WILSON SENTENCED TO THREE YEARS BUT IS GRANTED A PAROLE
James Wilson, indicted yesterday on a charge of forgery entered a plea of guilty before Judge Hamilton today, and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. He was granted a parole, however, being paroled to Huron Clough, and will be required to pay back out of his wages the amount which he obtained by issuing forged checks. This sum as near as can be determined will amount to approximately $200. Wilson, according to the officers, comes from a good family, and is a young man whom it is believed will make good if given a chance. He is believed to have been influenced by other persons in his acts and it is thought has learned a lesson which will keep him from future violations of the law. It was thought best to parole him and give him an opportunity to right the wrong he has done rather than insist upon confinement.

RAY GLASS BREAKS 100 STRAIGHT AT TOURNEY
(Associated Press Special Wire.)
EUGENE, Ore., May 29.—Ray Glass of Eugene led the entrants in the class shoot in the morning round of the state championship trap shoot which opened on the local traps this morning, by breaking 100 straight. STATE PRESS COMMENT
The wearing of silk stockings produces chronic indurative erythema of the ankle leading to diffuse thickening and scleroderma-like hardening of the skin, according to a British medical authority. In other words, diaphanous hosiery results in thick ankles, but surely soft stockings produce an effect that looks like the words of the English physician.—Portland Journal.
Crime News
Perhaps the reason why some critics complain that crime is too much emphasized in the newspapers is that they emphasize crime in their reading. In answer to such a published criticism recently the New York World promptly analyzed the front pages of the four leading New York newspapers and found that the stories of crime actually occupied a small space in the day's news.
The Toronto Globe points out that crime is news, like anything else, and that it would be of absorbing human interest even if there were no daily newspapers at all. People would gather in their homes or on the street to discuss any given crime, undoubtedly exaggerating the details and misstating the facts as a good newspaper would not do. Crime has always held a large place in literature.
It is likely that if an honest critic set about seriously to check up on the daily news, as printed, he would find to his own surprise that his paper is full of wholesome, cheerful matters, and that when spectacular news is lacking, interest is found in well-written stories about quiet and seemingly uneventful lives.
Any reader might check up for a week on his own favorite newspaper by way of relief from the cross-word puzzle. He would undoubtedly be surprised and pleased and he would learn something about a more intelligent use and enjoyment of his paper.—Albany Democrat-Herald.
