AMERICAN CONSUL BEATEN IN ITALY

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Ambassador Fletcher at Rome advised the state department today that Vice-Consul Franklin C. Gowen at Leghorn, Italy, had been attacked by a member of a fascisti delegation on May 24, "without apparent reason", being twice struck over the head and stunned.

The information came in response to inquiries directed to the ambassador by the state department. The ambassador said he had made appropriate representations to the foreign office and Premier Mussolini had ordered a thorough investigation.

The attack was made during an assembly of several thousand fascisti from various parts of Italy.

SERVANTS OF NOBILITY ENTER SUIT FOR WAGES

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

ROME, June 5.—A ruling king, a former empress and more than a score princes and princesses of royal and noble houses of Europe have been called as witnesses before the praetor of Viareggio in a lawsuit brought by 14 pensioned employes of the late Duke Robert of Parma.

The employes, granted life-long continuation of their salaries by the will of the duke, who died in 1907, were paid until March 1918 when the disastrous financial consequences of the World War caused the duke's heirs to stop payments. Now the pensioners, most of them too old to work, are appealing to the paetor to force the heirs to pay arrears.

Among the witnesses who have been called are King Boris of Bulgaria; former empress Zita of Austria; the brothers of the Bulgarian king; the daughters of the late princess of Bourbon; Louisa, first wife of former King Ferdinand, and the princes and princesses descendents o the marriages of Duke Robert of Parma first with Princess Maria Pia of the Two Sicilies and then with Princess Maria Antonia of Braganza.

AMERICAN AIDES OF AMUNDSEN TO HEAD RELIEF DASH

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

OLSO, Norway, June 6.—Captain Amundsen's auxiliary committee in New York is to be asked to take charge, in cooperation with Donald B. MacMillan's all-American expedition, of the work of reconnoitering west Greenland for traces of members of Amundsen's Polar flying party. This decision was reached at a meeting here of air chiefs and Arctic experts, including Captain Otto Sverdrup, Major Gunnar Isachen and the Danish naval captain, Gottfried Hansen, who was Amundsen's mate when he sailed through the northwest passage and who laid depots for Amundsen at Cape Columbia and other places in west Greenland.

The French explorer, Dr. Gene Charcot, will be asked to search the territory around east Greenland while the Norwegian expedition, abroad the steamer Ingertre, will patrol around Spitzbergen, Amundsen's starting point.

The Ingertre was due to leave the naval station at Horten some time today bearing two airplanes in charge of a naval flying corps. Two American journalists and an American motion picture man are accompanying the party. The latest weather reports say Spitzbergen is enveloped in fog.

RUPTURE EXPERT HERE

E. H. Seeley, of Chicago, and Philadelphia, the noted truss expert, will personally be at the Umpqua Hotel, and will remain in Roseburg Monday only, June 8. Mr. Seeley says: "The Spermatic Shield will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Being a vast advancement over all former methods—exemplifying instantaneous effects immediately appreciable and withstanding any strain or position no matter the size or location. Large or difficult cases, or incisional ruptures (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injections, medical treatments or prescriptions. Warning—All cases should be cautioned against the use of any elastic or web truss with understraps, as same rest where the lump is and not where the opening is, producing complications necessitating surgical operations. Mr. Seeley has documents from the United States government, Washington, D. C., for inspection. He will be glad to demonstrate without charge or fit them if desired. Business demands prevent stopping at any other place in this section.

WINCHESTER BAY COMPANY OPERATING ELECTRICAL PLANT FOR REEDSPORT

At 1 o'clock Tuesday the West Coast Power Company's crew cut over its transmission lines and connected up with the steam turbine of the Winchester Bay Lumber Company's local plant, says the Port Umpqua Courier. Reedsport and tributary country served by the West Coast Power Company now is furnished with "juice" generated at the Winchester Bay Lumber Company's plant, which is operated by steam.

This change, arrangements for which were completed Monday afternoon, should result in a more steady electric "juice."

The cut-over was made without a hitch and service was given from the first moment after the switch was set. The cut over was made during the noon hour and the switch set at 1 o'clock.

It is understood that the West Coast Power Company has entered into a three-year contract with the Winchester Bay Lumber Company for the electric service.

The two oil burning Diesel engines in the local plant will be kept intact to be ready for any emergency, in the event the Mill plant fails to deliver.

The mill plant within a short time is to deliver a maximum of approximately 1500 horsepower.

The West Coast Power Company now is ready to furnish power to Gardiner, East Gardiner and points between this city and the Siuslaw valley. Preliminary work on the high tension line now is underway at Gardiner. The Siuslaw cities have been linked up with connecting lines, now being served by the Florence plant of the West Coast Company. When the high tension line between Reedsport and Siuslaw points is completed, it is planned to start work at once, all will be served from the Reedsport distributing plant.

Wait for June clearance and remodeling sale next week. Marksbury Co.

HELPED THROUGH CHANGE OF LIFE

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during this Critical Time

Baltimore, Md.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me through the Change of Life and for a broken-down system. I had been complaining a long time and dragging along had tried other medicines which did not help me much. I read in the newspapers of the Vegetable Compound and after taking a bottle I felt better. I did not stop with one bottle, but took it through the whole critical time and am now practically a well woman. I have two daughters whose health was very bad before they married and I was worried about them. I got the Vegetable Compound for them and it helped them, and after they married it also helped them in bearing their babies. This is a great and good medicine for all complaints of women, and I recommend it to all."—Mrs. L. GINGRICH, 1375 N. Gilmor St., Baltimore, Maryland.

The Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for women of middle age. Let it relieve you of nervousness, that feeling of strain and those annoying hot flashes so common at this time.

Theatres

Liberty Theatre

The following paragraphs were taken from a letter recently received by Manager Marks of the Liberty theatre, from "Ima Kidder," national secretary of the New Prison Reform League, relative to the punishment which should be meted out to anyone who would show the extremely funny picture "Charley's Aunt," which will show at the Liberty theatre here for four days, and cause anyone to laugh their heads off.

"Scientific tests have demonstrated that any human being who has had the privilege of seeing that remarkable new comedy feature entitled "Charley's Aunt" has been seized with uncontrollable fits of riotous laughter. The fortunate few who have seen this picture twice have been affected to the point of hysteria. It is not logical to assume that if a person saw "Charley's Aunt" three or more times he might laugh his head off?

"That, kind friend, is the plan we have in mind as a substitute for legal punishment as now practiced. Before writing your political friends book this extraordinary attraction for an extended run at your theatre and you will readily see why the show world calls it the funniest farce in forty years."

Antlers Theatre

The fastest sight-seeing tour on record occurs in Reginald Denny's latest Universal-Jewel feature, "I'll Show You the Town," coming to the Antlers theatre, commencing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

With just thirty minutes in which to show a wealthy widow the sights of the town, Denny accomplishes the unusual feat in less than a quarter of an hour. The customary rubber-neck-wagon or Rolls Royce, was discarded by the star who rejoiced in the opportunity to ride his old hobby-horse—his airplane. Cissy Fitzgerald, who plays one of the character leads in the production, was given the thrill of her life as Denny's companion in a hurried flight over a metropolitan city.

Majestic Theatre

An innocent man condemned to hang!

Accused of being the slayer of a notorious cattle rustler, Frank Douglas, wealthy Arizona rancher, is cast in the shadows of the hangman's noose and is saved from the shameful death of a culprit only through the bravery and heroism of his only son Jack.

This is the central situation around which revolves the stirring situations in "Riddin' Thunder," the Blue Streak Western featuring Jack Hoxie and coming to the Majestic theatre next Sunday. The dramatic situation is further heightened by reason of the love of Jean Croft, the slain man's daughter, for the son of the condemned man.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madisen, entertaining a few friends, reads from her grandmother's quaint, modest diary. The flapper friends are thunderstruck at its quaintness and suppressed desires. When the girls leave, Cleo plans her elopment with Paul Armstrong, U. S. A., a boyhood sweetheart. None the less, she indulges in a petting party with Chick Adams that evening. Chick is wealthy and Cleo's parents wish her to marry him; so does Chick. Paul's parents, also social climbers who have lost their money, wish Paul to marry Connie Terhune, very rich and in love with Paul. Despite these desires of the parents and Cleo's wonderings as to whether she really does love Paul, the two are married. Almost immediately Cleo begins to learn that marriage is not altogether a path of roses. However, the parents are reconciled to the marriage and the young couple depart for the army post, to which Paul is assigned. On the train Cleo has an allegorical dream which indicates the problems she will have to face. When the newlyweds arrive at the post, Paul is assigned to duty at once and leaves Cleo, who knows nothing of housekeeping, to shift for herself during the day. Johnson, a "striker" detailed to Paul's quarters, helps out enormously so Cleo is able to serve tea when Col. Beldon, the commanding officer, comes to pay his respects.

Rita Thorndike, supposed inamoretta of Col. Beldon, calls. Cleo likes her.

The colonel is not clever enough to ensnare Cleo.

Paul warns Cleo about the colonel and Rita.

This precipitates a quarrel.

And Cleo loses her temper, justly so.

THE STORM BREAKS.

Paul seemed determined that we should quarrel, and so he returned to his attack on my frock. "It certainly seems to me, Cleo, that you have enough clothes without buying another expensive evening dress like the one you have on. You knew you were married to a poor man. I consider that gown altogether too splendid for a young lieutenant's wife unless she has an income of her own."

"Why didn't you marry Connie Terhune and be done with it? You have already begun to question my expenditures, have you," I blurted out. I couldn't keep my anger in any longer. Here I had been alone all day trying to be nice to his rotten old Colonel and he came home to find fault with me about being polite to him and in the next breath intimating that I should have accepted a case of liquor from him. Such a contradiction was certainly unbearable. Now he was finding fault with my clothes. I was wild.

"This dress was paid for by my father and was one of the gowns in my trousseau or rather I had it put on Dad's monthly bill. You don't have to pay for it. If we were not married and I came down to greet you in a frock of this kind, your face would have lighted up with great admiration and you would have told me how beautiful you thought it was. But how different it is now.

"Already you are looking at my clothes from the single point of view, 'how much did they cost?'

You asked me this morning if I knew how to butter my bread and you did it in a very nasty manner. You left me with that remark instead of a kiss. All day I suffered under it.

"Tonight, you have come home and you have said nothing to me that would in any way make me think you were glad to see me. I'm glad I told you this morning that I was not sure that I knew how to butter my bread, and further I'm going to tell you tonight that I am sure now that I did not know enough to do so. If I had, I would have married Chick Adams and not only would I have had butter, but sugar also. Chick told me many times that he was ready to give me anything in the world."

"Damn Chick Adams,' exploded Paul.

"Perhaps you would like to damn him, but as for me, I wish he were here this minute. I would tell him how sorry I was that I had thought that what a man calls love was worth all the good things that he could give me."

Paul strode out through the door in front of me and it was in this frame of mind that we both left for the dinner. I was on the very verge of tears. The only things that kept me from it was my pride. I was determined that no one should know of my utter disappointment and beside I was so lonely and lonesome. I missed the old crowd, but I knew I shouldn't think of them, while my nerves were all in a fuzzle. My whole soul revolted against this condition which people call marriage.

It seemed to have changed the whole viewpoint of my husband. He had never mentioned to me anything about money before and now his whole mind was taken up with it.

"No, woman," I said to myself, "should marry a man she loves, for nothing kills love as quickly as marriage. It really would have been better to have let Connie marry Paul." At this thought, however, the tears nearly did spill over my eyelids. I wondered to myself if Paul had really forgotten what he had said to me as he walked over the threshhold that morning. Did he not remember that he had said, "Girl, we'll be very happy here?"

Again my dream came up before me. How had we both managed to get in our little house without cutting off those terrible tentacles of Selfishness, Thoughtlessness and Misunderstanding—these terrors seemed to be clutching me with iron grip and pulling me out, out again beyond all the ideals of my life and happiness with Paul, that I had planned.

I began to think it would have been better perhaps if Paul and I had not married at all. Then at least we would have had some happiness and although we would have always hungered in our heart of hearts for the ideal existence which we each had supposed marriage to be, yet we never would have known then, that it was the land-of-the-impossible that we had escaped.

It was a good thing that Rita Thorndike lived so near for Paul, who had always kept his unhappiness to himself and shown an unbroken front of smiles to the world, instantly became a monument of suavity the moment we reached her door. We found her waiting on the porch. She looked at us quickly. She seemed to feel, to have an intuition that some one might have said something about her to Paul which would have changed my opinion of her in the short time since she had left my house.

"Isn't she lovely, Paul?" I said. "Aren't you glad that you are going to have two such beautiful women to take to the Colonel's dinner?"

"I am not sure that I am going to sit at the Colonel's table," said Mrs. Thorndike.

"So that is the reason the Colonel frowned when I insisted upon coming with Rita Thorndike," I said to myself. "Now the old reprobate will have to have Mrs. Thorndike as his table and I am going to make him let her sit beside Paul. It will be good for both their souls."
