FORD CAR REACHES GOVERNMENT CAMP

PORTLAND, Ore., May 25.—Plowing and smashing its way through the smaller drifts and going over the tops of the deep ones, a Ford Touring car, Ruckstell equipped reached Government Camp, on the south side of Mt. Hood, on Saturday, May 24th, the first automobile to reach there this Spring. The car was driven by H. R. Hopkins, Assistant Manager of the Francis Motor Car Company, Portland Ford dealer, reaching the snow line at 6:00. From that time until 4:45 p. m. it was a continual battle of a man-made machine and man-made implements in the form of shovels, against the deep, wet snow. The plowing hit the snow, transmitting its power through the Ruckstell axle, and aided by the shovels and the good wishes of the members of the party, bucked through the last drift at 4:30. The tired shovellers climbed into the car and the 500 foot run to Government Camp Hotel was made over a cleared road, with the cut-out open, the horn blowing, and the entire party in cheers.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Reese, caretakers of the hotel officially greeted them as the first auto party to arrive in 1925. Of course the trip would be incomplete without a visit to the pet bear. Bruin regarded the party with a suspicious eye and could hardly be convinced that a Ford car really had come through the drifts. It had been a long time since his rest had been disturbed by a motor car. Sufficient time was spent at the hotel to view Mt. Hood, which from this point can hardly be recognized as the mountain so familiar in pictures.

WOULD EXPEL EVERY ALIEN PROVING SELF UNWORTHY

(Associated Press Local Wire.) WEST BADEN, Ind., June 3.—Expulsion of every alien who proves unworthy of American citizenship was advocated by Oswald Ryan of Anderson, Ind., in an address today before the biennial council of the general federation women's clubs here. "We insist upon years of education to fit our sons and daughters for American citizenship and life although they are reared in the atmosphere of American homes and traditions," Mr. Ryan declared. "Is it then unreasonable to require those who are brought up in an atmosphere of alien civilization to be trained in American purposes and ideals before being accepted as trustees of American institutions?"

SHEPHERD'S ATTORNEY IMPUGNS OLSON'S MOTIVE.

(Associated Press Local Wire.) CHICAGO, June 3.—An attack on Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal Court by his instigation of the investigation of the death of William M. McClintock was made today by William Scott Stewart, chief of counsel for William D. Shepherd, charged with McClintock's murder. In questioning the motives of the defense was that "certain witnesses have very bad motives." "We claim," the defense lawyer said, "that Judge Olson is not on the square and that he is vindictive and vicious and behind the prosecution." Stewart said the defense intended to show that Judge Olson wanted the guardianship of "Billy" McClintock and that he said that if he got it he "would not have to bother with politicians any more or the practice of law." He also said that he had a witness to testify that Judge Olson had made a deal with the heirs "to get a part of the estate for the widow of Dr. Oscar Olson, who was the brother of the judge."

FOREIGNERS LISTEN IN PEKING PALACE TO THE LIVING BUDDHA

PEKING, June 3.—Nearly 1,000 foreigners and Chinese gathered in the inner court of the Ying Tai palace in Peking on the afternoon of Easter Sunday to witness a reception offered to the Panchan Lama by the united religious bodies of China. The Ying Tai palace which was the scene of the imprisonment and death of the Emperor Kuang Hsu and later the prison of the ex-president Tao Kuo, is now the home of the Panchan Lama, the Living Buddha and spiritual ruler of Tibet, who has been for some weeks the guest of the Chinese government.

The spectators were grouped around a raised platform in the head of which stood a chair in yellow silk and in which, a few minutes after the appointed hour, the Living Buddha took his seat. This was the signal for the Lama monks who occupied places on the platform to begin a Buddhist chant, the deep, organ-like tones of which were heard to great advantage in the open air. Dr. Gilbert Reid, organizer of the reception, made a short address of welcome in which he emphasized the universal nature of the meeting, in which all Chinese sects and representatives of the missionary bodies and the Russian Orthodox church were taking part. He expressed the hope that this might be the first of many such meetings which would enable the churches to unite in their effort to attain the object which all had in view, namely the betterment of the world.

A copy of this speech, in Tibetan, was then handed to the Panchan Lama, who spoke briefly in reply. He expressed approval of the ideals which had brought this meeting together and in a short resume of the main principles of Buddhism, pointed out how compatible its tenets were with those of all other accepted faiths. Translations of his words in Chinese, English and Mongolian were read after which the choir sang a selection from Stalder's "Circumcision." The proceedings closed with a short speech by an old Chinese scholar who expressed the hope that men of all creeds and nations would unite in giving China the spiritual and material aid which she stood so much in need. Anthems were sung by choir of the Russian Orthodox church and the Chinese Christian church.

FARM POINTERS.

The corn earworm which does considerable damage to the corn crop in Oregon each year may be controlled by careful attention to the soil, say experiment station specialists. The insect may be exterminated by fall and winter plowing and early planting of the corn crop. Keeping the crop free from weeds and grass during the growing season not only increased the yield, but also destroys the hiding places of the moths.

Wilt of watermelons in Oregon is caused by a fungus that attacks the roots, say the experiment station authorities. The fungus lives in the soil from year to year and spreads rapidly by water drainage, or feet of stock, or in stable manure. To combat this fungus growth, watermelons are planted in new ground each year. The period that elapses before the land can be considered free from infection, is set at 19 to 12 years. Some varieties of melons are resistant to the wilt.

The most serious insect enemies of cereal crops, such as the Hessian fly, chinch bug, and white grub, will not be controlled in Oregon until some successful community action can be secured, say experiment station authorities. Fall plowing is the most universally beneficial practice for control of the insect pests. Planting corn on freshly broken sod is almost certain to expose the crop to the ravage of the cutworms, wireworms, and white grubs.

Hog mange, contagious skin disease, is most effectively controlled in Oregon by dipping the animal in a medicated liquid, say the experiment station authorities. Numerous different solutions may be used but the natural crude oil that has not been subjected to any manufacturing process is probably the best dip. Effectiveness may be increased by adding one quart of kerosene to five gallons of crude oil. The cabbage root maggot, which is so prevalent in Oregon, especially in the Willamette valley, is destroyed by a corrosive sublimate treatment, says Don C. Mote, entomologist of the experiment station at Corvallis. The solution is composed of 1 ounce of corrosive sublimate mixed with 12 gallons of water. An application of 75 times is then sprinkled around the plant which tends to keep the maggots away. Three treatments are generally required.

Mineral is part of the hog's ration essential to proper development of the animal, says H. A. Lindgren of the Oregon station. Many satisfactory mineral mixtures may be used. The following is one that can be mixed at home: Charcoal 75 pounds, raw rock phosphate 25 pounds, salt 6 pounds, ground limestone 6 pounds, flowers of sulfur 3 pounds, pulverized coppers 1 pound, and glauber salt 6 pounds.

Killing the tent caterpillar, so destructive to the foliage of trees in Oregon, is best done the latter part of May, says the experiment station. As the caterpillar larvae live in tent-like webs in crotches of tree trunks or branches, they are difficult to control with ordinary dosages of spray, but by using a flaming torch quickly over the web the insects will be burned. The flame is not held long enough to damage the trees. The work is done at night when all of the insects are in the nest.

For late planting for hot or poultry feed, the experiment station finds Japanese or silver hull buckwheat offers most promise. It is sowed like grain on a well prepared seed bed any time from the middle of May to the end of June. Forty-five pounds of seed are used per acre. It usually keeps growing as long as the moisture lasts, or until frost stops it. It is especially valuable for poultry feed and for sale to millers.

Land for kale should be well manured and after plowing must be kept clean of weeds until planting time, which is usually after a favorable rain in June. Kale plants should be set deep to make them grow close to the ground and avoid excessively tall stalks in the field. The experiment station finds that tall stalks are more susceptible to winter injury.

BULLET PREVENTS GROCERY ROBBERY AT KLAMATH FALLS

(Associated Press Local Wire.) KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., June 3.—Robert J. Tatro, itinerant laborer about whom little is known, was shot and perhaps fatally injured shortly after 2 o'clock this morning when breaking into a room occupied by Thomas Gurnee, watchman for the B. & N. Lewis grocery here. Gurnee heard Tatro and an accomplice break into a back room of the grocery. Knowing that entrance to the store from the back room was barred, he did nothing. A moment later Tatro's head appeared at Gurnee's window, a street light providing full illumination. Tatro wrenched off the screen, pried up the window and then let it drop. When it dropped, Gurnee fired, the bullet fracturing Tatro's skull. Tatro is said to have come here from Seattle. He had been arrested here for drunkenness.
