tests and demonstration at Los Angeles.

The Utility Truck and Trailer Manufacturing company, of Los Angeles, has become interested in the brake, and has given assurances that if the demonstration is satisfactory they shall want manufacturing rights for the entire state of California.

On the way home Messrs. Busenbark and Kay will stop at San Francisco, where they will demonstrate the brake on some of the steep hills of that city.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison entertaining a few friends, decides to read her grandmother's diary. Grandmother's diary is so quaint, so modest, that these modern-day girls are thunderstruck. When the girls go, Cleo thinks of her elopment with Paul.

Paul Winthrop planned for the immediate future. Her conscience is pricked by a passage of the modest, old-fashioned diary. For though engaged to Paul, she, only the night before enjoyed the kisses of Chick Adams. Both sets of parents opposed the match because at one time the families had been rich but now were social climbers, and the parents wanted each to marry money. Connie Terhune, wealthy, wanted to marry Paul. At a party, Chick Adams draws Cleo aside protesting that she should have come with him. Cleo doubts her love for Paul. Her grandmother's diary makes Cleo wonder. Paul protests his love for the girl. They are wed. Cleo's mother becomes hysteric. Connie shows again her jealousy. The fathers of the newly-weds rejoice. The honeymoon begins. The fierce flame of her love almost overwhelms Cleo. The honeymoon grows more efulgent. The reception for the newly-weds shows Connie in her true light. Cleo becomes jealous. Chick Adams enters a plot. The young wife foils her "friend." The first tears of her married life come to Cleo. Paul and his wife decide to start out for themselves.

Cleo sees Paul and Connie in fervent embrace.

Almost crazed by liquor and jealousy Paul threatens Chick.

The young husband accuses his wife as to a past.

Contritely, Paul expresses his belief in Cleo.

The quarrel is settled.

Paul has forgotten to get the railroad tickets, but the matter is settled peaceably.

Paul gives Connie the cold shoulder at the station, which pleases Cleo.

The newlyweds start on their honeymoon.

After a snappy discussion with Paul, Cleo goes to sleep in the Pullman chair, when Paul goes to the smoking compartment.

Cleo has a mystic dream.

She fathoms this in terms of present day life.

CLEO'S FIRST LESSON.

"I'm absolutely starving. I hope that Johnson has laid in some stores and that we can at least have a cup of coffee and some toast."

When we arrived at our quarters we found that they had been left in beautiful shape by their late tenant, Capt. Atherton, who had not packed up many of his things when he found that we were coming in immediately. Paul had met Capt. Atherton somewhere and that was the reason why he had left his stuff for our use.

I looked about fearfully as we entered expecting to find the dragon I had seen in my dreams. The men came in with the baggage at this moment and Johnson asked. "Is there anything more you want me to do, sir?"

"Nothing, I think," answered Paul, "except to put the trunks in Mrs. Armstrong's room."

"Ask him if he knows where to get some fruit, bread, bacon, coffee and eggs and if he does, have him bring them in to us," I whispered to Paul.

The man evidently overheard me for he said: "If Mrs. Armstrong wishes I will fix you up a little breakfast, sir. I used to always get Capt. Atherton's meals when he did not take them at the mess."

"That would be splendid, Johnson. We are famished. We did not have time to get any on board train, you know."

I turned as the man left the room and Paul took me in his arms. "Cleo, we are going to be very, very happy here. But now I'll have to get out as soon as possible and report at headquarters just as soon as Johnson serves the breakfast. You can unpack the trunks when I am gone, for I presume I will not be here to luncheon."

There was an entirely different note now in Paul's voice. He had returned to the business of life. He was all-soldier. He was no longer my lover.

"But where will I get my luncheon, Paul?"

"Anywhere you please. You heard Johnson say that there was plenty of stores in the house and you can see by this food (which he had served in the meantime) that he has done rather well."

"But Paul I never got my own luncheon in my life," I called as he started to leave me rather unceremoniously after we had eaten.

"Well, it's probable you will have to begin sometime, and you can't learn any younger. You already know enough to butter your own bread do you not?"

"It seems not," I answered meaningly.

Paul looked hurt, but he went out the door without saying anything. "Here, here, soldier-man," I called, but he did not turn back. I looked about me blankly. Where were the gay people I had expected to meet us? Where was my husband? Here I was left alone and I would be left alone until evening. Even the man, Johnson, had gone. I was expected to wash up and put away the dishes and get my own luncheon.

I sat down disconcolately in a chair by the window, and thought that if I were home I would be probably be scooting about the country in my little sport car. Marriage was not beginning very hunky-dory for me. I heard voices and peeked out of the window. There were soldiers and officers going about, but not one of them looked at my house. They all seemed very busy with their own affairs.

Presently two or three prettily dressed young women stopped to chat right in front of my window, but they did not evince an interest in me. They were laughing and as one of them separated from the rest I heard her say, "What are you going to wear tonight?" and the other answered "The same old evening dress. I haven't had a new one for so long that if I did own one I wouldn't know how to walk."

It was then they remembered me. I saw them glance up at the house for the first time. "I expect we will all look dowdy tonight," said one. "You know we are going to have the bride with us and brides always have a lot of pretty clothes. I did, but I haven't had anything new since. I wonder if she is good looking. I wonder whether we will like her or whether we will be jealous of her."

"Jack says he caught a glimpse of her as she left the train and he didn't think she was anything to write home about."

"Well, we'll see her tonight at the party."

The woman whose husband had said I wasn't so great as a looker walked away from the other two and one of those remaining remarked to the other with a laugh. "I'll bet she's some looker just the same. Jack, being Alice's husband, has begun to alibi already. You know how jealous Alice is."
