ROSEBURG BOY WINS PROMOTION IN NAVY

George Lansaw, who recently joined the navy, writes that he is now a petty officer in the company to which he has been assigned. Having formerly been enlisted in the national guard company here, his military training was immediately recognized by promotion. He is greatly pleased with the training which he is now receiving. He writes that he frequently sees Louis Miles, another Roseburg boy who recently enlisted in the navy. Virgil Lansaw, a brother of George, who has been in the service for several months, has been in the Hawaiian maneuvers, and his boat is now on the way to Puget Sound, where it will be docked for repairs.

OREGON SENATORS FACING SPLIT ON ALLEGED FRAME-UP

Beals Eyes Fish Commission Job as Rival to Eddy's Choice While Garland Leans to Pierce.

SALEM, Ore., May 28.—The Salem Journal, under date of yesterday, publishes the following story:

A secret compact entered into during the last session of the legislature whereby the support of Senators Eddy and Beals were to be thrown to the governor in the fight against the move to wrest political power from the governor in return for permission to Senators Eddy, Beals and Garland to select a fish commissioner. It has just come to light. The fish commissioner is to be named soon to succeed F. P. Kendall of Portland and as a result a meeting of Senators Garland, Eddy and Beals is slated for Salem next Monday when the three are to determine who Kendall's successor shall be.

The deal was framed rather adroitly, apparently from the governor's angle, as the compact was that the three senators should determine who the commissioner should be, providing they could all agree on a man.

According to the underground, Beals wanted to be named fish commissioner himself to please his constituents up in Tillamook county. Eddy has a man of his own he wants to name in order to place the fishing interests that he has alienated in fights on the senate floor, and as a result Eddy and Beals are about as near a compromise on a selection as Salem is to have a 100 per cent pruned crop this year.

The conflicting ambitions of these two leaves Senator Garland smiling in the background, according to the story, with the trump card held up his sleeve and waiting to slip it onto the table after the immovable body is cracked by the irresistible force, in the shape of Eddy and Beals.

According to the grapevine information this secret compact was set down in writing, that the governor acknowledged the memorandum at the time and since has told some of his political henchmen that if they wish to have anything to say in regard to the appointment of a fish commissioner they must see Eddy, Beals or Garland.

The three senators, in the meantime, are putting implicit faith in the memorandum and the compact and are slated to be here Monday to carry out their end of it.

The interesting part of it, as seen what the governor will do if a name is suggested that he cannot masticate and digest.

KLAN TRIO ASKS RELEASE

(Associated Press Local Wire.) NORFOLK, Va., May 28.—A motion asking the release of D. C. Stephenson, Earl Klinek and Earl Gentry, who are under indictment on the charge of murdering Miss Madge Oberholzer of Indianapolis, was filed in circuit court today by Eph Inman, counsel for the trio.

ODD FELLOWS WIN LOP-SIDED GAME FROM CHRISTIANS

In a farce comedy baseball game at the Laurelwood field last night, the Odd Fellows defeated the Christian team by a score of 16 to 1. Four of the regular players on the Christian team were absent, and a pick-up squad was formed, which put up a fine exhibition of errors and ball-booting. The spectators were shown two good innings, when both teams played airtight ball, a couple of double plays being projected as thrillers. The remainder of the game, however, was more of a comedy than anything else, errors being too numerous to record.

will be delivered by Prof. R. C. Holber of the U. of O. Mrs. Moorman's orchestra of Drain will play and Mr. Frank Grubbe of Wilbur will be the soloist.

The graduates are Miss Reta Grubbe and Miss Ruth McNeil. The baccalaureate sermon was delivered last Sunday by Prof. E. M. Patterson of the Eugene Bible university, assisted by Rev. Earl Harsel, the resident pastor. Special music was rendered by the M. E. church choir. Mrs. Hobart Brown impressively sang a solo. The church was beautifully decorated with bouquets of sweet briar rose and marguerites.

For Kidney Troubles Druggist Would Only Recommend Alivita

"Before allowing myself to become enthused over ALIVITA tablets, I tried them out on myself. I can say truthfully that I am surprised at the results of the tablets. I have had a lot of trouble with my bladder and kidneys and have tried many remedies from the store. The only thing I would recommend today for prostate and bladder trouble is the ALIVITA tablet. I got complete relief from my own trouble, which satisfies me of their merit."

(Signed) E. A. ROSENBERGER. Alivita Tablets are scientifically prepared from the wonderful alfalfa plant, which through its long root absorbs the vital elements—lime, iron and phosphates—necessary to health and vigor.

BENSON P. T. A. TO HEAR FINE SPEAKER TONIGHT

Arthur Brooks Baker, the practical psychologist and human nature student whose "Velvet Hammer" sketches have made many Roseburg citizens start looking for prostate and bladder trouble, will speak tonight at the Parent-Teachers Association meeting at the Benson School House.

Following the line of his short and catchy talk Tuesday at the Klans Luncheon, on "How Men Succeed Who Really Do," Mr. Baker will speak tonight on "Thirty Five and Successful," for those who are either, neither or both, and for their wives.

"I shall have some things to say," said Mr. Baker this morning, "on the influence of wives, school teachers and college on the career of men. I shall point out what experience has convinced me is the main reason why such large numbers of men who are apparently successful at thirty-five are not making good at forty-five. I shall tell my audience something about the influence of college education among the kind of successful men who are not listed in 'Who's Who,' a book largely devoted to writers, clergymen and teachers."

"I shall touch briefly and not too drastically on the struggle between science and theology now in evidence in the Tennessee trial and in my short talk I shall have time to localize very briefly on the state of Connecticut, where large numbers of home boys, educated in Yale, step out into competition with high school and factory-trained men in industry and business."

"I trust that the man who feels his wife might understand him better will bring her along, and that the wife and mother who wants to do better work with her men and boys will be there, and it is to his particular I shall be speaking."

LEGION AUXILIARY NOTICE

All members are requested to be present Saturday morning, May 30, at 9 a. m. at the Armory to march in the Memorial day parade.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison entertaining a few friends, decides to read her grandmother's diary. Grandmother's diary is so quaint, so modest, that these modern-day girls are thunderstruck. When the girls go Cleo thinks of her elopement with Paul.

Paul Winthrop planned for the immediate future her conscience is pricked by a passage of the modest, old-fashioned diary. For though engaged to Paul, she only the night before enjoyed the kisses of Chick Adams. Both sets of parents opposed the match because at one time the families had been rich but now were social climbers, and the parents wanted each to marry money. Connie Terhune, wealthy, wanted to marry Paul. At a party, Chick Adams draws Cleo aside protesting that she should have come with him.

Cleo doubts her love for Paul. Her grandmother's diary makes Cleo wonder. Paul protests his love for the girl. They are wed. Cleo's mother becomes hysterical. Connie shows again her jealousy. The fathers of the newly-weds rejoice. The honeymoon begins. The first item of her diary makes Cleo almost overhwhelmed. The honeymoon grows more elutgant. The reception for the newly-weds shows Connie in her true light. Cleo becomes jealous. Chick Adams enters a plot. The young wife follows her "friend" to the city. Her grandmother's diary comes to Cleo. Paul and his wife decide to start out for themselves. Cleo sees Paul and Connie in fervent embrace.

Almost crazed by liquor and jealousy Paul threatens Chick. The young husband accuses his wife as a past. Contriely, Paul expresses his belief in Cleo. The quarrel is settled. Paul has forgotten to get the railroad tickets, but the matter is settled peaceably. Paul gives Connie the cold shoulder at the station, which pleases Cleo.

The newlyweds start on their honeymoon. After a snappy discussion with Paul, Cleo goes to sleep in the Pullman chair, when Paul goes to the smoking compartment. Cleo has a mystic dream. She fathoms this in terms of present day life. The young wife learns marriage is not all a rose path.

THE FIRST CALLER The two women looked up at my window and I drew a little fear back behind the curtain. "Poor old Jack. I feel sorry for him," said one of them, a particularly good-natured looking woman. I knew I was going to like her.

"Yes," answered the other, whose prissy mouth gave me the impression that she loved gossip more than anything else in the world. "Jack's been having a hard time lately trying to flirt with the new captain's wife a little without letting Alice suspect."

"What do you think of Mrs. Heller anyway?" asked the good-natured one. "I think she is plain vain," the prissy one answered, "and if she is going to vamp anybody she ought to turn her attentions to Col. Blakely. He is not married and I think the two would be well matched."

"But my dear, you know the Colonel is simply burgled over Rita Thurdike. I do hope this new girl will attract some of his attention, for if this case goes on with Rita much longer there will be an open scandal." With this the two women passed out of earshot.

So this is the way I'll be talked over, I thought. I had always heard that an army post was the greatest gossip shop on earth, but I never thought it could be quite like this. I began to be afraid to meet the officers and their wives. I went over and looked in the mirror and was reassured. Beautiful when I thought of what Paul had said that morning. He had told me that I would be the best looking girl at the post.

"I'll give them something to talk about," I said aloud and then, with renewed interest in life, I began to unpack the trunk. In a very few minutes my pretty dresses were strewn all over the room while I was trying to decide which one I would wear. One was put aside for fear it would make me look too much dressed and another brought up memories of the last dance I had with Chick.

I thought again of Paul's nasty remark about my not knowing enough to butter my own bread. He ought to have realized that if I had married Chick my bread would not only have butter all ready on it, but sugar. I would not have had to think about the money. I would just have had to look pretty and be happy. The doorbell rang. I opened it to find a comfortable middle-aged woman standing there. "My dear, I am the wife of Capt. Melbourne. I came over to see whether I could do anything for you."

I went forward and took her outstretched hand in mine and burst into tears. "Why, you poor little stray child. What is the matter?" "Nothing," I replied as well as I could. "I guess I'm just a little homesick. You see, Paul, my husband, had to leave me alone just as soon all morning and I don't know how to do anything or where anything goes, and I have just been sitting here wishing I were home. I'm not used to doing things about the house and it all looked rather appalling to me."

"Come on, and I'll help you unpack," she said as she saw the clothing strewn about, all over everything. "Oh, no, Mrs. Melbourne, I couldn't ask you to do that." I answered quickly. "I'll get thru with it all very soon. You see, I've lived in Pasadena, California, all my life with the exception of a time when I was away at school, and oh, I guess I miss the gang. I'm so homesick."

"Well, my dear, you will soon find the gang here. I know you are going to be very popular, especially among the young officers. The Colonel is giving a dinner party for you this evening."

"Isn't there a Mrs. Coloney?" "No, my dear child. The Colonel is a great flirt. He says he loves us all too much to settle down with one woman. I can see great deal of attention. You are too pretty for him to pass up."

"Oh, what a beautiful gown!" she exclaimed as she caught sight of the gown I had worn that last night at Connie's. "Why don't you wear it tonight?" "I had thought of it, but I was afraid it would be too elaborate."

"Of course it is very lovely, my dear," Mrs. Melbourne said. "But you're a bride and have the right to look just as charming as you possibly can. You had better let your friends see you in your new dress. There are sure to be many officers and their wives calling on you this afternoon."

My heart began to flutter and I foolishly exclaimed: "Oh, I hope they will not come too soon." Next — Col. Beldon Calls.

R. H. S. ANNUAL IS BEING DELIVERED STUDENTS TODAY

The 1925 copies of The Umpqua, the Roseburg high school annual, were delivered to the students today. The annual, as usual, was printed in the exclusive job department of the News-Review company, and is not only a school magazine of unusual merit, but a work of typographical art. The Umpqua this year is striking in its appearance. From cover to cover it is profusely illustrated with fine half-tones, pictures of the faculty members, individual photos of the upper and lower classes being presented, together with pictures of the athletes, teams, clubs, and organizations of the school. Several pages of snapshots of students and school events are also contained in the annual.

The publication is divided into several sections, each dealing with some separate department of the school work or activity. Throughout the entire book there are colored inserts which do much to add to the appearance. The staff struck upon a unique idea in connection with these inserts, and upon each is printed some beautiful scene Douglas County.

The Umpqua has been well patronized by Roseburg business and professional men and women, in an advertising way, the students being given fine support in their effort to make the annual one of the best high school publications of the state.

The members of The Umpqua staff are deserving of much credit for their success in publishing a book of such distinctive quality as the one which is today being distributed. Those who were in direct charge of the publication were Hertha Kollbagen, editor; Thelma Olmstead, Morrill Ritter, Dorothy Geddes, Helen Berg, associate editors; Donald Ferguson, athletic editor; Elva Wescott, art editor; Helen Falbe, humor editor; Bernard Young, Fred Bellows, business managers,
